Information on asylum removals is published quarterly. The next publication will cover the third quarter (July to September) of 2003 and will be available from 27 November 2002 on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals lost their appeals to the adjudicator against the refusal of political asylum in the last three years for which figures are available. [137061]

Beverley Hughes: The latest available data is given in the following tables. The tables show the outcomes of appeals determined by adjudicators of the Immigration Appellate Authority (IAA), further appeals to the tribunal (including those brought by the Secretary of State), and applications for judicial review in the last three years. Only a proportion of those that are refused asylum lodge appeals, and the majority of appeals are dismissed.

Cases are determined according to their individual merits. The figures relate to numbers of cases; appeals determined by the IAA may relate to initial decisions made in previous years, and appeals determined by the IAT may relate to cases determined at the IAA made in previous years.

Prisoner Transfers

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many vehicles he has had available on average on each day in the last three months for the transfer of prisoners (a) between prisons and (b) between court and prison; and how many vehicles are operated by the private sector; [137482]

(2) how many prisoners on average were transferred each day between prisons and between court and prison in the last three months. [137483]

Paul Goggins: There were around 1,600 prisoner movements between courts and prisons and around 300 prisoners transferred between prisons by private sector contractors on average, each day, in the last three months. No central record is kept of prisoners transferred by the Prison Service.

On average, 760 vehicles were available each day in the last three months for the transfer of prisoners, 706 of which were operated by private sector contractors. 54 vehicles are owned by and are available to the Prison Service.

Prison Reception Areas

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those of Her Majesty's Prisons that have no covered reception area for visitors. [138152]

Paul Goggins: The procedures for managing visitors awaiting entry to a prison varies at each establishment and is not recorded centrally.

The provision of a covered area immediately outside the gates is often dependent on the structural design of the prison building. However, around 109 establishments provide a visitors' centre which offers visitors both shelter and, in most cases, support services that are available before and immediately after the visit is due to take place.

Many of those who do not have a centre provide basic facilities such as a waiting area. Recent enquiries suggest that around 10 prisons appear to have no current plans for a visitors' centre and we are exploring with them their intentions in terms of assisting visitors.

Prison Suicides

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are being introduced to reduce the suicide rate in prisons apart from the installation of safe cells. [138369]

Paul Goggins: The Prison Service is in the final year of a three-year programme to develop policies and practices to reduce prisoner suicide in prisons. Over the next few months the outcome of this programme will be reviewed taking into account pilot project evaluations and emerging research findings. The next steps and approaches will be resolved in consultation with partner agencies such as the Youth Justice Board and outside organisations such as Samaritans.

As part of this close partnership with other agencies and organisations, there has been a targeting of efforts where the risks are highest. A particular focus, and an investment of over £21 million over the three year programme, has been on physical improvements at six pilot sites. These improvements have been in reception, first night and induction areas, installing more first night centres, and by having more crisis suites and gated cells that enable staff to watch at-risk prisoners closely.

Dedicated drug detoxification units and mental health in-reach support have also been established, along with a series of inter-related projects to develop improved suicide prevention and self-harm management policies, concentrating on pre-reception, reception and induction arrangements; inter-agency information exchange; prisoner care and peer support, and learning from investigations into deaths in custody.

Prison Service Suicide Prevention Co-ordinators have been trained and are now operating in the majority of prisons. Additionally, the Samaritans are recruiting and training more prisoner peer supporters (known as Listeners) in high-risk establishments. Listeners are prisoner volunteers who are selected, trained and supported by Samaritans to offer confidential support to their fellow prisoners who may be at risk of suicide, otherwise in crisis, or simply in need of someone to talk to. 1,241 new Listeners were recruited between 1 October 2001 and 31 March 2003 with further recruitment and training continuing. The scheme's objectives are to assist in preventing suicide, reducing self-harm and to help alleviate the feelings of those in distress.

Race Equality

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000 in promoting race equality; and what criteria he applied in carrying out the assessment. [137059]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Government work closely with the Commission for Racial Equality, (CRE) which has statutory responsibility for enforcing the duty to promote race equality under the Race Relations Act 1976 (as amended by the Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000).

The CRE commissioned Schneider-Ross, a firm of diversity consultants to evaluate the response of public authorities to the statutory duty to promote race equality. The research had two main elements, quantitative and qualitative, covering two core stages. The first of these was a questionnaire based survey of 3,338 public authorities and educational institutions, using two questionnaires designed to address the different elements of the general and specific duties that apply to the two broad categories. The second was an analysis of a random sample of 143 race equality schemes and policies from the main sectors covered by the duty, assessed against the recommendations of CRE Code of Practice and CRE guidance materials.

The Schneider-Ross report found that overall local government was the highest achieving sector. Around a third of local authorities were on track; a third had good foundations to respond well to the duty to promote, and, a third needed to carry out more work in order to comply. The criminal justice service was strong, especially in the police and probation services. The weakest sector was schools.

The Home Office has initiated a Race Relations (Amendment) Act Strategic Sectoral Audit.

The audit is a sector by sector analysis of whether the key ingredients for success are present or not in each sector. The work on mapping the landscape of current sector activity builds on the findings of the Schneider-Ross survey. We are working closely with the CRE to take this forward quickly so that necessary support and attention can be made available to those public bodies who need it.

Hendon Police College (Racism)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to deal with the issue of racism at the Peel Centre Police College, Hendon; and if he will make a statement. [136824]

Ms Blears: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that the Department of Professional Standards and senior managers at Hendon Training College have already taken action on recently reported cases. One student at Hendon has resigned as a result of making racist comments; two fellow students have been suspended as a result of failing to report the above incident; one student has resigned as a result of making a sexist comment.

The Commissioner has recently established a working group to bring together work already undertaken by the Metropolitan Police Service in relation to race and diversity. Part of this work includes a review of Hendon Training School.

Rape

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions for rape involving the use of drugs there were in (a) 2001, (b) 2002 and (c) the first half of 2003. [129669]

Paul Goggins: The statistics collected centrally do not enable convictions for rape involving the use of drugs to be identified.

Staff Training (Non-departmental Public Bodies)

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether it is compulsory for his Department's staff to undertake training on the Home Office/non-departmental public body relationship as soon as they begin dealing with NDPBs. [138244]

Fiona Mactaggart: For each Non Departmental Public Body (NDPB), there is a corresponding Sponsor Team who are the first point of contact in the Home Office, and are responsible for managing the relationship. These Sponsor Teams are collectively supported by an Advisory Team, offering specialist knowledge, and a network of contacts across the Home Office and in other Government Departments.

Individual Home Office members of staff agree personal development and training plans annually with their managers. This would be undertaken immediately they join a Sponsor Team or the Central Advisory Team. In either of these teams training is not mandatory but is tailored to the individuals according to theirs and the Department's need.

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what circumstances training is given to his Department's staff who deal with non-departmental public bodies. [138245]

Fiona Mactaggart: For each Non Departmental Public Body (NDPB), there is a corresponding Sponsor Team who are the first point of contact in the Home Office, and are responsible for managing the relationship. These Sponsor Teams are collectively supported by an Advisory Team, offering specialist knowledge, and a network of contacts across the Home Office and in Other Government Departments.

Street Crime Initiative

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what aspects of the Street Crime Initiative he intends to implement in all areas. [138367]

Ms Blears: Police forces not involved in the Street Crime Initiative will benefit from best practice circulated by the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Home Office's Police Standards Unit, including a CD Rom, Tactical Options from the Street Crime Initiative, which has been distributed to all police forces. Lessons are also being learnt from the Street Crime Initiative relating to the handling of street crime cases through the Criminal Justice System by the police, Crown Prosecution Service and the courts. These lessons, about getting the case right from the start, providing better support for victims and witnesses, and managing cases robustly in court, are being applied more widely as part of the work on bringing more offences to justice and improving public confidence in the criminal justice system.

Terrorism Act 2000

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for authorisations under section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000 received in the last three years have been (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful. [138506]

Mr. Blunkett: Home Office records show that since the Terrorism Act came into force on 19 February 2001, 678 stop and search authorisations under section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2001 have been confirmed. Of these there have been two instances where the powers have not been confirmed by the Secretary of State.

Each authorisation is given full consideration. They are confirmed only if the Secretary of State is satisfied that their use is necessary to prevent acts of terrorism as set against the background of the current threat level.

Work-related Stress

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of work-related stress have been reported in his Department in each of the last three years; how much compensation has been paid to employees; how many work days have been lost due to work-related stress; and at what cost; what procedures have been put in place to reduce work-related stress, and at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [136841]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information on sickness absence and compensation payments due to 'work-related' stress are not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department does, however, monitor factors relating to workplace stress including workload and working conditions through its staff surveys. The Department has taken action to address some of the main identified factors, including filling vacancies, recognition of good performance and improving technology. The Home Office is committed to supporting staff in achieving a balance between their work and home responsibilities and has a range of flexible working patterns to help staff achieve this.

A welfare service is available and offers personal support for staff suffering from any form of stress. In addition, stress awareness courses are available and information on how to recognise stress and suggested coping strategies, is accessible via the Home Office Intranet. The aim of these resources is to help staff recognise the early signs of stress and take appropriate action.

The Department is aware of its legal obligation to provide a safe working environment for employees and is committed to meeting targets for reducing the number of working days lost generally due to work related injuries and illness arising from the government's Revitalising Health and Safety initiative.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Cement Kilns

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what controls exist over the (a) level and (b) toxicity of emissions from cement kilns used for co-incineration; what chemical analysis of the (i) product and (ii) dust generated is carried out; and how these controls compare in respect of maximum emission levels with standard incinerators. [138575]

Mr. Morley: Cement kilns are regulated by the Environment Agency under the Pollution Prevention and Control (England and Wales) Regulations 2000 (the PPC Regulations). The PPC Regulations control industrial pollution through a system of permits, and require that operators use the best available techniques ("BAT") to control pollution from their activities. In determining applications for PPC permits, the Environment Agency considers the level and toxicity of emissions and sets permit conditions to ensure a high level of protection to the environment (inclusive of human health) as a whole.

The analysis of the final cement product is outside the remit of the Environment Agency. Dust generated from the process is collected in abatement equipment and then discarded from the process. Such material is classified as a waste and its generation and subsequent management are regulated under PPC at the installation, and the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994 once the dust is discarded from the installation. Under certain circumstances the alkalinity levels in this type of waste may be sufficient for it to be given the technical designation of "hazardous" waste. The analysis required would depend on whether the material is consigned for recovery, landfill or any other treatment for disposal.

The maximum emission levels specified for installations manufacturing cement or incinerating waste are based on what the Environment Agency considers to be BAT for each individual installation, but also take into consideration local factors and other relevant statutory requirements. As the technologies for cement manufacture and waste incineration are different, the maximum emission limits for the principal emissions (oxides of nitrogen, sulphur dioxide, particulates etc.) are not directly comparable.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what controls exist over the nature of fuels used in cement kilns where co-incineration takes place. [138576]

Mr. Morley: Cement kilns that co-incinerate waste are regulated by the Environment Agency under the Pollution Prevention and Control (England and Wales) Regulations 2000 ("the PPC Regulations"). The operator is required to comply with the 1989 Municipal Waste Incineration Directives (89/429/EEC and 89/369/EEC), the 1994 Hazardous Waste Incineration Directive (94/67/EC) and from 28 December 2005 the Waste incineration Directive (2000/76/EC).

The Environment Agency is the regulator for such cement kilns. Permits issued under the PPC Regulations contain permit conditions which control the type and nature of the fuel to be used, and establish the operating conditions under which that fuel could be used.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the types of (a) fuels and (b) raw materials used since 1 January in the production of cement at Rugby Cement Works, Rugby. [138579]

Mr. Morley: Since 1 January 2003 to date the cement works in Rugby has used as fuel: coal, fuel oil (for site vehicles) and gas oil (as start up fuel); and as raw materials: chalk, clay, grinding aids and air entrainers, gypsum, iron oxide source, limestone filler, lubricating oils and other maintenance fluids and pulverised fuel ash.

Flooding (Medmenham and Marlow)

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to her answer of 17 September 2003, Official Report, columns 776–77W, on flooding, what progress has been made with regard to pre-feasibility studies to identify options for the alleviation of flooding in Medmenham and Marlow. [138467]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 13 November 2003]: I understand that the Environment Agency's study of options for reducing flood risk in Medmenham and related areas will be concluded by the end of November. The agency is planning to present the findings to local flood action groups and councils in December and January. I also understand that a report on the agency's study of options for Firview Close, Marlow is expected by the end of November. In both cases the conclusion of studies is a month later than expected previously because the agency's consultants have been looking at further possible options.

I understand that the agency's consultants have completed a pre-feasibility investigation into options for the Pound Lane area, Marlow, and that the indications are that a scheme to construct a bund at the rear of Pound Lane to reduce the impact of overland flooding may be justifiable. Further investigations into groundwater problems would be required at feasibility stage.

GM Crops

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what recent meetings she has had with her EU counterparts at which plans to change the procedure for approval of GM (a) foods and (b) seeds within the EU were discussed; [138218]

(2) what recent meetings she has had with her EU counterparts to discuss regulation of GM crops; and if she will make a statement. [138219]

Mr. Morley: Ministers from the Department have regular discussions with their EU counterparts on issues relating to genetically modified crops, seeds and foods. The issue has, in particular, featured on the agenda for several recent meetings of Councils of Agriculture and Environment Ministers.

For instance, at the Environment Council in July 2003 EU Ministers agreed to two new EC Regulations. One Regulation elaborates and extends existing rules on traceability and labelling of any GM product. The other Regulation sets up a more centralised and specific regime for the authorisation and labelling of GM food and animal feed, focused on the new European Food Safety Authority (EFSA). It introduces, for the first time, specific rules on GM animal feed and requires the safety aspects of any GMO intended for use in both foods and feed to be considered together.

At a meeting of the Agriculture Council in September 2003 there was a discussion on the European Commission's guidelines on the co-existence of GM and non-GM crops. Final EU decisions on pending applications for consent to grow GM crops are not expected until next year.

EU discussions on the setting of thresholds for adventitious presence of approved GMOs in non-GM seeds are currently being conducted at official level.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the effects she estimates the adoption of genetically modified crops in the UK would have on (a) the cost of farming and (b) profits for farmers. [138807]

Mr. Morley: As part of the GM dialogue process the Government have sponsored the Strategy Unit to carry out a study of the costs and benefits of GM crops, They published their report on 11 July. Comments were invited on the report and a summary of these will be published later this year.

The main conclusions of the report were that existing GM crops could offer some cost and convenience advantages to UK farmers. However, any economic benefit to the UK is likely to be limited in the short term as only a narrow range of existing crops are currently suited to UK conditions and weak consumer demand is likely to limit take-up. Looking to the longer term, future developments in GM crops have the potential to offer more wide ranging benefits to farmers and consumers.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent evidence there is on the impact of the effect of herbicide use on GM maize, with particular reference to levels of herbicide use; and what assessment has been made of that evidence. [139019]

Mr. Morley: The recently published results of the farm-scale evaluations represent the largest study ever made of the impact of herbicide use on GM maize. A copy of the results have been placed in the Library.

The results of the farm-scale evaluations, and the results of other published work, are currently being considered by the Government's statutory advisers on GM crop releases—The Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment (ACRE). Their advice is expected in December or January.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has held with the Royal Society in respect of herbicide regimes used within the farm-scale evaluations. [139020]

Mr. Morley: Ministers from the Department have held no discussions with the Royal Society regarding herbicide regimes in the farm-scale evaluations.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether decisions will be made by her Department in respect of applications to grow GM crops in the UK before the final results of the farm scale trials are published. [139154]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 November 2003]: The final results for three of the four GM crops tested in the farm scale evaluations (beet, forage maize and spring-sown oilseed rape) were published in October 2003. The results for the other GM crop (autumn-sown oilseed rape) will be published next year. Our statutory expert advisers on GMO releases—the Advisory Committee on Release into the Environment (ACRE)—are considering the results for the first three crops and we expect their advice in December or January.

Decisions on whether or not any particular GM crop should be authorised for commercial use in the EU are subject to collective agreement by all EU member states. It is not possible to say precisely when these EU decisions will be taken, but we do not expect any decisions on current applications to cultivate GM crops until well into next year.

There are currently 21 applications for proposed commercial GM products being processed across the EU, 12 of which include cultivation of GM crops (no such application has been made in the UK). Of the 12 applications for cultivation, 10 have not yet completed their initial assessment by the member states in which the applications were made; the other two have received favourable initial assessments, and have been forwarded for scrutiny and comment to the European Commission and all other member states. Neither is a GM crop involved in the farm scale evaluations and in both cases the UK has objected to the applications on the grounds that the applicants have not yet supplied sufficient information for us to make an adequate risk assessment of the likely effects of the GM crops in question on the environment.

The GM forage maize in the farm scale evaluation trials (Bayer T25) already has a consent under EU GM safety legislation for commercial cultivation throughout Europe. This was granted in 1998. Based on the FSE results, the UK will reach a view on whether this consent should be maintained, altered or revoked. Other member states will also need to consider this.

Landfill

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps are being taken to ensure that UK companies are informed of measures required to comply with the European Landfill Directive. [137541]

Mr. Morley: Since the Landfill Directive was agreed by the Council of Ministers in April 1999, the Government have carried out four separate consultation exercises to ensure that all the issues were fully aired. Also, a number of stakeholders groups that include representatives of UK industry, such as the Hazardous Waste Forum and the Landfill Directive Implementation Group, have discussed different aspects of the Directive. For example, the Hazardous Waste Forum is developing an action plan that includes a commitment to a communication strategy to raise awareness of industry to forthcoming legislative changes on hazardous waste.

Currently, two further consultation exercises are being carried out; one dealing with the Directive targets to reduce the amount of biodegradable municipal waste going to landfill and the other covering the implementation of the waste acceptance criteria requirements that were added to the Directive by Council Decision 2003/33 of 13 December 2002.

Marine Consents and Environment Unit

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) which criteria have been established by the Marine Consents and Environment Unit for time periods for the issue of licences; and what percentage of closures have been achieved within the time period in each of the last five years; [138554]

(2) how many licences have been issued by the Marine Consents and Environment Unit in each of the last five years; how many were refused; and what the average time taken was for (a) consultation and (b) approval of the licences. [138556]

Mr. Morley: The Marine Consents and Environment Unit (MCEU) is a joint-departmental unit that was set up in April 2001 by my Department and the Department for Transport. Its role is to administer the marine works consents for which each Department has responsibility under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 (FEPA), the Coast Protection Act 1949, the Telecommunications Act 1984 and certain other local legislation. The unit also processes licence applications under FEPA in waters for which the National Assembly for Wales is the licensing authority.

The unit's published guidance notes and website (http://www.mceu.gov.uk) make clear that a period of at least 10 weeks is normally required to process a straightforward application but that larger schemes (such as offshore windfarms and large port developments) and those in sensitive marine areas may take substantially longer. Much of this time is taken up by the consultation process with a range of outside bodies, which are normally given six weeks to respond.

The numbers of FEPA licences issued by the MCEU in each 12 month period since the unit was established is as follows.

Year (1 April-31 March)	Number of FEPA licences issued (including renewals and variations)
2001–02 (with effect from 1 April)	523
2002–03	522
2003–04 (to 13 November)	360 (a further 101 applications being processed)

Since the MCEU was established 10 FEPA licences have been refused. However, in a number of cases, licences have only been issued where changes or restrictions to the original application have been agreed so as to mitigate adverse environmental impact or interference to other users of the sea.

The average time taken by MCEU to determine a FEPA licence (excluding licence variations) has been 12.5 weeks; 56 per cent. of applications have been processed within 10 weeks rising to 75 per cent. within 14 weeks. Where assessment of an application has taken longer, a licence will often have been processed so as to meet the requested start date for the consent.

Full equivalent data in respect of Coast Protection and Telecommunications Act consents are not readily available. However, 162 such consents have been issued by MCEU since July 2002 with an estimated further 150 consents granted by the unit up to end June 2002.

The unit has recently introduced the facility to make applications on-line and further improvements to streamline the processing of applications—such as electronic consultation—is under consideration.

Parrett Catchment Project

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what fee is paid to the Chairman of the Parrett Catchment project. [138950]

Mr. Morley: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave on 13 February 2003, Official Report, column 884W and 3 July 2003, Official Report, column 117W, in which I explained that the Parrett Catchment Project is an independent stakeholder forum. The Parrett Catchment Project is not required to make any declaration to this Department regarding the appointment or remuneration of its officers. The Parrett Catchment Project is not funded by Defra, and we have no knowledge of any fees paid to the current chairman.

Performance Monitoring

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the performance targets that (a) her Department and (b) its agencies and non-departmental public bodies are required to meet; and if she will specify for each target (i) who sets it and (ii) who monitors achievement against it. [137959]

Alun Michael: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Key performance targets for Defra are agreed as part of the Spending Review and the latest set were published in Spending Review 2002: Public Service Agreements 2003–2006 (Cm 5571). 2.3 Defra's SR2002 Public Service Agreement targets were decided upon following a process of consultation and negotiation involving Ministers, Defra's management board, and all business areas. Final decisions on the selection and number of targets were agreed with HM Treasury. The process observed the need to maintain a degree of continuity between previous Public Service Agreements and departmental priorities.

The Department monitors progress towards achieving all its outstanding Public Service Agreement targets along with HM Treasury and the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit and progress is reported regularly. We provide a full outturn against all of the Department's Public Service Agreement targets in our departmental Report. The most recent was published in May 2003 (Cm 5919). We also provide an outturn of progress in our Autumn Performance Report. The next Report is due to be published in November 2003.

(b) A full list of the Department's NDPBs and Executive Agencies can be found in our departmental Report (Cm 5919).

Where targets have been set for these, details can be found in each Executive Agency's or NDPB's business plan and/or annual report. Details of how to access the websites of the organisations concerned can be found in Annex C of the departmental Report. The Department monitors achievement against appropriate targets, through, amongst other things, meetings between the Secretary of State, the relevant Minister, Permanent Secretary and/or the Chief Executive.

Primates

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many primates were imported for research into each member state of the European Union in 2002. [138878]

Mr. Morley: Our records show that 2,068 primates were imported into the UK from outside the EU for medical/research purposes in 2002.

The Department does not keep records of imports into other EU member states.

Printer Cartridges

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has undertaken of the environmental impact of refilling and reusing printer cartridges. [139146]

Mr. Morley: The Government have not undertaken an assessment on the environmental impact of refilling and reusing printer cartridges. However, industry figures suggest that the UK imports 10 million toner and 30 million inkjet cartridges each year, which produce about 20,000 tonnes of waste at the end of their life, industry estimates that, at present, some 30–40 per cent., equivalent to 6–8,000 tonnes of printer cartridges are diverted from landfill for reuse and recycling.

Waste Incineration

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what reports she has received on the release of dioxins caused by the incineration of waste. [138821]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency collates information on releases of dioxins from waste incinerators and places it in its "Pollution Inventory" which is available through the environment pages of its web site, www.environment-agency.gov.uk.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of the original energy output is typically produced by the incineration of waste. [138822]

Mr. Morley: According to a draft version of "Energy From Waste—A Good Practice Guide" to be published by the Chartered Institute of Wastes Management later this month, a typical energy from waste plant generates electricity from waste with an efficiency of around 22–25 per cent. However if district heating/combined heat and power systems are incorporated into the design of plant energy generation, efficiencies of up to 85 per cent. are possible.

Home Composting

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research she has commissioned on the impact on human health of home composting. [139457]

Mr. Morley: No research has been commissioned by the Department on the impact on human health of home composting. However, Defra is developing a new three-year waste research strategy, in direct response to the Strategy Unit Report 'Waste not, Want not', in which new initiatives examining environmental and health-related impacts of wastes will be considered in consultation with the Environment Agency.

Recent research on behalf of the Environment Agency has suggested that emissions from different forms of home composting systems are, as might be expected, low and difficult to monitor.

Waste (Definition)

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the definition of waste, pursuant to recent judgments by the European Court of Justice. [139459]

Mr. Morley: The definition of waste in force in the United Kingdom is the definition in Article 1(a) of the Waste Framework Directive (as amended). It provides that waste means,

"... any substance or object which the holder discards or intends or is required to discard."

Whether or not a substance is discarded as waste is a matter which must be determined on the facts of the case and the interpretation of the law is a matter for the Courts. The European Court of Justice (ECJ) has issued several judgments on the interpretation of the definition of waste and the meaning of "discard". ECJ judgments are binding on member states and their "competent authorities".

The Government proposes, in consultation with the Environment Agency, to review in the light of the ECJ's judgments the guidance on the interpretation of the definition of waste originally provided in DOE Circular 11/94. But it is not feasible for any revised guidance which the Government issues to determine whether any particular substance is in any particular circumstances discarded as waste. It will be feasible only for any revised guidance to advise on the factors which the ECJ has determined should be taken into account in reaching a decision.

TREASURY

Wood Panel Industry

Gregory Barker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people he estimates are employed in the wood panel industry. [137095]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Gregory Barker dated 18 November 2003:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about people employed in the wood panel industry. I am replying in his absence. (137095)

According to the latest available figures from the Annual Business Inquiry, in December 2001 there were 6700 employees in industries whose primary economic activity is "The manufacture of veneer sheets; manufacture of plywood, laminboard, particle board, fibre board and other panels and boards".

Consumer Debt

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the evidence produced by research he has commissioned on the impact of a rise in interest rates on consumer debt. [139428]

Ruth Kelly: HM Treasury published evidence on the link between interest rates and consumer behaviour in June 2003 as part of the EMU Five Tests Assessment, in the supporting studies on 'EMU and the Monetary Transmission Mechanism' and 'Housing, Consumption and EMU'.

Correspondence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to the letter of 1 August from the hon. Member for Aylesbury, on behalf of Mr. M.G. Moore of Great Missenden, about professional indemnity assurance for independent financial advisers. [139302]

Ruth Kelly: I have done so.

Deep Vein Thrombosis

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people died from deep vein thrombosis in the last 12 months; and in how many of these cases long haul air travel was found to be a contributory factor. [138980]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mrs. Iris Robinson, dated 18 November 2003:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many people died from deep vein thrombosis in the last 12 months; and in how many of these cases long haul air travel was found to be a contributory factor.

Virtually all deaths from deep vein thrombosis occur as a result of a pulmonary embolism, and most pulmonary embolisms arise from deep vein thrombosis in the leg. However, the precise description of this sequence of events leading to death (as provided on the death certificate) affects whether the death is coded as pulmonary embolism or thrombosis. Therefore, a figure combining the two causes is presented in the table below to give a complete and consistent picture over time.

It is not possible to state if long haul air travel was a contributory factor in deaths from deep vein thrombosis or pulmonary embolism as this information is not routinely entered on the death certificate. The latest available data are for the calendar year 2002. The total number of deaths certified as due to deep vein thrombosis and pulmonary embolism in England and Wales in 2002 are therefore given in the table. I am supplying data for the last five years for comparison purposes.

Number of deaths from pulmonary embolism and deep vein thrombosis,[1] persons, England and Wales, 1998–2002[2]

1999	6,877

[1] The cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) codes 415.1, 451.1, 451.2, 451.9 and 453.9 for the years 1997 to 2000, and, for the year 2001, the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revisions (ICD-10) codes 126, 180.1, 180.2, 180.3, 180.9 and 182.9.

Defence Dental Agency

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reasons the Defence Dental Agency's Account Direction for financial year 1997–98 was withdrawn. [139685]

Ruth Kelly: An accounts direction for the Defence Dental Agency (DDA) for 1997–98 was issued in March 1996 on the understanding that satisfactory accounting systems would be in place for that financial year. It was withdrawn in January 1999 when it became apparent that, because of difficulties with the stock recording systems on which DDA and a number of agencies within MOD relied, DDA would be unable to prepare accounts for 1997–98 which would have received an unqualified audit opinion from the Comptroller and Auditor General. At that time, the policy was not to issue accounts directions if there was a probability that the auditors would be unable to give an unqualified opinion—this policy is no longer applied.

Import Tariffs (Israel)

Richard Burden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list United Kingdom companies which have (a) made representations to and (b) signalled their intention to take action against the (i) British Government and (ii) European Union for imposing tariffs on goods entering the United Kingdom, marked as made in Israel, which originated in the Occupied Territories. [138937]

John Healey: Two UK companies have requested a formal review under the Customs and Excise Appeals procedure of the duty demanded. The identity of the companies cannot be disclosed for reasons of commercial confidentiality: Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information applies in this instance.

Customs and Excise are not aware of any UK companies making representations to the European Union.

Industrial and Provident Societies

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to bring about the level playing field in regulations affecting companies and industrial and provident societies, to which he referred in his letter of 31 July to the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Hodge Hill. [139392]

Ruth Kelly: As was stated in my letter of 31 July on this issue, the Government is keen to see, where appropriate, a level playing field between industrial and provident societies and companies and we are currently examining our options for taking forward this agenda.

Insurance Brokers

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures are in place to stop the practice of grossing up by insurance brokers in Northern Ireland; and what plans he has to change the appropriate legislation to protect consumers from the grossing up of insurance premium commissions. [138900]

Ruth Kelly: Grossing up is a serious abuse of the market. The Government is giving the Financial Services Authority (FSA) responsibility for regulating general insurance as from 14 January 2004. The FSA is currently consulting on its rules in CP187. The FSA considers there is more opportunity for such market abuse in the commercial rather than the retail market, and therefore does not propose to introduce commission disclosure for retail customers. But, for commercial customers, it will be requiring intermediaries to disclose commission earned by them and any affiliated intermediaries if requested to do so by a commercial customer.

International Finance Facility

Ms Drown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he estimates agreement will be reached on the International Finance Facility; and when he estimates it will have funds in it. [138906]

John Healey: Only by pooling the additional resources pledged as part of the Monterrey Consensus, and leveraging these through an International Finance Facility designed to deliver the additional US $50 billion a year needed to meet the Millennium Development Goals, can the international community meet the challenge of halving poverty by 2015. That is why the Government continues to make the case for the Facility with all our international partners. Once agreement by donor countries has been reached the facility could start to deliver the additional aid very quickly.

The Facility received wide support from other countries at the Annual Meetings of the World Bank and IMF in September. The Bank and Fund have been mandated to do further work on financing for development options, including the International Finance Facility, reporting back at the Spring and Annual Meetings in 2004.

The Meetings also agreed that developing and emerging market countries should be consulted. This process will culminate in a Ministerial conference on Financing for Development in Spring 2004, chaired by the French Government.

The UK government also continues to build the support in civil society necessary to make the initiative a reality. In February the Treasury will be hosting a conference bringing together church leaders, senior political figures, NGOs and the President of the World Bank to discuss aid and trade.

Large Scale Voluntary Transfer

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost to public funds was of large scale voluntary transfer for each of the last 10 years. [139429]

Keith Hill: Where a large scale voluntary transfer has a positive value there is no additional cost to public funds. Where there is a negative value a dowry may be required. Between 1996 and 2000 the Office provided dowry funding for negative value estate based transfers through the Estates Renewal Challenge Fund. The annual provision was 1996–97. £7.8 million; 1997–98, £132.9 million; 1998–99, £146.3 million, and 1999–2000, £201.2 million. It is possible that other Government programmes have provided financial contributions to large scale voluntary transfers however a central record is not maintained. However, the information is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Leases

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) lock-up garages, (b) car parking spaces, (c) advertising hoardings and (d) charity shops were leased in the last year for which figures are available. [135605]

Ruth Kelly: I regret that this information is not available.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the UK visits made by ministers in his Department in each of the last five years, broken down by constituency. [136909]

Ruth Kelly: The detailed information requested in respect of UK travel by Treasury Ministers is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Network Rail

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his forecast is of losses on Network Rail for 2003–04. [133664]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

The Strategic Rail Authority receives regular financial information from Network Rail as part of the agreement for SRA providing Network Rail with standby credit facilities. The financial information is commercially sensitive. Network Rail's Annual Report and Accounts for 2002–03, the most recently available, showed a loss before tax of £290 million.

Opinion Polling and Market Research

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much (a) HM Treasury, (b) Customs and Excise and (c) the Inland Revenue spent on (i) opinion polling and (ii) market research in the last financial year; and if he will make a statement. [134230]

Ruth Kelly: Expenditure in 2002–03 on external survey research by Customs and Excise was £255,774. Inland Revenue spent £1.6 million on market research (this figure includes: quantitative surveys; qualitative research; media and advertising research; and business-to-business industrial research; public opinion surveys; and desk research). In respect of HM Treasury I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 28 April 2003, Official Report, column 168W.

Presidential Visit

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the estimated economic cost is of the effect on businesses in London of the forthcoming visit of President Bush. [139409]

Ruth Kelly: Policing operations will aim to minimise any such costs.

Productivity Growth

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the rate of productivity growth in the public sector was on the last year for which figures are available. [133660]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. John Redwood, dated 18 November 2003:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question on productivity growth in the public sector. (133660)

I refer you to the article "Measuring Government Output and Productivity" which was published in Economic Trends, July 2003. The purpose of this article was to report work in progress at the Office for National Statistics. To illustrate the methods used, it included experimental results that provide an indicative estimate of productivity change for government. The latest year for which these figures were shown was 2001 when productivity change (over the previous year) was shown as −2 per cent. This estimate should be used in conjunction with the guidance provided in the article.

The article is available on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/cci/article.asp?id=400

No estimates have been published covering the whole of the public sector.

Taxation and Transfer Pricing

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list taxation and transfer pricing cases involving United Kingdom companies which have been (a) decided and (b) entered for decision by the European Court of Justice in each of the last five years; and if he will estimate the net revenue effect in each case. [139466]

Dawn Primarolo: No tax cases concerning transfer pricing involving UK companies have been decided or entered for decision by the European Court of Justice in any of the last five years.

Thalidomide Trust

Nick Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the annual cost to the Treasury of allowing income payments from the Thalidomide Trust to thalidomide victims to be tax exempt; and if he will make a statement. [139695]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not available.

Treasury Statistics

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether the HM Treasury official involved in the early release of statistics on 24 October had authorised access to those statistics; and if he will make a statement; [138799]

(2) what the arrangements are for the preparation of briefing materials on statistics to which HM Treasury has pre-release access; and if he will make a statement; [138800]

(3) if he will list all the people outside the Office for National Statistics who had pre-release access to the retail sales estimates and other market moving statistics; and if he will make a statement; [138801]

(4) when the provisions for pre-release access to National Statistics releases by HM Treasury (a) Ministers and (b) officials were last changed; and if he will make a statement; [138803]

(5) if he will list the HM Treasury provisions for pre-release access to National Statistics releases by HM Treasury (a) Ministers and (b) officials. [138804]

Ruth Kelly: In line with long-standing practice under this and previous Administrations, Ministers with policy responsibility for the relevant subject matter, and a small number of their officials, are granted limited early access to statistical releases to enable them to respond completely when questions arise at the time of the release of the data. The list of Treasury Ministers and officials who have authorised pre-release access to National Statistics First Releases is available on the Office for National Statistics (ONS) website.

In addition the Macroeconomic Statistics Service Level Agreement, drawn up between ONS and HM Treasury in 1998, lists a further small number of individuals at HM Treasury who receive copies of HM Treasury's internal briefing on these statistical releases before the publication of the data. Since 1998, this list has been updated to reflect changes to personnel and staff structures with the overall number of individuals reduced from eight to seven.

As confirmed by the Treasury at the time, the official from whom the September retail sales data was improperly ascertained had authorised early access to those data.

As noted in the Treasury's statement of 5 November, the Treasury views this incident extremely seriously and is rigorously examining all its procedures to ensure that any repetition is avoided.

Website

John Barrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent assessment he has made of the (a) content and (b) design of his Department's website. [139504]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury has an ongoing programme of user testing for its website. The views of external and internal users are regularly sampled, with the findings feeding into improvements to layout indexing and contents. This development programme also takes account of the accessibility and usability guidelines set out by the World Wide Web Consortium (W3C) and the Office of the e-Envoy.

TRANSPORT

12. Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive a progress report from the Highways Agency on its review of the A34; and if he will make a statement. [138865]

Mr. Jamieson: The Highways Agency's Route Management Strategy of the A34 will report in Summer 2004 and will cover limited measures on the A34 itself. Also, the Government Office for the South East has initiated a scoping study into wider problems and issues along the corridor from Southampton to Bicester. Results of which will be known in the New Year and will inform future decisions.

Biofuels

13. Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking towards the introduction of (a) bioethanol and (b) biodiesel fuels for road users. [138867]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government introduced a 20 pence per litre fuel duty incentive for biodiesel in July 2002, which has already resulted in a big increase in biodiesel sales. A similar duty incentive for bioethanol is due to come into effect in January 2005.

London Underground

14. John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on safety on the London Underground. [138868]

Mr. McNulty: London Underground is one of the safest transport systems in the world. Its safety is the responsibility of London Underground Ltd, which transferred from the Government to the London Mayor on 15 July this year.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the service levels stipulated in the agreement registered by the Government with private sector companies to run the London Underground. [138852]

Mr. McNulty: London Underground is run by London Underground Ltd. (LUL), which is owned by Transport for London. LUL's contracts with the private sector infrastructure companies require the latter to meet performance specifications designed to deliver faster, more reliable and more pleasant journeys for passengers.

Rail Services

16. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans his Department has for improvements in rail transport in the West Midlands. [138870]

Mr. McNulty: A number of improvements have recently taken place. For the future, the Strategic Rail Authority has announced a new approach for planning of the railway network through "Regional Planning Assessments". These will establish key objectives for each region within a long-term context. The West Midlands Regional Planning Assessment is due for publication in Autumn 2004.

Cycling

17. Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his Department's strategy for (a) increasing cycling journey numbers and (b) reducing cycling injuries and deaths. [138871]

Mr. McNulty: Our strategy for encouraging cycling involves improving both cycling infrastructure and promotion. We have assessed provision for cyclists in all English local authorities. We have initiated the Cycling Projects Fund and given over £4 million to local cycling initiatives. The Department is also a major contributor to the cross-departmental Activity Co-ordination Team, which is seeking to raise levels of physical activity across the board. On the safety front, and in addition to encouraging better facilities for cyclists, we are promoting measures which cyclists can take to protect themselves, such as taking cycle training and making themselves conspicuous. We are also improving training and testing for motorists.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of (a) traffic flows and (b) congestion on the A40 in Cheltenham since the opening of the new GCHQ building; [138915]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect on traffic flows of recent changes to the A40 Sixways Junction in Charlton Kings, Cheltenham. [138916]

Mr. Jamieson: I have asked the Acting Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Stephen Hickey, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Stephen Hickey to Mr. Nigel Jones, dated 18 November 2003:

I have been asked by David Jamieson to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about what assessments have been made on traffic flows and congestion at specific locations on the A40 in Cheltenham.

The Highways Agency conducted a queue survey at the A40 Sixways Junction in Charlton Kings on Tuesday 4 November 2003. In the morning peak there appears to be little change in the length of queues; the main change is in the way the traffic moves. Since the installation of the new signals, traffic moves through the junction in a more orderly manner.

No formal assessment of traffic flows has been carried out since the assessment that was made as part of the planning process for the GCHQ building. Not all relocations to the new building are complete therefore it is too soon for a meaningful assessment of the impact of the development to be conducted. GCHQ, Gloucestershire County Council, Cheltenham Borough Council and the Highways Agency are working together to find ways to mitigate the impact of the new GCHQ building.

A414

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he will take to improve road safety on the A414 from Chelmsford towards the M25. [138857]

Mr. Jamieson: The section of the A414 between Chelmsford and the M11/Harlow junction is the responsibility of Essex County Council. Essex County Council have identified the route as having a poor accident record and it is now the subject of a priority route study to determine the main causes and patterns of accidents. Initial analysis has been undertaken and accident remedial measures are being determined for implementation in the next financial year, subject to the availability of funding.

Altmark Case

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the implications of the Altmark case on (a) ferry services sailing from ports in Scotland, (b) the application of the EU Ports Directive in Scotland and (c) competition between modes of transport by sea, air and rail. [136497]

Mr. Jamieson: Financial assistance for ferry services within Scotland is a devolved matter for the Scottish Executive. The Altmark case is very complex and the Scottish Executive and my Department are assessing the potential impact of the judgment on domestic and international maritime services and inter-modal competition.

The Access to Port Services Directive has not yet been adopted. While its potential application in the UK, including Scotland, has been considered during the negotiating process, it has not been possible, as yet, to make a detailed assessment of the potential impact of the Altmark case on implementation.

Road Safety

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of the materials used to demarcate the hard shoulder on motorways in alerting drowsy drivers when they cross the hard shoulder; [138939]

(2) if he will make a statement on the safety systems for demarcating hard shoulders on motorways. [138940]

Mr. Jamieson: Raised rib edge markings used to demarcate the hard shoulder have been found to be highly effective in alerting drivers of cars and light vehicles when they stray across the line onto the hard shoulder. They may be less effective in alerting the drivers of larger vehicles.

Heathrow Airport

Mr. Marshall-Andrews: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many and what proportion of night flights into Heathrow operated on (a) a westerly and (b) an easterly flightpath (i) in 2001, (ii) in 2002 and (iii) between January and August 2003. [138701]

Dr. Howells: The number and proportion of aircraft landing at night between 11:00 p.m. and 7:00a.m. on westerly and easterly flightpaths in each period was:

	Movements westerly	Proportion westerly (percentage)	Movements easterly	Proportion easterly (percentage)
2001	16,612	72	6,460	28
2002	18,095	69	8,129	31
January August 2003	9,373	64	5,282	36

Nuclear Waste

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what amounts of (a) low level, (b) intermediate-level and (c) high-level nuclear waste have been transported by train in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement. [135172]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer on 29 October 2003]: The regulations that ensure the safe transport of radioactive materials do not distinguish on safety grounds between waste and any other radioactive materials. This is because there are no special safety issues pertaining specifically to the transport of waste. There is no regulatory requirement for this department to be notified of waste shipments.

The National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) carried out studies in 1984 and 1991 examining road and rail transport of radioactive material in the UK for the Department. The latest report identified that around 5000 containers of low-level waste and some 765 irradiated fuel flasks (this material may not have been classified as waste) were transported in 1989. Copies are available in the Libraries of the House.

A further study has been commissioned from NRPB, which is due for completion at the end of 2004. This will contain a similar analysis of national trends. The report will be lodged in the house library when complete.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reports his Department has received about plans to increase the transport by train of nuclear waste through London; and if he will make a statement. [135173]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 29 October 2003]: In October 2001 the Greater London Authority (GLA) investigated the transport of irradiated fuel through London. This concluded that there would be no increase in the frequency of transport of spent nuclear fuel through London during the imminent decommissioning of some nuclear reactors in the south east. The Department is not convinced that the conclusions of this report present a full and accurate picture of future trends.

A study has been commissioned from NRPB, which is due for completion at the end of 2004. This will contain an analysis of national trends in the shipment of radioactive material. In particular it will look at trends expected as a result of decommissioning. The report will be lodged in the house Library when complete.

The Department has offered to collaborate with the GLA by including a specific study of London within the national study. This would provide the information requested.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trains went through London with (a) low-level, (b) intermediate-level and (c) high-level nuclear waste in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [135174]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 29 October 2003]: The organisation that operates trains transporting irradiated fuel (Direct Rail Services) has stated that shipments through London have averaged three per week on a reasonably constant basis over the past five years.

A study examining road and rail transport of radioactive material nationally has been commissioned from the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB), which is due for completion at the end of 2004. This will contain an analysis of national trends of numbers and types of shipments. The report will be lodged in the Library of the House when complete.

In October 2001 the Greater London Authority (GLA) investigated the transport of irradiated fuel through London. In response to this the Department has offered to collaborate with the GLA by including a specific study of London within the national study.

Pensions (Network Rail)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the decision by Network Rail to close its final salary pension scheme. [139159]

Mr. McNulty: Network Rail's decision about its final salary pension arrangements is a matter for Network rail itself and the independent corporate trustee of the Railways Pension Scheme.

It is our understanding that there is no intention to breach the arrangements put in place to protect staff pensions on privatisation of the industry. The relevant final salary arrangement will still be open to protected rail industry staff who transfer voluntarily to Network Rail.

Regulatory Proportionality

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how the principle of regulatory proportionality will be incorporated in the proposed amendments to Regulation 32 of the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulation relating to lightly tinted windows. [138734]

Mr. Jamieson: Regulation 32 is not being amended. The regulations are being clarified to verify that the prescribed minimum light transmittance values apply irrespective of whether or not windows have tinted film stuck on them.

Road Congestion

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what the rates of congestion were on the M54 between Shrewsbury and Telford in each year since 1997; [138355]

(2) what the rates of congestion were on the A5 road between Shrewsbury and Wrexham in each year since 1997. [138371]

Mr. McNulty: I have asked the Acting Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Stephen Hickey, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Stephen Hickey to Mr. Paul Marsden, dated 18 November 2003:

I have been asked by Tony McNulty to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about rates of congestion on the A5 road between Shrewsbury and Telford and Shrewsbury and Wrexham in each year since 1997.

Established modelling techniques are used by the Department for Transport and the Highways Agency in England to assess existing road congestion and forecast future congestion for specific purposes such as the preparation of road improvements. A consequence of this is a 'stress map' indicating those parts of the motorway and trunk road network that are experiencing peak and off-peak congestion. The latest available version of the map was published in the Ten Year Plan for Transport, a copy of which is available in the House Library. The length of A5 between the Welsh border and Wrexham is the responsibility of the Welsh Assembly.

Regular measurement of journey times at the level of detail required (by most congestion indicators) has not been carried out in the past, mainly on economic grounds.

The opening of the Highways Agency's Traffic Control Centre next year will greatly improve our knowledge of traffic conditions and will lead to comprehensive information on journey times and speeds being made generally available to the travelling public.

School Transport

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with the Department for Education and Skills regarding funding for school transport. [138869]

Mr. McNulty: The Secretary of State has had a number of discussions with the Secretary of State for Education in the course of developing our new joint initiative on school travel, which was launched on 17 September.

Strategic Rail Authority

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the decision by the Strategic Rail Authority to take over the south-east franchise. [139158]

Mr. McNulty: On 26 June 2003, the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) formally notified Connex that its franchise would be terminated by 31 December 2003. This followed Connex's failure to introduce agreed changes to their financial monitoring and reporting arrangements designed to ensure that the substantial public subsidy they had received was being properly used. With Connex's agreement, the franchise was in fact terminated on 9 November 2003 and the service is now being run by the SRA through a subsidiary company, South Eastern Trains. This will continue only until a private sector operator is appointed to run the proposed Integrated Kent Franchise, which is expected to begin in 2005.

Train Performance

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many meetings he has had with train operating companies to discuss train performance in the last six months. [138866]

Dr. Howells: Departmental Ministers meet regularly with train operating companies to discuss performance. Since July 2003, I have visited South West Trains, Midland Mainline and South Central, Virgin, Silverlink, Centro, Central and Wales and Borders.

Transport Security

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps have been taken since 11 September 2001 to improve security at (a) ports and (b) rail freight terminals. [138356]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department's approach is to manage the risk to the industry arising from the threat of a terrorist attack. The security measures imposed seek to minimise the industries' vulnerabilities while recognising operational realities.

Following the events of 11 September 2001 the security programmes for all modes of transport were reviewed and some adjustments made. The programmes are kept under review. While it is not our practice to detail the required security measures for obvious reasons, we believe that the core policies and baseline measures and the levels of security required are appropriate.

In respect of the security at ports, our national regime (which has been in place since 1990) will be augmented next year with the implementation of the recently agreed International Maritime Organisation's (IMO) global maritime security regime.

For rail freight terminals my Department issued a National Railway Security Programme in July 2001. The review of the programme (which covers the whole of the Great Britain rail network) confirmed that the measures required for domestic rail freight depots are appropriate and proportionate to the threat.

International rail freight terminals using the channel tunnel have been subject to more stringent requirements since the opening of the channel tunnel in 1994. International rail freight terminals have protective security measures in place and all rail freight is liable to be searched. Since 11 September 2001 the level of search required has been increased.

US Naval Ships (Disposal)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the arrangements approved by his Department for the refuelling of tug boats towing vessels from the United States for decommissioning at Hartlepool. [137187]

Mr. Jamieson: The passage plan approved by my Department did not specify places or arrangements for refuelling of the relevant tug boats. Such arrangements fell within the responsibility of the towage company. However the plan identified places, including the Azores, where refuelling could be carried out if required.

Vehicles (Tinted Windows)

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his estimate is of how many vehicles which have (a) lightly tinted and (b) heavily tinted windows do not comply with the proposed amendments to Regulation 32 of the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations. [138736]

Mr. Jamieson: A vehicle with windows which has light transmittance values less than the prescribed minima in Regulation 32 is unlawful irrespective of whether it might subjectively be described as having either 'light' or 'heavy' tints. Information on the number of vehicles which do not comply with the regulation is not held.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Departmental Expenditure (Official Residences)

Mr. Flight: To ask the Advocate-General how much the Department spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [134681]

The Advocate-General for Scotland: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my hon. Friend, the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland.

CABINET OFFICE

Better Regulation Task Force

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when the Government will respond to the Better Regulation Task Force's report, "Imaginative Thinking for Better Regulation"; and if he will make a statement. [139432]

Mr. Alexander: The Government expect to respond to the report before Christmas this year.

Public Administration

21. Mr. Challen: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what action the Cabinet Office is taking to reduce the burden of administration in the public sector. [138847]

Mr. Alexander: My Department is working closely with colleagues in other Departments to take forward a programme of measures in relation to this matter.

This joint work has delivered a significant number of actions that directly benefit front line staff, for example:

simplifying the Manual of Guidance for police and CPS on the completion of prosecution paperwork; reducing the information schools have to supply when they make applications (e.g. for specialist school status); and scrapping the requirement for GPs to sign passport applications.

Public Appointments

22. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what steps have been taken towards improving transparency in the public appointments process. [138848]

Mr. Alexander: The Cabinet Office fully supports the Commissioner for Public Appointments Code of Practice, which provides Departments with a clear guide to ensure a fair, open and transparent appointments process.

Civil Service

23. Paddy Tipping: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what progress the Civil Service is making in appointing women to senior positions. [138849]

Mr. Alexander: The Government are strongly committed to equality of opportunity. My Department has put in place a range of programmes to increase the representation of women in the Senior Civil Service.

Internally, we are coaching and mentoring women in grades just below the Senior Civil Service. Externally, we are working to raise women's awareness of recruitment and secondment opportunities.

25. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what steps are being taken to increase the proportion of ethnic minority staff in the Senior Civil Service. [138851]

Mr. Alexander: We are making good progress against our target to have 3.2 per cent. ethnic minority staff in the Senior Civil Service by 2004–05. The current level is 2.8 per cent., compared with 1.6 per cent. in 1998.

To help achieve this, my Department is responsible for a number of development schemes as well as undertaking outreach work in order to attract talented ethnic minorities to the Civil Service.

Departmental Floor Space

24. Norman Baker: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what floor space in square metres his Department had use of on (a) 1 May 1997 and (b) 1 November 2003. [138850]

Mr. Alexander: On 1 May 1997, the Cabinet Office had use of 104,077 square metres of floor space, and by 1 November 2003, this figure had reduced to 77,734 square metres.

Bechtel

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list the contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel for agencies responsible to the Office in each year since 1997, stating in each case (a) the nature of the work, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the duration of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [137884]

Mr. Alexander: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 3 November 2003, Official Report, column 417W. Financial information for former Cabinet Office Agencies prior to 2001 is not available.

Microsoft (Licensing Fees)

Norman Lamb: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how much was paid to Microsoft in licensing fees by the Cabinet Office and its agencies in each of the last three years; and how much has been budgeted for (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [130670]

Mr. Alexander: My Department's accounting systems do not capture comprehensive information on expenditure on specific types of software licences. Expenditure[1] on Microsoft licensing fees that can be identified is as follows:

2000–01	3,456,829
2002–03	459,464

In 2000–01, £3.3 million of expenditure related to the purchase of microsoft licences in connection with the Government Gateway project. The Government Gateway is an IT infrastructure which was developed as part of the strategy for delivering electronic Government. It enables electronic transactions between Government, citizens and businesses in a secure, customer-focused and joined-up way.

Detailed information on budgets for the purchase of Microsoft software in 2003–04 and 2004–05 is not available.

[1] Figures exclude licences purchased on behalf of the Cabinet Office by IT service providers.

SCOTLAND

Market Research

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list each item of market and opinion research commissioned since May 1997 by (a) his Department and (b) agencies and non-departmental public bodies for which his Department is responsible; what the purpose of each item was; and whether the results were published. [137006]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office was established on 1 July 1999. The Department has not incurred any expenditure on market and opinion research.

Official Properties

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much the Department spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [134697]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office was established on 1 July 1999. The Department does not own any residential properties.

Work-related Stress

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of work-related stress have been reported in his Department in each of the last three years; how much compensation has been paid to employees; how many work days have been lost due to work-related stress, and at what cost; what procedures have been put in place to reduce work-related stress, and at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [136849]

Mrs. McGuire: In 2002, a small number of staff experienced absence through work-related stress. Further details of cases are covered by Exemption 12 (Privacy of an Individual) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Age Discrimination

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent (a) representations and (b) discussions she has had on extending age discrimination legislation to unpaid voluntary workers; and if she will make a statement. [139427]

Jacqui Smith: The Government have consulted widely on age issues and proposals for legislation in two consultation exercises, most recently in Age Matters this summer.

Unpaid voluntary work does not fall within the scope of the European Employment Directive. Existing legislation on race, gender and disability already has a common definition of employment and this will be used for age. We have committed to consistency in approach and definition across existing, as well as new areas of equality legislation, wherever practicable.

Air Travel (Financial Protection)

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will respond to the consultation by the Civil Airports Authority on financial protection for travellers and package holidaymakers. [138454]

Mr. Sutcliffe: We have asked the Civil Aviation Authority to provide us with copies of the responses they have received to their consultation on Financial Protection for Air Travellers. We will consider these responses carefully along with any recommendations that the CAA make to Government as a result of this Consultation.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the kind of experiments animals are used in; what controls are in place to reduce to reduce the unnecessary waste of animals; and what measures are in place to ensure that companies cannot purchase animals for excessively cruel procedures. [136144]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

The use of animals in scientific procedures is regulated by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, which is widely viewed as the most rigorous piece of legislation of its type in the world. It offers a high level of protection to animals whilst recognising the need to use animals in medical research, the development of new medicines and scientific testing. It also has sufficient flexibility to allow the latest ideas and technology to be taken into account when deciding whether the use of animals is justified.

Under Section 5 (3) of the 1986 Act, project licences are only granted for programmes of work that satisfy one or more of the following purposes: the prevention (whether by the testing of any product or otherwise) or the diagnosis or treatment of disease, ill-health or abnormality, or their effects, in man, animals or plants; the assessment, detection, regulation or modification of physiological conditions in man, animals or plants; the protection of the natural environment in the interests of the health or welfare of man or animals; the advancement of knowledge in biological or behavioural sciences; education or training otherwise than in primary or secondary schools; forensic enquiries; the breeding of animals for experimental or other scientific use.

In determining whether and on what terms to grant a project licence, Section 5(4) of the 1986 Act requires that the likely adverse effects on the animals concerned must be weighed against the benefit likely to accrue as a result of the programmespecified on the application. For the purposes of this cost/benefit assessment, the cost to the animal is considered as the adverse effects of pain, suffering, distress or lasting harm. The benefits must be for humans, animals or the environment and relate to the scientific and/or medical progress likely to result from the programme outlined in the application.

Under section 5 (5) of the 1986 Act, a project licence shall only be granted if the purpose of the programme to be specified in the licence cannot be achieved satisfactorily by any other reasonably practicable method not entailing the use of animals; and that the regulated procedures to be used are those which use the minimum number of animals, involve animals with the lowest degree of neurophysiological sensitivity, cause the least pain, suffering, distress or lasting harm, and are most likely to produce satisfactory results.

Under section 10(2A) and Schedule 2A to the 1986 Act, the Secretary of State will not licence any procedures likely to cause severe pain or distress that cannot be alleviated.

Consumer Credit

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if her Department will initiate discussions with Leeds University Business School about research it has recently conducted on debt collectors. [138594]

Mr. Sutcliffe: We are currently considering the research prepared by the Credit Management Research Centre at Leeds University Business School on debt collectors.

We will discuss the findings with the industry at large.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to standardise the cooling off period for consumer credit contracts and agreements. [138595]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government have no plans at present to standardise existing cooling off periods for consumer credit contracts and agreements.

Consumer Rights (Energy)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions she has had with Energywatch on measures to help elderly consumers develop a greater understanding of their rights in relation to energy companies. [138674]

Mr. Timms: I have discussed with Energywatch some of its proposals to assist vulnerable consumers, including the elderly. Energywatch is committed to making its information and advice services fully accessible to all consumers, particularly vulnerable consumers. It provides information, advice and guidance direct to those consumers in their own communities, helping them be more assertive and confident in dealing with energy companies. Energywatch also works with other agencies to reach elderly and other vulnerable consumers. Its activities in areas such as fuel poverty, debt prevention and management, energy efficiency and promoting access to the competitive market directly benefit elderly consumers, as do its campaigns on mis-selling, erroneous transfers and billing and metering.

Debt Management Companies

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has for the statutory regulation of debt management companies. [139092]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Companies providing debt management services are required to be licensed under the Consumer Credit Act 1974. Under the Act the Chairman of the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) has a statutory duty to ensure applicants for a licence are fit to engage in the activities for which they are licensed.

In December 2001 the OFT issued guidelines to debt management companies to ensure they deal fairly and openly with consumers—the Debt Management Guidance (December 2001) OFT366. A copy of the guidance can be found in the Libraries of the House.

The guidance requires that companies offering debt management services should comply with the best practice identified in it. Where the OFT has evidence of practices breaching the guidelines they can take action to refuse or revoke the consumer credit licence, or take such other action as appropriate under other legislation (e.g. Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations etc).

The Consumer Credit White Paper will set out Government measures for reform of the current licensing system in order to ensure it remains relevant in today's marketplace, enables consumers to make informed decisions through increasing transparency, and provides suitable enforcement measures to allow the OFT to deal with those companies who act in a manner inconsistent with the best practice laid out in the Act and Guidance.

Home Accident Surveillance System

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 11 September, Official Report, column 392W, to the hon. Members for Cunninghame, South and for Gateshead East and Washington, West, on the Home Accident Surveillance System, if she will place copies of the representations in the Library; and if she will publish the information from the Home Accident Surveillance System for 2000 to 2002. [138659]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I will not place copies of the representations in the Libraries of the House. I have received these on a confidential basis and I do not have permission from any of the individuals or organisations who sent them to make them public.

I plan to publish the back data from 2000 to 2002 in December.

India

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the UK trade and investment relationship with India. [138201]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The bilateral trade and investment relationship between the UK and India is increasingly strong. In 2002, bilateral trade in goods and services was worth some £5 billion. In the first eight months of 2003, UK exports of goods to India rose by over 29 per cent. against the same period in 2002.

The UK is the fourth largest investor in India (after Mauritius, USA and Japan). India is an increasingly important investor in the UK. The UK receives approximately 60 per cent. of all Indian investment into Europe. There are over 450 Indian companies with a base in the UK; approximately 75 per cent. of these are in the ICT/software sector.

I look forward to visiting India in the new year to see for myself how our bilateral trade and investment relationship is progressing.

Milk Processing Industry

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions she has had with representatives of the milk processing industry on (a) prices and (b) profitability in that industry. [139600]

Mr. Sutcliffe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has had no recent discussions with representatives of the milk processing industry on prices and profitability.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to investigate the implementing of further merger activity in the milk processing industry. [139601]

Mr. Sutcliffe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has no such plans. With the coming into force of the Enterprise Act on 20 June 2003, decisions on new merger situations are taken by the independent competition authorities, not Ministers.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will press mobile phone companies to standardise practice in notifying customers of unusually high mobile phone usage patterns. [138604]

Mr. Timms: This is a contractual matter between the mobile network operating companies and their customers. The Department is aware that certain operators follow this procedure but it has no current plans to press all to introduce a standardised practice.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research her Department has conducted on the number of mobile phone customers who receive bills for mobile phone charges incurred by thieves before the customers knew that their phone had been stolen. [138605]

Mr. Timms: None.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has received from consumer bodies about mobile phone fraud arising when SIM cards are stolen after consumers have ceased using a SIM card but not cancelled the contract for that SIM. [138608]

Mr. Timms: None.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will require mobile phone operators to present charging structures in a standardised format, similar to the credit card industry's Honesty Box scheme. [138615]

Mr. Timms: The Department encourages clarity and transparency in billing arrangements, but has no plans at present to impose further requirements. I welcome steps taken by the mobile network operators to simplify their pricing structures for customers.

National Minimum Wage (Midlothian)

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people in Midlothian have benefited from the national minimum wage since its introduction. [137129]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Office for National Statistics' Low Pay data for spring 2003 only allows estimates to be made of the number of beneficiaries down to country and regional level within the UK. Using this data, the DTI estimates that between 100,000 and 120,000 people in Scotland should benefit from the increase in minimum wage rates in October 2003, the DTI estimates that between 1 and 1.2 million people should benefit in the UK as a whole.

Phishing

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what powers there are to impose penalties on people perpetrating phishing frauds in internet banking; and what the penalties are. [138596]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

The term "phishing" has recently been coined to refer to the practice of sending e-mails which falsely claim to originate from banks, asking customers to re-register or "re-activate" their accounts at a replica bank website, with the aim of using the information provided to transfer money out of these accounts.

This is an offence (or attempted offence) of fraud and can be prosecuted under the Theft Acts 1968 and 1978 or under the common law of conspiracy to defraud. The maximum penalty for the main fraud offences (including attempts to commit them) is 10 years' imprisonment.

Post Office and Bank of Ireland

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what regulatory approvals are necessary for the Post Office partnership with the Bank of Ireland to provide financial services to proceed. [139465]

Mr. Timms: This is a matter between the two parties concerned. The joint venture will, of course, be subject to all appropriate company and other regulations including those governing the provision of financial services.

Post Office Closures

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reasons elements of management within the Post Office are given a financial incentive to close post offices; and what percentage of post offices within their individual remits they need to close to qualify. [139210]

Mr. Timms: I understand from Post Office Ltd that their Network Development Managers working on the urban reinvention programme are paid in the same way as all other managers in Post Office Ltd. Their pay arrangements include provision for a bonus based on a combination of overall business, financial and quality results and achievement of personal objectives. Their personal objectives are structures around identifying and preparing robust network reinvention proposals for presentation to Postwatch to achieve sustainable restructuring of services in local areas, and are linked to the success in migrating customers from any branch which closes as a result to other branches in the network. There is no incentive linked to actual branch closure.

Post Office Robberies

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post office robberies occurred in each of the last three years. [139248]

Mr. Timms: These are matters that fall within the day-to-day responsibility of Post Office Ltd. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Postal Services

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on promoting the use of post offices; and if she will make a statement. [139552]

Mr. Timms: The promotion of post offices is a matter for Post Office Ltd. The business plan of Post Office Ltd. reflects the commitment to attract new customers for banking at the Post Office, and to develop new business in financial services. I understand that Post Office Ltd. is providing information to customers and guidance to sub-postmasters on the range of services available at post offices. The Department for Work and Pensions is also supplying information about the payment options available to their benefit and pension customers, including those options which provide post office access.

Quality Mark Scheme

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment her Department has made of the survey on raising standards commissioned by the Quality Mark Scheme in July; and if she will use the survey to inform her review of the Consumer Credit Act 1974. [138593]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Quality Mark Scheme, announced 26 March 2002, was initially rolled out as a pilot 26 June 2002. It is expected the scheme will be tested over a three to four year period and as such no survey was conducted in July.

The Government have no plans at present to introduce an independent Quality Mark Scheme for the consumer credit market.

Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what statutory investigatory powers the Department has; which ones will be superseded by use of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000; and what plans she has for removing these legacy powers. [136122]

Jacqui Smith: The Department has wide investigatory powers, principally under the following legislation:

Part 14 of the Companies Act 1985 (used to investigate the affairs of companies and related matters);

Part 11 of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (used to investigate financial services matters such as insider dealing);

the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949 (used to enforce against the criminal offences of unlicensed use of radio, deliberate interference, hoax calls and the sale, advertising or possession of certain restricted radio apparatus); the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (used in criminal investigations conducted by the Department to gain access to 'special procedure' material under a court order).

However, these powers will henceforth be subject to the approved RIPA regime.

The Department is a relevant public authority for the purposes of Part 2 (surveillance and covert human intelligence sources) of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 (RIPA) and is intended also to become a designated public authority for the purposes of Chapter 2 of Part 1 (acquisition and disclosure of communications data). RIPA does not amend or replace any of the Department's statutory investigatory powers. However, the Department's existing powers to compel production of information will not be used to compel disclosure of communications data by service providers when (subject to Parliament's approval) Chapter 2 of Part 1 of RIPA is fully in force.

The Department's Radiocommunications Agency ['RA'], has investigatory powers under the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949 and related legislation. However, responsibility for management of civil radio spectrum use will pass to OFCOM on 29th December 2003 under the Communications Act 2003. The position with regard to the exercise of RA's powers is currently the same as the Department's.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the additional £98 million funding for renewable energy capital grant programme to 2006 is being allocated to (a) offshore wind, (b) solar PV and (c) biomass. [139492]

Mr. Timms: A little under 50 per cent. of this funding has been committed to Round 1 offshore wind projects, reflecting the importance of offshore wind to meeting the Government's 2010 renewable energy target. It is intended that decisions on the allocation of the remaining funding will be taken in the first half of 2004.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much capital grant funding she will make available for large scale solar PV projects in (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [139493]

Mr. Timms: The notional budget for Stream 2 (medium and large-scale projects) is £12 million over the first phase of the Major PV Demonstration Programme. So far, around £9 million has been allocated over five rounds, and we plan to run three further rounds in 2003–04. This will require some over-committing of funds in the expectation that a certain proportion of projects will not go ahead. Any extra funding allocation for 2004–05 will have to await the outcome of the Renewables Innovation Review around the turn of the year.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much private sector investment there has been in UK based solar PV manufacturing since the start of her Department's major demonstration programme phase one. [139494]

Mr. Timms: We do not have precise figures for this, but the recent announcements by Romag, Marley, BP Solar and Sharp lead us to believe that a significant UK manufacturing base is beginning to develop in response to the first phase of the Major Photovoltaic Demonstration Programme.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many new installers were registered under her Department's solar PV major demonstration programme in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003. [139495]

Mr. Timms: Before the start of the Major Photovoltaics Demonstration Programme in April 2002, it is estimated that there were less than a dozen companies in the UK capable of doing PV installations.

In 2002–03 the programme had 16 fully accredited and 13 provisionally accredited installers. In the first half of 2003–04 there was one further fully accredited and four more provisionally accredited installers, taking the total to 35 different installers.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many jobs have been created in the UK solar PV industry since the start of the major demonstration programme phase one. [139496]

Mr. Timms: We do not have precise figures for this, but the number of new installers and increases in staffing in existing design/installation companies, as well as the recent announcements by Romag and Sharp, lead us to believe that several hundred new jobs will have been created by March 2004.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria her Department will use to assess the success of the solar PV major demonstration programme phase one. [139497]

Mr. Timms: A range of criteria will be used to assess the success of the First Phase of the Major PV Demonstration Programme, including:

Raising awareness of PV in the UK

Achieving the target number of installations and installed capacity

Reduction in the cost of PV systems

Development of an installer base

Development of a UK PV industry

Overall value for money of the programme

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the totally installed capacity is of Solar PV in the United Kingdom. [139529]

Mr. Timms: At the end of 2002 the estimated total installed capacity in the UK was 4.14MWp. By the end of 2003 we expect this to have risen by at least 50 per cent.

Vanco v. BT

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the implications of the case of Vanco v BT; and if she will make a statement. [139548]

Mr. Timms: This is a matter for the Director General of Telecommunications, whose decision was published on 10 February 2003. I welcome the rapid and decisive action taken following the Director General's investigation.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan/Iraq

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the number and (b) the value of Urgent Operational Requirements for Operation Fingal and for Operation Telic 1, showing (i) in which financial year the costs of UORs fall, (ii) how much has been funded from reserves, and (iii) how much has been or will eventually be funded from within the Ministry of Defence's existing budgets instead of from a permanent transfer from the contingency reserve. [137723]

Mr. Ingram: Information on Urgent Operational Requirements (UORs) for Operation Fingal is not held separately from those for overall operations in Afghanistan under Operation Veritas. A total of 113 UORs were agreed for these operations at an approved cost of £155 million, split between financial years 2001–02 and 2002–03. UORs for these operations were funded from the Reserve, under a special arrangement agreed with the Treasury.

Over 190 UOR measures were agreed for Operation Telic 1, at an approved cost of some £510 million falling in financial years 2002–03 and 2003–04. All these UORs are again funded from the Reserve, as agreed with the Treasury, as part of the overall additional costs of Operation Telic. A number of Operation Telic UORs have brought forward planned expenditure already contained within the forward equipment programme. Where that provision is no longer needed, we expect to reimburse the Treasury for an appropriate amount. A precise figure has yet to be established, but the key point is that the defence budget is neither penalised nor gains windfall benefits as a result of pulling forward expenditure in this way.

Where equipment bought through the UOR process is retained after an operation has completed, appropriate provision needs to be made for downstream support costs. Such decisions on whether or not to keep UORs in service are considered in the normal Departmental planning round alongside other potential equipment enhancements.

Army (Non-UK Citizens)

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by country of origin, the numbers of non-UK citizens who have joined the Army in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [137486]

Mr. Caplin: For the last five financial years the intake of Regular Army personnel with a nationality recorded as being other than United Kingdom was as follows:

Colombia

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will suspend military aid to Colombia until the Colombian Government takes action to comply with UN recommendations on human rights. [138945]

Mr. Ingram: British military assistance to Colombia includes bomb disposal training and provision of British military education. It complements Colombian efforts to reduce the number of deaths, both civilian and military, from explosive devices, and introduces Colombian military personnel to British defence concepts in key areas such as Rules of Engagement and democratic and accountable control of the armed forces. In view of the clear humanitarian benefits this British military assistance offers to the Colombian people, we do not intend to suspend it.

D-Day

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what plans the Government have to celebrate the 60th anniversary of D-Day; and if he will make a statement; [135516]

(2) what funding has been allocated by the Government for the commemoration of the 60th anniversary of D-Day; [135519]

(3) what representations he has received from the (a) Normandy Veterans Association, (b) British Legion and (c) other bodies concerning the commemoration on the 60th anniversary of D-Day; [135520]

(4) how the Government will be represented at celebrations to mark the 60th anniversary of D-Day in France. [135521]

Mr. Caplin: Details of the Government's position on the 60th anniversary of D-Day were outlined in my letter to all Members of the House of 7 July 2003 and updated in my reply to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 11 November, Official Report, columns 27–31WH. Further resources to those referred to as part of routine deployments may also be in attendance but it is too early to provide details at this stage. I announced on 17 September that arrangements had been made with P&O Ferries to offer subsidised tickets to veterans travelling to France in 2004. My hon. Friend the Minister of State at the Home Office (Beverley Hughes) announced on 4 June that one year free passports would be made available to eligible veterans travelling to France in 2004.

Since the beginning of 2002 MOD officials have had two meetings with representatives of the Normandy Veterans Association (NVA). The Department has received ten letters from hon. Members and five direct from members of the public relating to the NVA. The Department also received 36 letters from hon. Members as a result of a letter sent by The Royal British Legion (TRBL) in June of this year to all hon. Members. There have also been one written and two oral parliamentary questions in the House of Lords, eight written parliamentary questions in the House of Commons, 39 letters from hon. Members and 39 letters direct from members of the public which did not specifically represent the NVA or TRBL.

The Government intend to be properly represented at both ministerial and senior armed forces level at all major events next June and officials in the royal household will respond when the invitations have been received from the French Government.

Defence Estates (Pilning Range)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the land owned by Defence Estates South West at Pilning Range will be subject to an open market bidding process when it is sold; and if he will make a statement. [138967]

Mr. Caplin: Under the terms of the Joint Declaration of Intent between Ministry of Defence and English Nature the MOD will give advance warning to English Nature of any intended disposal of land wholly or partially notified as a Site of Special Scientific Interest (SSSI). English Nature may then advise MOD on ways to secure wildlife opportunities and to nominate a suitable purchaser. This procedure has operated in the case of Pilning Range, and English Nature have nominated the Avon Wildlife Trust as a suitable purchaser. The balance of the site not purchased by the Wildlife Trust will be offered by open and public competition.

Defence Export Services

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations have been made to him from (a) other governments and (b) foreign non-governmental organisations on the Defence Services export international arms fair held in London. [138567]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has received letters and comments of thanks from many of the official overseas defence delegations that attended the Defence Systems and Equipment International exhibition.

I am unaware of any representations from foreign non-governmental organisations.

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research he has (a) initiated and (b) evaluated on the effects of depleted uranium on British (i) service personnel and (ii) civilians; and if he will make a statement. [138794]

Mr. Caplin: We are currently initiating research to provide an understanding of the extent of any depleted uranium intake by United Kingdom ground forces during Operation TELIC.

In accordance with the Biological Monitoring Policy for DU on Operations all regular and reservist service personnel and attached civilians who deployed on Operation TELIC are entitled to a urine test on their return if they wish. To provide a baseline for comparison we have asked the Institute of Occupation Medicine in Edinburgh to carry out a study to establish normative values for uranium and its isotopes in urine of a military population which did not deploy.

The Ministry of Defence is currently placing contracts for the collection and analysis of urine samples for the voluntary screening programme for DU for veterans of the 1990–91 Gulf Conflict and service in the Balkans. In the event that DU is detected, any links between DU exposure and ill health will be investigated by means of an epidemiological study. A study to establish normative values for uranium and its isotopes in urine in a United Kingdom civilian population is also being commissioned.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent evidence he has collated relating to Gulf War Syndrome; what studies have been commissioned by him in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [132694]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 20 October 2003]: The Government's position remains as set out in my answers of 23 June 2003, Official Report, columns 687–89W. The fact that the Government does not recognise "Gulf War Syndrome" as a medical condition does not mean that veterans cannot claim war pensions: war pensions are paid on the basis of disability, not diagnosis.

Full details of all the research studies related to Gulf veterans' illnesses which are being funded by the Government are available on the Internet at: www.mod.uk.issues/gulfwar/research.htm.

A considerable amount of research into Gulf veterans' illnesses has been undertaken in the United States and its Department of Defense have also funded research in the United Kingdom. There is scientific evidence that some veterans of the 1990–91 Gulf conflict report a number of recognised medical conditions. However, the overwhelming consensus of the scientific and medical community is that there is insufficient evidence to enable this ill-health to be characterised as a unique illness, condition or 'syndrome'.

Inquiries

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list outstanding inquiries relating to operations in (a) Afghanistan and (b) Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [131994]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 16 October 2003]: There are no outstanding boards of inquiry or Special Investigation Branch investigations relating to operations in Afghanistan.

As at 31 October there were 35 boards of inquiry outstanding from operations in Iraq. Boards of inquiry often require a year or more to complete to ensure that the incident in question can be properly considered and the correct conclusions drawn. There are 44 outstanding Special Investigation Branch investigations relating to operations in Iraq, some of which are being conducted in support of the 35 boards of inquiry.

Further details of the inquiries and investigations are being withheld under exemptions 1 and 12 of the Code of Practice on access to government information.

Iraq

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British wounded have been brought back from Iraq since United Kingdom military action began in March. [132206]

Mr. Ingram: Since the beginning of the decisive combat operations in Iraq on 19 March 2003 and as at 14 November 2003, 145 United Kingdom military personnel have been wounded in action, of whom 74 needed to be brought back to the UK for medical treatment.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the success of measures taken to avoid using cluster munitions near civilian areas in Iraq. [135854]

Mr. Ingram: We made every effort to minimise the impact on the Iraqi population of the coalition's military action. Cluster munitions were employed against Iraqi armoured formations in the open and on the periphery of built up areas.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reports he has received of former regime arms dumps within the British area of responsibility in Iraq; and what measures are being put in place to guard former regime arms dumps within the British area of responsibility. [134457]

Mr. Ingram: Since the end of major combat operations United Kingdom forces have discovered an average of about 45 new sites containing arms and/or munitions each week. The large amount of arms present in Iraq means that where arms are discovered we cannot always tell whether they were left by the former regime or by other organisations or individuals. All sites containing arms or munitions are marked and then cleared once resources permit. Sites containing large numbers of arms are guarded by UK forces until they can be cleared.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the level of priority given to (a) avoiding civilian casualties and (b) ensuring the security of British troops in respect of unexploded ordnance clearance in Iraq. [135855]

Mr. Ingram: The provision of a safe, secure and risk free environment for the Iraqi people is a key aspect of reconstruction activity for all members of the International Coalition in Iraq. The United Kingdom takes seriously its obligations as a member of that coalition to deal with unexploded ordnance.

We afford a high priority to avoiding any injury or casualty from unexploded ordnance. Clearance operations are performed by specialists to minimise the chances of accidents occurring.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) gun and (b) bomb attacks there were on British troops in the provinces of (i) Basra City and (c) Maysan, broken down by type of incident and weapons used since 1 May, indicating in each case how many (A) British troops and (B) Iraqi civilians were (1) killed and (2) injured in each incident; and if he will make a statement. [136604]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 10 November 2003]: Many of the following figures have been compiled under operational conditions and may therefore be subject to future refinement and revision. Figures were not collected before 1 June.

Between 1 June and 17 October 2003 (the date of the last update) there were 108 deliberate attacks on coalition forces in the United Kingdom led Multi-National Division South East MND(SE) area of operations.

In the same period there were 101 contact incidents (in which coalition forces have been caught up in tribal feuding or attempted crimes but were not the object of the attack) in Basrah Province and 23 contact incidents in Maysan Province. 88 of these contact incidents involved British Forces.

Five incidents (including one outside the MND(SE) area) resulted in the deaths of British personnel as follows:

Date	Casualties	Nature of incident	Firearms or Bomb
24 June	6 Killed	Ambush of Royal Military Police patrol in Al Majir Al Kabir.	Firearms
14 August	1 Killed	Roadside improvised explosive. device detonated as military ambulance drove by. Basrah.	Bomb
23 August	3 Killed	Ambush of RMP in Basrah.	Firearms
27 August	1 Killed	Ambush in Basrah.	Firearms
31 October	1 Killed	Ambush in Baghdad.	Firearms

23 British soldiers have been injured in these attacks, 10 with gunshot wounds and 13 with other types of injury.

We have no reliable figures on Iraqi casualties as collection is virtually impossible: enemy forces frequently remove their casualties from the scene or seek to blame the coalition for casualties they could not possibly have caused. Of those incidents notified to British forces there are currently 22 Special Investigation Branch Investigations involving 17 deaths of and a number of injuries to Iraqis allegedly caused by British personnel.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Iraqis are being interned by the British forces because they are perceived to be a threat to coalition forces; how long each such person has been held; what plans the British authorities in Basra have for such people; and if he will make a statement. [136606]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 10 November 2003]: As at 13 November, there were 125 Iraqis being interned by the British Forces because they were considered to be a threat to Coalition Forces. The maximum length of time that any person has been held is just under six months; the least one week. Every 28 days, a review is conducted to determine whether continued internment is necessary. Procedures are in place to allow internees to appeal against their continued internment. Individuals will continue to be held until such time as they are no longer considered a threat to Coalition Forces.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence by what means UK forces in Iraq have sought to confirm whether civilian fatalities have occurred during incidents involving the use of firearms and other lethal force by UK military personnel since the end of the conflict. [136923]

Mr. Ingram: UK forces in Iraq seek to confirm whether civilian fatalities have occurred during incidents involving the use of firearms and other lethal force by UN military personnel since the end of the conflict by the use of appropriate policing techniques as the operational situation allows.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the security situation in Iraq. [139376]

Mr. Ingram: Iraq continues to make progress and is broadly stable. The majority of incidents occur around Baghdad. Throughout the country increasing numbers of Iraqi police are on patrol, reconstruction of essential services and infrastructure continues and most of the population go about their daily lives without hindrance.

Attacks such as that on the Italian headquarters in Nasiriyah are the work of a violent few. Innocent Iraqi civilians have died in these attacks: they are as much victims of the terrorists as coalition forces.

Coalition forces and the Iraqi police are working hard to provide a safe and secure environment. They will not be deflected from that mission.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures are being taken to fit British military vehicles in Iraq with vehicle protection kits. [139615]

Mr. Ingram: Following public disorder events in Iraq during August, a requirement was identified to fit Vehicle Protection Kits (VPK) to a range of Combat Support Vehicles. Delivery to theatre began in mid August and should be completed by the end of February 2004.

In addition, the requirement to equip battlefield engineering and plant vehicles deployed to Iraq with VPKs is currently being assessed.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average cost is per day, per person, of the food provided to British security personnel in Iraq. [129997]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence identifies the costs of Operations in terms of the net additional costs it has incurred. The costs, which the MOD would have incurred had the operation not been undertaken—expenditure on wages and salaries or on conducting training exercises for example—are deducted from the total costs of the operation.

The cost of food is not identified separately, but is contained within stock consumption, along with ammunition, clothing and vehicle and equipment spares for example. Costs are not incurred on a regular daily basis and force levels have fluctuated considerably. As a result, to attempt to provide monthly average costs would be misleading.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what rotation schedule is expected for troops in Iraq. [130279]

Mr. Ingram: The majority of United Kingdom military units deployed to Iraq undertake tours of either four or six months depending on the role they perform. This can be varied according to operational requirements. There is also some variation in cases of individual personnel who may be required to deploy for longer or short periods.

ITAR Waiver

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has held with his counterpart in the US Administration about the stance taken by (a) the Senate and (b) the House of Representatives to the US Administration's proposals for an ITAR waiver for the UK. [138603]

Mr. Hoon: I have had discussions with and written to the US Defense Secretary about the progress through Congress of legislation to allow for a waiver for the United Kingdom from the US International Traffic in Arms Regulations, and emphasised the importance the UK attaches to the successful implementation of a waiver.

King's Own Scottish Borderers

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the King's Own Scottish Borderers are due to finish their deployment in Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [133651]

Mr. Ingram: The Kings Own Scottish Borderers began returning to the United Kingdom in mid-October and all had returned by the end of the month.

Operation Telic

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 1 September 2003, Official Report, column 915W, and the answer to the hon. Member for Portsmouth South (Mr. Hancock) of 15 September 2003, Official Report, column 509W, on Operation Telic, when he expects investigations into the fratricide incidents involving United Kingdom forces during Operation Telic to be complete; whether the families of the United Kingdom personnel involved are being advised of developments; and when the outcome of these inquiries will be made public. [134471]

Mr. Ingram: Investigations into incidents of fratricide involving UK forces will take as long as necessary to uncover and accurately assess and interpret all the possible evidence.

The families of those involved will be kept informed as matters develop. All will have access to a specialist staff officer from the relevant service.

As I informed the House on 15 September 2003, Official Report, column 509W, we will make a summary of the reports' conclusions available, but only after all related proceedings are entirely complete. To do otherwise would be to risk prejudicing those other proceedings.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 20 October 2003, Official Report, column 375W, on parliamentary questions, how many questions tabled to his Department by the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South have not been answered within the target times set by the Department. [134734]

Mr. Caplin: Up to 22 October, 196 written questions had been received during this session. 67 (34 per cent.) were not answered within the target of five sitting days.

Saudi Arabia

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many claims for payment by the Saudi Government have been endorsed by staff of his Department's Director General of the Saudi Armed Forces Project since the Al Yamamah programme began; what the total value of these claims is; and what each of the claims endorsed since 1997 have been in respect of. [137235]

Mr. Ingram: Details of the number of claims are not normally recorded and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. The total number will run into tens of thousands. Details of individual claims since 1997 could only be provided at disproportionate cost. All claims cover goods and services supplied by the Prime Contractor to Saudi Arabia.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff of his Department's Director General of the Saudi Armed Forces Project are based in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Saudi Arabia; and what proportion of their salaries is met by (i) his Department and (ii) BAE Systems. [137236]

Mr. Ingram: Under the Department's Director General of the Saudi Armed Forces Project there are currently 111 staff directly employed in the United Kingdom and 65 staff in Saudi Arabia. The UK MOD receives a management fee from the Saudi Arabian Government for its management of the programme. All costs of the team, including salaries, are met from this fee.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what conditions relating to (a) security sector reform and (b) human rights are included in the contracts governing the Al Yamamah programme; and if he will make a statement. [137764]

Mr. Ingram: There are none. The Saudi authorities are well aware of the importance we attach to the full respect of human rights.

Technology Transfer Contracts

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) technology transfer contracts from his Department to Scottish companies and (b) technology transfer contracts per Scottish company, including the values, there were in each year since 1999; and if he will make a statement. [138572]

Mr. Caplin: I assume the hon. Member refers to my reply to him of 4 November 2003, Official Report, column 613W concerning Defence Diversification Agency (DDA) operations in Scotland. Contracts are only one measure of technology transfer. The DDA, which acts as a broker, assists companies in various ways including putting them in touch with defence scientists and programme managers. Contracts between the two parties may result and the DDA is currently aware of 16 technology transfer contracts with organisations based in Scotland since 1999. Individual details and financial value of these contracts are subject to confidentiality agreements and are withheld under Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Territorial Army

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to help recruit doctors into the Territorial Army. [138951]

Mr. Caplin: The recruitment of doctors, nurses and other healthcare professionals is currently the Territorial Army's (TA) highest recruitment priority and additional funding is being made available in support of this goal.

Steps being taken to aid recruitment include twice yearly visits by recruitment teams to selected NHS Trusts; attendance by the TA Medical Services at some 25 professional conferences/exhibitions; media advertising with a focused television campaign planned for transmission in early 2004. Work is also in place to ensure greater synergy between recruitment campaigns for the TA and Regular Army.

The recruitment of health care professionals into the TA Medical Services is supported by the Department of Health as part of the Improving Working Lives Initiative.

Terrorist Attacks

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps United Kingdom forces are taking to protect British citizens from terrorist attacks in (a) Afghanistan and (b) Iraq. [132122]

Mr. Ingram: United Kingdom Forces constantly review security arrangements for those British citizens under their care. For reasons of operational security it would be inappropriate to provide details of the measures in place and I am withholding that information under Exemption 1 (Defence, Security and International Relations) of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Unexploded Ordnance

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many children in Iraq have taken part in the Theatre Mine Risk education programme. [131238]

Mr. Ingram: Educating children in Iraq about the dangers of unexploded ordnance is currently the responsibility of four de-mining Non-Governmental Organisations operating in Iraq whose work is co-ordinated by the UN Mine Action Co-ordination Team. We do not hold data on how many children have taken part in their programmes.

Work-related Stress

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cases of work-related stress have been reported in his Department in each of the last three years; how much compensation has been paid to employees; how many work days have been lost due to work-related stress, and at what cost; what procedures have been put in place to reduce work-related stress, and at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [136847]

Mr. Caplin: I refer the hon. Member to my hon. Friend the Member for Kirkcaldy's (Dr. Moonie) letter of 27 March 2002 (reference: D/US of S/LM PQ 2584M) a copy of which is in the Library of the House. The position has not changed since that reply. I am able however to update the hon. Member concerning compensation cases and costs. The most recent figures are as follows:

Sector	Number of claims received in year	Settlements—compensation/legal fees paid in year (£)
Service
2000–01	2	0
2002–03	0	21,200
Civilian
2000–01	17	87,315
2001–02	25	6,015
2002–03	10	61,248

Compensation/legal fees paid in year do not necessarily relate to the number of claims received in the same year.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Indonesia

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance his Department has offered the Government of Indonesia for the reconstruction of Sumatra Island. [138753]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The UK has not been approached specifically to assist reconstruction in Sumatra. DFID is however working continuously with the international community and local and international NGOs to alleviate poverty in Indonesia and improve the lives of poor people. Such assistance is targeted where it is most needed. Should the need for further international assistance for Sumatra be demonstrated, we will work through our partners to ensure this is provided.

Palestine

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial aid the Occupied Palestinian Territories received from his Department in each of the last five years; and what provision his Department has made for aid to the Occupied Palestinan Territories in each of the next four years. [138375]

Hilary Benn: Bilateral financial aid to the Occupied Palestinian Territories, including support to UNRWA, over the last five years was as follows:

1998–99	8.5
1999–2000	21
2000–01	28
2001–02	39.5
2002–03	34

This financial year we plan to spend about £40.2 million.

In addition DFID provided, from 1998 to 2002, a total of approximately £132 million through the European Commission, and since 1994 to June this year approximately £12 million through the World Bank.

The department has made the following provisions for aid to the Occupied Palestinian Territories and UNRWA: 2004–05, £26.5 million and 2005–06, £26.5 million. We do not currently have planning figures beyond 2005–06. Our support through the EC and the World Bank will continue during this period.

Sub-Saharan Africa

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what the proportion of people living in poverty in sub-Saharan Africa was in each year since 1992; [139531]

(2) what proportion of people lived in poverty in (a) East Asia and (b) the Pacific in each of the last 10 years; [139536]

(3) what proportion of people lived in poverty in South Asia in each of the last 10 years. [139537]

Hilary Benn: The most recent estimates of the proportion of people living on less than $1 a day in 1990 and 2000 for East Asia and the Pacific, Sub Saharan Africa and South Asia are contained in the World Bank's 'Global Economic Prospects 2004'. Details are as follows:

	Percentage
	1990	2000
East Asia and Pacific	29.4	14.5
Sub Saharan Africa	47.4	49.0
South Asia	41.5	31.9

Information for intervening years is not available on a comparable basis.

Weapons Stocks

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial assistance the United Kingdom provides to governments in developing countries to reduce their weapons stocks; and what financial support is given to prevent the sale of military surpluses. [138607]

Hilary Benn: The UK Government fully supports the United Nations Programme of Action on Small Arms and Light Weapons (SALW) which commits governments including those of developing countries to dispose of small arms stocks, preferably by destruction, that are surplus to national requirements.

The UK Government is helping developing countries manage and reduce weapons stockpiles through its Global Conflict Prevention Pool SALW strategy. The UK is providing £7.5 million over three years to the Small Arms Destruction Unit (SADU) of UNDP's Bureau for Conflict Prevention and Recovery for weapons collection, management and destruction work in forty-five developing countries. Since the start of the programme in 2001 SADU have destroyed over 360,000 weapons and in excess of 24 million items of ammunition.

The UK Government is also providing £1.9 million for the development of 5-year National Action Plans in Tanzania, Kenya, Uganda, Mozambique and Namibia. These Plans will provide a comprehensive approach to weapons controls in these countries, and will include disarmament, destruction and weapons management elements. Two NGOs, Saferworld and SaferAfrica, are undertaking this work with the governments of these countries.

The UK seeks to address the problem comprehensively, rather than by earmarking funds to prevent any potential sales of military surpluses.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Solicitor-General how many staff were employed by the Crown Prosecution Service as (a) Grades 1–6, (b) legal assistance, (c) executive officers and (d) administrative officers; and how many in each category were (i) black and (ii) Asian. [138763]

The Solicitor-General: The number of staff employed by the Crown Prosecution Service in each category who have identified their ethnicity as being (i) black and (ii) Asian is summarised in the table:

Percentage

	Asian			Black
	2001	2002	2003	2001	2002	2003
Administrative Officers	5.9	5.6	6.4	5.6	5.3	5.5
Executive Officers	3.6	3.9	4.8	4.1	4.3	5.5
Legal Assistance	3.6	5.0	5.1	2.6	3.5	3.8
Grades 1–6	2.1	2.3	3.0	1.6	0.0	1.2
Grand Total	4.4	4.8	5.4	4.1	4.3	4.9

The percentages are based on the number of staff who replied to the question asking them to state their ethnicity.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will make it the policy of the Crown Prosecution Service to pay fees to their legal advisers within 30 days. [138935]

The Solicitor-General: I can confirm that it is the Crown Prosecution Service's policy to pay invoices from all suppliers and service providers, including independent barristers, within 30 days of receipt of a valid claim or invoice.

Published data from the CPS Annual Report shows that in 2002–03, 81 per cent. of undisputed invoices were paid within 30 days of receipt.

Solicitors/Barristers

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Solicitor-General how many (a) solicitors and (b) barristers there are in England and Wales; and how many are (i) black and (ii) Asian. [138769]

The Solicitor-General: The Solicitor-General does not have ministerial responsibility for the Law Society or The General Council of the Bar, who are the professional bodies regulating solicitors and barristers, respectively.

Statistics in relation to the profession may be obtained directly from the professional bodies.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Alcohol Licences

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment her Department has made of the impact proposed increases in the cost of alcohol licences will have on (a) community clubs and (b) sports associations. [138602]

Estelle Morris: The proposed levels of fees for club premises certificates and premises licences under the Licensing Act 2003 will lead to an increase in licensing fees for some community clubs and sports associations operating either as qualifying clubs under club premises certificates or under premises licences though many will also see a reduction in fees.

Any increases will arise because fees have been estimated on the basis of the actual costs to the licensing authority. Current fees are not set on a full cost recovery basis by the magistrates' courts. This change has been made because we do not consider it appropriate for the taxpayer to subsidise the consumption of alcohol in sports clubs or any other premises.

Any increase in fees should not, however, have a significant impact on any of these clubs or associations. Small clubs are likely to pay around £100 in the first year of the new licensing regime and £50 in subsequent years. This means that, for example, for a club with 25 members, the minimum needed to qualify as a qualifying club, a club premises certificate would cost about £4 per member in the first year and £2 per member in subsequent years.

Aviation White Paper

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations her Department has made to the Department for Transport on the Aviation White Paper. [138727]

Estelle Morris: This Department has made a number of representations to the Department of Transport on a range of issues, including heritage and tourism, throughout the development of the Aviation White Paper.

Childhood Obesity

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what research she has commissioned into the effect of food advertising on levels of childhood obesity. [138741]

Estelle Morris: None. However, the Food Standards Agency has recently published a research review which it commissioned on this subject and the Department for Culture, Media and Sport is taking part in their consultations as well as other cross-Government initiatives to tackle obesity, notably the work of the Activity Co-ordination Team, aimed at increasing levels of physical activity.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received about (a) childhood obesity and (b) lack of access to sports facilities. [138742]

Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State regularly receives representations from hon. Members, and members of the public, on these subjects. This reflects the extent of public concern about growing rates of obesity among children, and of interest in community sport and activity facilities.

The Government fully shares both that concern, and that interest. The UK is now the most obese nation in Europe. Sedentary lifestyles—especially among young people—have greatly contributed to that. The Government are already investing substantial amounts in schools and community sports facilities. In schools, the New Opportunities Fund is investing £581 million in school sports facilities in England, and Space for Sport and the Arts is putting £130 million into primary school facilities. In communities, NOF is investing £256 million in healthy living centre projects, and £108.5 million in new community sports facilities. The Government are also investing £459 million in the PE, School Sport and Club Links Project, which aims to increase the proportion of schoolchildren receiving at least two hours a week of high quality PE and school sport to 75 per cent. by 2006.

The cross-Departmental Activity Co-ordination Team will produce a national strategy for physical activity next year.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with other departments about implementing a strategy to tackle childhood obesity. [138743]

Estelle Morris: Nine Government Departments are represented on the Activity Co-ordination Team (ACT) which was set up and is led jointly by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) and the Department of Health (DH) to tackle the increase in obesity rates and physical inactivity.

The group has met twice since 8 July 2003 and is due to meet again on 27 November 2003 under the chairmanship of my right hon. Friend the Minister for Sport and Tourism and my hon. Friend the Minister for Public Health.

Community Fund (Cheltenham)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many grants have been made from the Community Fund to projects in the Cheltenham constituency since its inception. [138910]

Estelle Morris: Since its inception, the Community Fund has made 62 grants, to a value of £2.68 million, to projects in the constituency of Cheltenham.

This information is derived from the Department's Awards Database and is based on information supplied by the distributing bodies.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much Lottery funding per capita has been awarded to (a) organisations in each of the regions in England and Wales and (b) organisations in the Vale of York in each of the past three years. [138783]

Estelle Morris: The following table shows how much Lottery funding per capita has been awarded to organisations in the Vale of York and each of the regions of England and Wales in each of the past three years.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many National Lottery ticket sales there were in the (a) GL50, (b) GL51, (c) GL52 and (d) GL53 postcode areas in each of the last 10 years; and how much was raised in each case. [138908]

Estelle Morris: The available information about National Lottery sales by postcode area is set out in the table placed in the Library, in response to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Morley and Rothwell (Mr. Challen) on 22 October 2002, Official Report, columns 182–83W. I will provide an update of the table to the hon. Member as soon as it is available, and place a copy in the Libraries of both Houses.

Market Research

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list each item of market and opinion research commissioned since May 1997 by (a) her Department and (b) agencies and non-departmental public bodies for which her Department is responsible; what the purpose of each item was; and whether the results were published. [137012]

Estelle Morris: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The following table lists those items of market and opinion research undertaken by the Department.

Name	Year	Purpose	Published
Culture Online (Omnibus of Market and Opinion Research)	2000–01	To establish the current usage of Arts and Culture websites and what new services would be values by different groups of users	Yes. Culture Online Website

Secondments

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people from science and technology backgrounds have been seconded into the Civil Service in her Department in each of the last five years for which data are available. [138625]

Estelle Morris: This Department does not maintain a central record of the background of secondees: secondees remain employees of their seconding organisation, which holds records on their previous employment or educational background. This information could therefore only be provided at a disproportionate cost.

Television Advertising

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what estimate she has made of the revenue received by each of the commercial television channels from selling advertising airtime slots for food and drink products in each of the last five years; [138677]

(2) what estimate she has made of the percentage of revenue gained from selling advertising airtime during children's television scheduling which was used to (a) buy in and (b) make children's television programmes by each of the commercial television channels in each of the last five years; [138678]

(3) what information her Department collates on the revenue spent by commercial television companies to (a) buy in and (b) commission children's television programmes. [138679]

Estelle Morris: The Department has not collated or made estimates of such data. However, we understand from figures made available by ITV to the Independent Television Commission that the total programme budget for Children's ITV in 2002 was £37.5 million and the total value of the breaks for food and drink brands in Children's ITV aimed at children was £17.3 million.

Website

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent assessment she has made of the content and design of her Department's website. [139369]

Estelle Morris: The Department's website was redesigned earlier this year, at which time a thorough assessment of both content and design was undertaken. Content is regularly reviewed and where appropriate, updated daily. The design has not been reviewed in the last 11 months, but will be revisited early in 2004.

The website is currently being audited by the RNIB as part of a work programme to ensure information is accessible to people with visual impairment.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

First World War Battlefields

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) he and (b) other Departments have had with the Government of Belgium to (i) preserve First World War battlefields which lie on the route of the A11 motorway and (ii) secure the appropriate treatment of British Servicemen's remains. [139030]

Mr. Caplin: Neither the Ministry of Defence, nor the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, has had any discussions on this subject with the Belgian Government. However, the Commonwealth War Graves Commission continues to monitor the effects of the A19 extension scheme. We fully expect the Belgian Government to adhere to existing procedures for dealing with the remains of British Servicemen discovered during the course of the extension of the A19 motorway. This would entail the eventual interment of remains in a Commonwealth War Graves Commission cemetery in Belgium.

Colombia

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Ayr (Sandra Osborne) of 30 June 2003, Official Report, column 64W, what reports he has received of what was said by President Uribe of Colombia in his meeting with NGOs on 11 June; and what his assessment is of the significance of the President's comments. [136310]

Mr. Rammell: We saw various press reports and received the views of the NGO community at the time of President Uribe's comments of 11 June. We do not believe it productive to enter into a public debate on these comments. It is more important to continue to underline the need for the Colombian Government to implement their commitments as set out in the London Declaration concerning respect for the rule of law, human rights and international humanitarian law when tackling the problems it faces. I made this point when I met the Colombian Foreign Minister in New York on 23 September 2003.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what practical help has been provided to the Colombian Government in accordance with commitments given at the London conference in July 2003. [136987]

Mr. Rammell: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my noble Friend the Baroness Symons of Vernham Dean gave to the noble Lord, the Lord Avebury in another place on 6 November 2003, Official Report, column WA137.

Correspondence

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will reply to the letter of 20 August 2003 from the Member for Banff and Buchan to the hon. Member for North Warwickshire concerning animal welfare and trade liberalisation. [136759]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I apologise for the delay in reply, which was due to an administrative error. The letter has now been transferred to my hon. Friend the Minister for Nature, Conservation and Fisheries (Mr. Bradshaw) on 5 November 2003, who will reply shortly. This should have happened before.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans his Department has made to investigate British companies named in the final report of the UN Panel of Experts on the Illegal Exploitation of Natural Resources in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [136559]

Mr. Timms: I have been asked to reply.

The Government take allegations against UK companies in any UN Panel's report seriously. If we are provided with sufficient evidence that a company has broken UK law, we will take action.

Separately, the DTI, acting as National Contact Point (NCP) for the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) Guidelines, is aware of the Panel's report and potential cases arising from it. The role of the NCP is to facilitate a dialogue between the two parties with a view to resolving the issues raised. In this situation, however, the NCP cannot mediate between the parties as the Expert Panel has disbanded on the expiry of its mandate (31 October). The evidence that has been supplied to the NCP by the UN Panel, after several requests by HMG, is general in content and relates only to some of the named companies. DTI will therefore have difficulty progressing these cases, under the Guidelines, on the basis of what has been provided so far.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what independent mechanisms exist for the United Nations Panel on the Democratic Republic of the Congo to pursue its investigations into the exploitation of the Congo's natural resources; and what the policy of the Government is in relation to the establishment of such independent capability. [137619]

Mr. Straw: The Expert Panel on the Illegal Exploitation of Natural Resources in the DRC disbanded on the expiry of its mandate (31 October 2003). I am not aware of any other independent mechanisms that exist for the Panel to pursue its investigations.

We have taken the allegations against UK companies in all of the UN Panel's reports very seriously. The report's proposals for preventing the re-occurrence of illegal exploitation are helpful. If we are provided with evidence that a company has broken UK law, we will take legal action. But this latest report fails to substantiate allegations made against UK companies in earlier reports. The evidence that has been supplied to the DTI, the National Contact Point for Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) Guidelines, is circumstantial and general in content. DTI is seeking clarification.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has received from British-based individuals and companies relating to the release of information about such companies and individuals by the UN Panel on the Democratic Republic of the Congo in its recent report; and if he will make a statement. [137620]

Mr. Straw: The Department of Trade and Industry, acting as the National Contact Point (NCP) for the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) guidelines on Multi National Enterprises (MNEs), has been approached by three companies named in the final UN Panel report. Details of these exchanges will remain confidential under the provisions of the Guidelines. We are still waiting for evidence to be supplied by the Panel on a number of UK companies named in the report. We will publish a statement on the report once all the evidence has been received by the NCP (DTI) and the necessary next steps have been taken.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the United Kingdom made to the UN in relation to United Kingdom-based individuals and companies mentioned in the report on the Democratic Republic of the Congo; and if he will make a statement. [137621]

Mr. Straw: The Department for Trade and Industry, acting as the National Contact Point (NCP) for the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) guidelines on Multi National Enterprises (MNEs), contacted the UN Expert Panel on the illegal exploitation of natural resources in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) on three separate occasions, (between April and September 2003), to request information to substantiate allegations made against UK companies and individuals in its earlier reports. The UK Deputy Permanent representative to the UN in New York asked Ambassador Kassem, the chair of the Expert Panel, personally for further information on the named UK companies and individuals on 11 March 2003. An official from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office also wrote to Ambassador Kassem on 29 May with the same request. On 6 October 2003, an official from our High Commission in Nairobi contacted the political officer of the Panel to request the information. We continue to take every opportunity to seek to clarify the allegations made against UK companies and individuals.

Guantanamo Bay

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government are making on behalf of the welfare and human rights of the non-British detainees at Guantanamo Bay. [137001]

Mr. MacShane: The focus of the Government's representations to the US authorities has been on how to resolve the position of the UK detainees held in Guantanamo Bay.

Our hope, however, is that the issues raised will be reflected in the treatment of other countries' detainees.

Middle East

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 22 October 2003, Official Report, column 617W, on the Middle East, whether Article 147 of the Fourth Geneva Convention is one of the pieces of international law with which he believes the actions of the Israeli Government to be inconsistent. [136739]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 10 November 2003]: The Government believe that the deportation by the state of Israel of persons against whom no charges have been laid may be inconsistent with the provisions of the Fourth Geneva Convention, including Article 147.

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of whether the US Administration's plans for new low yield nuclear weapons will comply with that country's obligations under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. [137590]

Mr. MacShane: The United States declared a continuing and firm commitment to its obligations under the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) at the Preparatory Committee (PrepCom) meeting earlier this year. In a fact sheet circulated at the PrepCom, the United States further declared that it was not developing, testing or producing any nuclear warheads, that there was no current requirement for a new nuclear warhead, and that it maintained its moratorium on nuclear testing.

Nuclear Weapons

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals the UK will put forward to strengthen the comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty at the preparatory conference, Twenty-First session, to be held from 10 to 14 November 2003. [137940]

Mr. MacShane: The Twenty-First Session of the Preparatory Commission (Prepcom) of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT), which took place in Vienna from 10 to 14 November 2003, dealt primarily with the 2004 Budget for the Provisional Technical Secretariat. The CTBT has yet to enter into force and the Prepcom has no powers to strengthen the Treaty itself. The UK has always been at the forefront of efforts to maintain the build-up of the Treaty's International Monitoring System. We consider it a priority to ensure that the Treaty's verification requirements can be met at entry into force and will continue to provide appropriate assistance to promote this end.

Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what statutory investigatory powers the Department has; which ones will be superseded by use of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000; and what plans he has for removing these legacy powers. [136121]

Mr. Straw: My Department has no such investigatory powers.

President Bush (State Visit)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what basis it was decided to make the forthcoming visit of President Bush an official state visit. [139412]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: President and Mrs. Bush have been invited to visit Britain as guests of Her Majesty The Queen. This is an opportunity to celebrate the many dimensions of the UK's long-standing relationship with the United States, which includes strong cultural and economic ties and goes much wider than the political relationship. Each state visit is considered on an individual basis, underlining the relationship between the UK and the nation of the visiting Head of State. On this basis, it is appropriate for the visit to be a state visit.

PRIME MINISTER

House of Lords

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister how many applicants for a people's peerage since April 2002 were acquainted with a Commissioner of the House of Lords Appointments Commission. [138661]

The Prime Minister: Between 1 April 2002 and 31 August 2003, House of Lords Appointments Commission members were acquainted with 13 out of the 94 people from whom the Commission received nominations.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of those peers created since 1997, with particular reference to people's peers. [139431]

The Prime Minister: None. It is not for the Prime Minister to make an assessment of the effectiveness of members of the House of Lords.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish the timetable for creating further people's peers. [139433]

The Prime Minister: I have invited the House of Lords Appointments Commission to recommend a small number of non-party-political peers. I understand that the Commission is currently considering nominations and will make an announcement in due course.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister how many of those aspiring people's peers who were invited to interview but who were unsuccessful have indicated that they no longer wish their application to be reconsidered. [139746]

The Prime Minister: One.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister how many aspiring people's peers who were invited to interview but were not subsequently recommended for elevation to the peerage requested feedback from the Commission as to why they were unsuccessful. [139747]

The Prime Minister: None. The House of Lords Appointments Commission made clear in its information pack at the start of the process that it would not provide feedback on unsuccessful nominations.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister how many applications for a people's peerage have been received since April 2001 from hereditary peers who no longer have the right to sit in the House of Lords. [139748]

The Prime Minister: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost and in breach of the House of Lords Appointments Commission's undertakings to treat all personal information in individual applications in strict confidence.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answers of 13 November 2003, Official Report, columns 429–30W, on the House of Lords, what initiatives the House of Lords Appointments Commission is planning to increase the number of applications from aspiring people's peers. [139794]

The Prime Minister: The House of Lords Appointments Commission keeps its plans for attracting new nominations under review.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answers of 13 November 2003, Official Report, columns 429–30W, on the House of Lords, whether any of the applications received since April 2001 were from (a) knights or dames, (b) professors and (c) persons holding the OBE or CBE; and if he will list the employment categories of applicants in work. [139795]

The Prime Minister: Yes. The Commission does not record figures because it is not pertinent to the Commission's consideration of nominations. The Commission does not ask applicants for information about their occupation or employment status as it does not wish to discourage people with outstanding achievements in areas unconnected with how they might earn their living.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answers of 13 November 2003, Official Report, columns 429–30W, on the House of Lords, if he will ask the House of Lords Appointments Commission to hold a meeting in Pendle to encourage people there to think about putting themselves forward as a people's peer. [139796]

The Prime Minister: No. The House of Lords Appointments Commission is independent and it is for them to decide on their programme of meetings.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Prime Minister how much was paid to Microsoft in licensing fees by the Prime Minister's Office in each of the last three years; and how much has been budgeted for (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [130675]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Minister for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Alexander) gave to him today.

President Bush (State Visit)

Richard Burden: To ask the Prime Minister if he will raise the issue of Israel's construction of the Security Wall with President Bush during his visit; and if he will report to the House the outcome of those discussions. [138943]

The Prime Minister: I expect to cover a range of issues of common interest with President Bush. I have regular discussions with him on a wide range of international issues including the Middle East Peace Process.

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister whether he intends to discuss with President Bush the subject of the United States ratifying the Kyoto Treaty during the President's forthcoming visit. [139395]

The Prime Minister: I expect to cover a range of issues of common interest with President Bush. My regular discussions with him include energy policy and climate change. The government welcomes the US's recognition that climate change is a serious problem and the fact that it is taking domestic action.

The UK is fully committed to the Kyoto Protocol, with its binding targets and timetables, which is designed to deliver absolute global emissions reductions.

The UK will work with other governments to develop the technologies needed to reduce global emissions further in the longer term.

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what the estimated total cost to public funds is of the forthcoming state visit of President Bush. [139413]

The Prime Minister: The estimates have not yet been completed as the final details of the programme are still being agreed. We expect the costs falling to Grant-in-Aid to be in line with previous state visits. The policing costs are met by the Metropolitan Police.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Lettings (SE1)

Kate Hoey: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, how many dwellings in Mitre Road, Ufford Street and

Webber Street, London SE1 have been let at open market rents since the Church Commissioners changed their lettings policy for this estate. [139238]

Mr. Bell: Since the change in the letting policy, the Commissioners have let 7 of these properties on the open market. A further 2 properties are at various stages of the letting process.

Over the same period, there have also been 17 lettings on non-market tenancies on the same part of the estate either because of transfers or change of tenancy on succession.

VAT Group

Miss McIntosh: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Brussels with the Church of England VAT Group to meet (a) UK Permanent Representation officials and (b) Commissioner Bolkestein. [138837]

Mr. Bell: The Church VAT Group was grateful for the chance to reiterate the case for a reduced rate of VAT for repairs and maintenance to listed places of worship during the recent visit to Brussels. The UK permanent representative office was very clear about the support of the UK Government for our case and their commitment to argue for it at every level up to the Council of Ministers.

Commissioner Bolkestein received our presentation with much interest. Clearly, with negotiations still ongoing, involving discussion of the many different EU Member States' aspirations, he was not prepared to anticipate what the final outcome would be during his meeting with us.

NORTHERN IRELAND

All Ireland Sports Development Conference

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the Irish Sports Council is contributing to the costs of the All Ireland Sports Development Conference on 20 and 21 November; and what the total cost to the Sports Council of Northern Ireland of the Conference is. [138463]

Angela Smith: The hosting of All Island Sports Development Conference is rotated every two years between the Sports Council for Northern Ireland and the Irish Sports Council. This year the Sports Council for Northern Ireland is hosting the event. The host council meets the direct costs of the event and the Sports Council for Northern Ireland will meet the direct running costs for the 2003 All-Island Sports Development Conference. These costs have been budgeted at £116,000.

Attacks on Medical Staff

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to provide greater funding to increase the personal security of medical staff. [138973]

Angela Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 12 November 2003, Official Report, column 375W.

The Department is concerned about violent attacks against all staff working in the Health and Personal Social Services (HPSS) and regards such incidents as totally unacceptable. The Department has encouraged employers to review their risk assessments with a view to identifying and reducing the potential for violence against HPSS staff.

In addition, the Department intends to mount a publicity campaign in the near future to make it abundantly clear that aggressive and violent behaviour against any HPSS personnel will not be tolerated. It is intended that this campaign will cover both staff who are employed directly by HSS Boards and Trusts and General Medical and Dental Practitioners, who are independent contractors working within the Health and Personal Social Services.

Average Pay

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average weekly gross pay in Northern Ireland for individuals was at the latest date for which figures are available. [137809]

Mr. Pearson: Average gross weekly earnings of all full-time adult employees in Northern Ireland was £404.50 at April 2003.

Monitoring Commission

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the International Monitoring Commission has the authority to investigate the allegations of activities by the Provisional IRA and members of Sinn Fein in (a) Colombia and (b) Florida; and what sanctions it has power to recommend. [132895]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Independent Monitoring Commission will decide what matters are relevant to the exercise of its functions, which are set out in the draft International Agreement published on 4 September. However, the Agreement makes clear that the focus of the Commission will be on continuing activity by paramilitary groups.

In line with Article 7 of the draft International Agreement, the Commission's reports shall recommend any remedial action considered necessary. The Commission may also recommend what measures, if any, it considers might appropriately be taken by the Northern Ireland Assembly. Such measures are limited to those which the Northern Ireland Assembly has power to take under relevant United Kingdom legislation.

Planning Applications

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applications to the Planning Service are awaiting consideration; and what the average waiting time for the consideration of these applications has been. [138941]

Angela Smith: There are currently 13,832 applications awaiting consideration in the system. The average waiting time for consideration of these applications is 28 weeks.

Skills Shortages

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to address skills shortages in Northern Ireland, with particular reference to the elementary occupations; and if he will make a statement. [132793]

Jane Kennedy: The Northern Ireland Skills Task Force was established in 1999 to advise Government on skills issues. The Task Force has published skills monitoring reports, the most recent in September 2003, and has conducted research on future skills needs in priority skills areas including engineering, construction and tourism.

The Department seeks to address the identified skill needs through its various programmes including the Jobskills Training programme and Further and Higher Education provision. Jobskills, including Modern Apprenticeships, together with a wider range of vocational education and training which addresses local and NI-wide skills needs, is provided through a network of further education colleges and private sector training providers.

The Department has highlighted six priority skill areas for the further education sector and provides additional funding for these areas (computing, construction and the built environment, electronic engineering, manufacturing engineering, hospitality and catering, and software engineering). The development of Centres of Excellence in colleges in the six priority skill areas ensures that the provision is of industry standard. There are currently 13 Centres of Excellence in eight colleges.The Department also works closely with 13 Sector Training Councils in NI covering the major industrial sectors. In addition, the Department plays a full role in the new Skills for Business Network, a UK-wide system including Sector Skills Councils (SSCs). These SSCs aim to address all of the skill needs of their sectors and to involve employers more fully in these issues.

With regard to elementary occupations, the Department seeks to fill such vacancies through its network of jobs and benefits offices and through use of the New Deal Programme where appropriate.

The Department has also launched the Essential Skills for Living Strategy and Action Plan, which aims to support 25,000 adults to improve their literacy and numeracy skills by the year 2005. This will enable them to improve their overall quality of life, their personal development and employment opportunities. In the first year of the strategy, 6,500 learners have participated in a range of courses offered by the colleges, employers and community and voluntary providers.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adult Learning

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps the Government are taking to encourage people over 60 to take part in adult learning. [138163]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The White Paper '21st Century Skills: Realising Our Potential', published in July this year, reiterates the Government's commitment to ensuring that adults of all ages have the opportunities to develop the skills they need for employment and personal fulfilment. The White Paper highlights the benefits of learning for older people and sets out our intention to safeguard a wide range of learning opportunities for pensioners, including leisure-based learning which is accessed by many older people.

Older people will also benefit from the new entitlement, announced in the White Paper, to free learning for all those studying for their first full Level 2 qualification [5 GCSEs or a similar vocational qualification] as a skills foundation for employability.

Brampton Abbotts School

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the funding of Brampton Abbotts Church of England primary school in Herefordshire. [139055]

Mr. Miliband: Funding of individual maintained schools is the responsibility of the local education authority, which in the case of Brampton Abbotts CE Primary School is Herefordshire council.

Bullying

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what services are available to (a) students and (b) teachers to deal with bullying in schools. [137538]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Students receive support from their school's pastoral support system. In addition ChildLine's CHIPS programme, which is part-funded by my Department, enables students at participating schools to talk to a trained peer supporter, buddy or mediator. Students at other schools can ring ChildLine's confidential helpline (0800 1111).

Teachers can get support from senior managers in their schools, LEA advisory services (including the specialist Key Stage 3 Behaviour and Attendance advisers), the DfES anti-bullying pack "Bullying: don't Suffer in Silence" and the anti-bullying sections of our Key Stage 3 package of behaviour audit and training materials.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the Government's estimate is of the proportion of children that were bullied in schools in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the North West region and (c) Merseyside in each of the last three years; [137977]

(2) what plans he has to reduce the number of children that are bullied in schools in England; and what additional resources the Government have made available in this financial year to schools to tackle bullying. [138010]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Data on bullying is not collected centrally and there is no reliable basis for an estimate of prevalence. However, any level of bullying is too high so we are determined to help schools tackle it.

Our guidance pack for schools 'Bullying: Don't Suffer in Silence' and anti-bullying website (www.dfes.gov.uk/bullying) offer advice and examples of good practice in preventing bullying.

I recently launched a new public information film aimed at children and young people. "Tell Someone" encourages pupils experiencing bullying to tell someone who can help rather than suffer in silence.

Later this month I will be launching an anti-bullying Charter which I hope as many schools as possible will sign and use. The Charter is being drawn up in consultation with the professional associations and voluntary sector partners. It will be accompanied by a summary of effective practice to help schools review and enhance their anti-bullying policies.

The Charter will be launched at the first of a series of regional conferences. These conferences will involve schools, local education authorities and voluntary organisations. As well as raising awareness, they will celebrate and share good practice in tackling bullying.

We are investing nearly £470 million over the next three years in measures to tackle the full range of behaviour and attendance problems faced by schools and pupils. This programme promotes whole-school approaches and reflects local as well as national priorities so spending on bullying cannot be disaggregated. However, in 2003–04 we have separately provided ChildLine in Partnership with Schools (CHIPS) with £240,000 for anti-bullying work involving peer support and just over £190,000 to Parentline Plus for their helpline for parents which takes enquiries about bullying.

Childhood Obesity

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent discussions he has had with (a) the Department of Health, (b) the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and (c) educational representatives on the role of education in tackling obesity among children; and if he will make a statement. [139448]

Mr. Miliband: The Department works closely with the Department of Health (DH), the Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) and others on a range of initiatives which educate children about the benefits of healthy eating, healthy food choices, and physical activity. One example is the National Healthy Schools programme that promotes healthy eating and healthy lifestyles, which is jointly sponsored by DfES and DH. A second example is the national PE, School Sport and Club Links strategy designed to ensure that 75 per cent. of five to 16-year-olds in England spend at least two hours each week on high quality PE and school sport, which is supported by DfES and DCMS.

Last week the Secretary of State for Education and Skills announced that he will be working with the Secretary of State for Health and others to develop a joint "Healthy Schools: Healthy Living Action Plan", which will make healthy living an integral part of school life.

Education (13 to 19)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people aged 13 to 19 were in (a) school, (b) further education college and (c) neither school nor further education college in (i) 2001–02, (ii) 2002–03 and (iii) 2003–04. [138544]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Data for the academic year 2003/04 is not available at the present.

The numbers of 13 to 18-year-olds by type of institution attended for end 2001 to end 2002, the latest available year, are shown in the table.

Participation by 13 to 18-year-olds

13 to 15-year-olds
Schools	1,892,259	1,920,952
Not in schools[1]	15,390	15,635
16 to 18-year-olds
Schools	405,300	418,700
Further Education Institutions (FEIs)	494,100	N/A
Higher Education Institutions (HEIs)	131,400	N/A
Not in schools, FEIs or HEIs[2]	825,500	N/A

[1] This figure is for 11 to 15-year-olds. This will include, for example, pupils being educated at home, or non-statemented pupils in hospital.
[2] These 16 to 18-year-olds not in schools, FE or HE institutions may be in government supported training (GST), employer funded training (EFT), other education training (GET) or employment.

Data for 16 to 18-year-olds in the year 2002/03 (shown as N/A in the table), and updated 2001/02 figures, are due to be published on 20 November 2003 in the SFR "Participation in Education, Training and Employment By 16–18 year olds in England".

Education Provision (East Riding)

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the pay rates are for (a) primary school teachers, (b) secondary school teachers and (c) teaching assistants in the East Riding of Yorkshire in 2003–04. [136471]

Mr. Miliband: Classroom teachers in the East Riding of Yorkshire are paid on the national pay scales for teachers in England and Wales. Apart from the London area, these national rates do not distinguish between geographic locations or between primary and secondary schools. The national pay rates for classroom teachers in England and Wales for 2003/04 are as follows:

M3	21,108
M4	22,734
M5	24,525
U1	28,668

	£ pa
U5	33,150

Newly qualified teachers normally start at point M1 and move up a point a year, subject to satisfactory service, until they reach point M6. They can then apply to be assessed against national standards and, if successful, move to point U1 with the possibility of further moves based on performance.

Schools have discretion to give classroom teachers extra allowances worth up to £10,572 pa for taking on management responsibilities, up to £3,312 pa for teaching special educational needs pupils, and up to £5,415 pa for recruitment and retention purposes.

The Government considers that pay and contractual arrangements for teaching assistants are best determined at local level and detailed information on these matters is not held centrally. Many local authorities are now reviewing support staff pay in the light of the agreement—commonly known as the Single Status Agreement—made in 1997 by the National Joint Council for Local Government Services (NJC). A guidance document on the employment and grading of school support staff was published by the NJC in October. Links between potential roles and the pay of support staff will remain a matter for local determination, but the National Agreement on Raising Standards and Tackling Workload, signed on 15 January 2003 by the government, local authority employers and school workforce unions, makes clear that we expect support staff remuneration to reflect their level of training, skills and responsibilities.

Employer Training Pilots

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the Employer Training Pilots project. [139077]

Alan Johnson: We are in the process of considering the evaluation from the first year of operation of the pilots and it is our intention to publish an interim report in due course. In November 2002 a decision was made to extend the pilots to August 2004 to give us a wider base of evidence on which to base future policy decisions. We will be undertaking a full evaluation of the second year of operation and hope to publish a full report by Spring 2005.

GCSEs

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what proportion of 15-year-olds in (a) Wiltshire, (b) Dorset and (c) Devon achieved (i) five or more A* to C GCSE grades and (ii) five or more GCSE passes in each year since 1997; [138961]

(2) what proportion of 15 and 16-year-olds in (a) Wiltshire, (b) Dorset and (c) Devon were entered for GCSE examinations in each year since 1997. [138964]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 17 November 2003]: The statistical information requested is detailed in the following table.

[1] Pupils are aged 15 at the start of the academic year i.e. 31 August.
[2] For 1997, Devon LEA included schools in Torbay and Plymouth. Following the Local Government reorganisation in 1998, Torbay and Plymouth schools are excluded from the Devon figures.
[3] Provisional

Higher Education White Paper

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the graduate contribution scheme described in the White Paper on Higher Education is (a) debt, (b) an income contingent loan or (c) an individualised graduate tax. [139625]

Alan Johnson: Under the Graduate Contribution Scheme described in the Higher Education White Paper, students may take out a loan to cover the cost of their tuition fees, repayable on an income-contingent basis through the tax system.

Maths Teachers

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department is taking to encourage mathematics graduates to become teachers. [138723]

Mr. Miliband: Since September 2000, £6,000 training bursaries have been available to postgraduate trainee teachers and £4,000 golden hellos for those who go on to teach priority subjects, including mathematics, in a maintained school. Since September 2002, these incentives have been reinforced by the Repayment of Teachers' Loans pilot scheme for new teachers of priority subjects. Recruitment to postgraduate courses of initial teacher training in mathematics has accordingly risen by 68 per cent. between 1999/2000 and 2003/04. Partly as a result of this increase, the number of unfilled vacancies for mathematics teachers in maintained secondary schools has fallen by 22 per cent. in only two years.

The Government will build on these achievements over the coming years. The Teacher Training Agency is currently developing a number of new initiatives to bring more mathematics specialists into the classroom. These include enhancement courses designed to allow prospective teachers of mathematics to bring their subject-knowledge up to the required level for entry onto a postgraduate teacher training course.

Medical Students

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 10 November, Official Report, column 90W, if he will give a breakdown by individual institution of the 81 students on courses leading to registration with the General Medical Council and subsequent practice as a doctor who are under 21 and have less than the equivalent of three grade Cs at A level. [139121]

Alan Johnson: No. The Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) does not, as a matter of policy, publish sensitive student data at course level for individual institutions.

Minister for Children

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the Minister for Children sought advice from departmental officials before writing to the Chairman of the BBC about child abuse in Islington; and if he will make a statement. [139027]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Minister for Children sought no advice from any departmental official, but did discuss in general terms with the Department's Special Advisers the possibility of writing to the BBC.

Modern Apprenticeships

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether (a) his Department and (b) its agencies carry out exit surveys with those who (i) complete and (ii) do not complete modern apprenticeships. [136975]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 17 November 2003]: DfES place the responsibility for planning and managing Modern Apprenticeships (MAs) on the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). Both the Department and LSC place great importance on the role of learner surveys in quality strategies and improvement. The LSC have been running a learner satisfaction survey since early 2002 and the first report was published in November 2002. The main purpose of the survey is to interview those who are still in learning; however, it does cover some learners who have recently completed their course and also a small number who left early.

Both the Department and the LSC are also aware of the importance of labour market destination data. Some feasibility work has recently been concluded and DfES and LSC along with ALI and Ofsted will shortly be publishing proposals as to how best to implement the recommendations.

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of successfully completed modern apprenticeships in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03 were provided by (i) further education colleges, (ii) private training providers and (iii) employers. [136976]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 17 November 2003]: The information requested is not available. The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) published framework completion rates for modern apprenticeship programmes as a whole in July 2003. Current apprenticeships training is delivered in a variety of different ways, including collaboration between various providers and so is not always an exclusive relationship between one provider and one apprentice—hence it is not possible to estimate the proportion of modern apprenticeships successfully completed through different providers.

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of young people undertaking a modern apprenticeship in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03 had all or part of their training provided by a further education college. [136979]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 17 November 2003]: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) publish figures on modern apprenticeships learner volumes within figures for work-based learning as a whole. They estimate that around 20 per cent. of modern apprenticeships were delivered directly through further education colleges in 2002/03. This figure excludes cases where other training providers for work-based learning have sub-contracted their delivery through further education colleges.

Non-EU Students

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many non-European Union students registered for courses in (a) further education colleges and (b) universities in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [131723]

Alan Johnson: The latest available figures are in the table.

Number of non-European Union overseas students, studying in English FE colleges and HE institutions

National Vocational Qualifications

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action he will take to raise the percentage of the London workforce with NVQ Level 2 qualifications. [137490]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Skills Strategy, published in July, set out our intention to introduce a new entitlement for any adult in the labour force to have access to free learning for their first full Level 2 qualification. This entitlement will enable individuals to reach a level of attainment that gives a platform of skills for employability, improve their position in the labour market, and increase their chances of undertaking further learning. We are working with the Learning and Skills Council nationwide on the phasing in of the Level 2 entitlement, with phase one in 2004–05 and full rollout beginning the following year.

The Secretary of State has asked the London Development Agency and its partners to produce proposals showing how they will work together to address the key themes of the Skills Strategy, including raising the percentage of the workforce with Level 2 qualifications. The five local London LSCs are working together as a regional pioneer to ensure a consistent approach to improving the quality and responsiveness of post-16 skills provision through the Success for All strategy.

Employer Training Pilots (ETPs) are testing new financial support measures to improve access to training and enable employees to attain basic and Level 2 skills. The East London pilot was launched in September this year and has already signed up 35 employers, 559 NVQ Level 2 learners and 26 basic skills learners.

In addition, London West LSC is one of the 10 areas piloting the new Adult Learning Grant. The grant offers up to £30 per week to adults on low incomes studying full time for a first full Level 2 qualification, and young adults on low incomes studying full time for a first full Level 3 qualification.

Poorer Students

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what incentives he plans to introduce to encourage universities to offer places to poorer students under a mandatory bursary scheme; [139167]

(2) what form of bursary system he plans to adopt to help poorer students at universities that charge higher tuition fees; [139168]

(3) what assessment he has made of the potential effects of a bursary system on the offer of places at university for poorer students; [139169]

(4) what amount from higher top-up fees he will require universities to set aside for bursaries from poorer students; and by what mechanism. [139170]

Alan Johnson: We are considering and discussing the content of access agreements and the duties of the Office for Fair Access, and will make a statement in due course.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what representations he has received from (a) Imperial College and (b) Sir Richard Sykes in respect of proposals to ask universities to provide bursaries for poorer students out of variable tuition fees; [139171]

(2) what representations he has received from universities in England regarding proposals to provide bursaries for poorer students out of variable top-up fees; [139172]

(3) what discussions he has had with universities in England regarding their preferred methods of contributing to bursaries for poorer students from higher tuition fees. [139173]

Alan Johnson: In our discussions over the content of access agreements and the duties of the Office for Fair Access, we have had representations from a range of interested parties including higher education institutions.

Post-16 Education

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures are in place to encourage schoolchildren to stay in school after the age of 16. [139609]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: "14–19: opportunity and excellence", issued in January 2003, sets out our plans to reform education and training for young people, offering a broader and more flexible range of options, including more vocational learning opportunities, to encourage greater participation and higher attainment throughout the 14–19 phase. Young people may choose to study at school, in a college or workplace, or a combination of these, depending on their individual needs and preferences.

From September 2004, education maintenance allowance will be available across the country, offering means-tested payments to help support young people in post-compulsory education.

The Connexions card is available to all young people aged 16–19 and offers a wide range of discounts on goods and services which help reduce the cost of learning. In addition young people attending a place of learning which adopts the card can earn points for attendance. These points can be exchanged for a wide variety of incentives and "money can't buy" opportunities which are exclusive to those who stay in learning.

School Funding

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether his pledge of increased school funding is aimed at assisting schools in meeting the cost of (a) incremental drift and (b) teachers crossing the pay threshold. [137477]

Mr. Miliband: Increased school funding designed to help school maintain the improvement in standards since 1997. The cost of incremental drift has been taken into account in calculating average cost pressures, and although schools' costs will vary from the average, the 5 per cent. floor increase for LEAs should enable them to target resources at particular schools which have unavoidable higher than average staff costs. Threshold payments will continue to be fully funded through grant in 2004–05.

Tuition Fees

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what his estimate is of the average debt medical students will face when they qualify as doctors if they are charged the maximum tuition fee per year. [137216]

Alan Johnson: Average additional debt for medical students as a result of being charged the maximum variable fee of £3,000 per year from 2006/07 will depend on whether they receive a higher education grant or a bursary from university; and whether they use these sums to offset fees. Currently students who are not eligible for means-tested grants for fees pay £1,125 contributions to fees. Over the four years when this Department is responsible for medical students' support, the maximum increase in support would be £1,875 per year, totalling an additional £7,500, to meet the difference. Poorer medical students will in addition be eligible for HE grants of up to £1,000 per year and university bursaries which will reduce their costs and hence their extra debt.

The level of loan taken out by medical students will depend upon their individual circumstances and choices, including the extent to which they work while in higher education. In years five and six they currently pay no contribution to fees and are eligible for means tested NHS bursaries, which helps to keep down the level of debt. Medical students on graduation should have better prospects of secure employment and of higher salaries than the typical graduate and will therefore pay off their loans faster.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions he has had with Ministerial colleagues from other Departments in respect of increasing proposed tuition fee remission levels for students from poorer backgrounds. [139165]

Alan Johnson: The Secretary of State has had a number of discussions with colleagues across Government on all aspects of his proposals for financing higher education.

University Enrolments

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the work of the task force on university enrolments chaired by Professor Thomas. [129989]

Alan Johnson: I apologise for the delay in replying. I believe the reference is to the Higher Education Endowment Task Force chaired by Professor Eric Thomas, Vice Chancellor of Bristol University. The Task Force is focusing on: exploring tax incentives and models of matched funding schemes to encourage giving and institutions' capacity to raise funds; building a culture where universities ask for donations and donors are more willing to give; and elements necessary for a professional development office and effective fundraising. The Task Force is due to report in March 2004.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what evidence he has collated on higher education student participation by socio-economic class in (a) subgraduate qualifications, (b) first degree courses and (c) postgraduate qualifications. [135783]

Alan Johnson: The available information on undergraduate participation is the Age Participation Index (API). The API measures the proportion of UK domiciled initial entrants to full-time undergraduate HE by the age of 20 and is expressed as a percentage of the average of the 18 and 19-year-old populations. The most recent information, for 2001/02, is in the table.

Participation rates for postgraduate study are not held centrally.

Age Participation Index (API) by social class[1] and level of course, 2001/02

Social class	First degree	Sub degree[2]
I Professional	77	3
II Intermediate	47	3
IIIn skilled non-manual	31	3
IIIm skilled manual	19	2
IV partly skilled	16	2
V Unskilled	13	2
I-IIIn	47	3
IIIm-V	18	2
Total	30	6

[1] Figures rounded to nearest whole percentage.

[2] Around a third of home domiciled sub-degree entrants to GB institutions, aged under 21 years, were part time in 2001/02 and so would not be included in the API.

Working Tax Credit

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the cost of raising the maximum child care element of the working tax credit from 70 per cent. of the costs of eligible child care to (a) 80 per cent., (b) 90 per cent. and (c) 100 per cent. [136777]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

Such increases are likely to prompt substantial changes in the amount spent on eligible child care. No reliable estimates are available of the sizes of these changes, and therefore of the total costs.

WALES

Coal Mining Communities

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has made to the Department of Trade and Industry regarding the amount paid to Welsh communities by the Coalfields Regeneration Trust in comparison with other former coal mining communities. [115145]

Mr. Touhig: My right hon. Friend and I have regular discussions with Ministers at the Department for Trade and Industry covering matters of interest to people living in former coal mining areas of Wales.

There have been no recent discussions on the Coalfields regeneration Trust.

Website

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent assessment he has made of the content and design of his Department's website. [139365]

Mr. Touhig: A recent review will lead to a bilingual homepage to more easily link to the parallel English and Welsh versions. A further review of the overall content and design of the site is due to begin shortly.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Support Agency

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library an updated progress report on the implementation of the new child support scheme. [137926]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I have today placed in the Library a second report on progress in implementation of the new child support scheme.

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when Child Support Agency cases which have been assessed under the old scheme and which are linked to cases which have been assessed under the new scheme will be re-assessed under the new scheme. [139525]

Mr. Pond: Linked cases will transfer to the new scheme from the date on which the fresh case takes effect. (Cases are treated as linked where a person who already has an old scheme assessment is involved in a new scheme application. In addition there are special rules for households on certain prescribed benefits.)

Council Tax Benefit

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of people eligible for but not claiming Council Tax Benefit in (a) the City of Edinburgh local authority area, (b) Scotland and (c) the UK in 2002–03. [138684]

Mr. Pond: The information is not available.

Statistics for Great Britain are presented in the DWP series "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up". The latest estimates relate to financial year 2000–01 and are in the Library.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to improve the take-up of Council Tax Benefit among pensioners. [138688]

Mr. Pond: Council Tax Benefit is administered by over 400 local authorities, each of which is required by legislation to take appropriate steps to ensure that people with a potential entitlement to Council Tax Benefit are made aware of the help available. Information is also contained in leaflet GL17 "Help with your Council Tax Benefit" as well as various other information leaflets and posters produced by the Department.

Applicants for Pension Credit are asked if they want to claim Council Tax Benefit and they are either sent or given a claim form to return to their local authority. A similar approach is being taken when a customer changes address. The claim packs for Income Support and Jobseekers Allowance also include a claim form for Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit.

Disability Rights Task Force

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent representations he has received from the Disability Rights Task Force. [137908]

Maria Eagle: The Disability Rights Task Force was set up in 1997 to advise the Government on how best to meet our Manifesto commitment on comprehensive and enforceable civil rights for disabled people. Following its recommendations to Government, it was disbanded in December 1999.

We have already legislated to meet many of the Task Force's recommendations, including:

the Disability Rights Commission Act 1999;

the Special Educational Needs and Disability Act 2001;

the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (Amendment) Regulations 2003.

We have also announced that we will take forward other Task Force legislative recommendations in a draft Disability Bill. The draft Bill will be published later this year with the intention that it undergo pre-legislative scrutiny. Following this process, the Bill will be introduced into Parliament.

Disability Living Allowance

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many disabled (a) children under 16 and (b) people aged between 16 and 59 receive (i) Disability Living Allowance, (ii) Higher Rate Care Component only, (iii) Middle Rate Care Component only, (iv) Higher Rate Mobility Component only, (v) Higher Rate Care with Higher Rate Mobility Components, (vi) Higher Rate Care with Lower Rate Mobility Components, (vii) Middle Rate Care with Higher Rate Mobility Components, (viii) Middle Rate Care with Lower Rate Mobility Components and (ix) Lower Rate Care with Higher Rate Mobility Components; and how many recipients in each case are part of a household in which another adult under 60 or child also gets Disability Living Allowance at one of the above rates. [139114]

Maria Eagle: The information on the numbers of disabled people receiving the various combinations of Disability Living Allowance is given in the following table.

Disability Living Allowance by age bands and components as at 31 May 2003

DLA combination	Under 16	16–59
Higher Rate Care Only	28.6	7.0
Middle Rate Care Only	51.3	38.4
Higher Rate Mobility Only	2.8	186.5
Higher Rate Care and Higher Mobility	40.8	183.9
Higher Rate Care Lower Rate Mobility	33.8	65.9
Middle Rate Care and Higher Rate Mobility	15.2	172.4
Middle Rate Care and Lower Rate Mobility	63.7	193.0
Lower Rate Care and Higher Rate Mobility	0.9	183.4

Figures are in thousands and rounded to the nearest hundred.

IAD Information Centre, 5 per cent. sample.

5 per cent. of households with a person under 60 claiming Disability Living Allowance (DLA) have another person under 60 also claiming DLA. It is not possible to break this figure down by the individual components as requested.

Notes:

1. The information on numbers within households is based on data from the Family Resource Survey (FRS) for 2001–02.
2. The information on benefit receipt taken from the FRS is based on self-assessment and therefore may be subject to misreporting.
3. The estimates are based on sample counts that have been adjusted for non-response. These estimates are subject to sampling error and response bias.

Full-time Carers

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what additional support has been offered to private individuals who are full-time carers for friends and family since 1997. [136441]

Maria Eagle: "Caring about Carers—A National Strategy for Carers" published in 1999 underlined the Government's commitment to support carers. Carers are entitled to an assessment by their local council to determine their needs as carers and their eligibility for support. Depending on their individual circumstances, carers have access to the full range of social security benefits including Carer's Allowance (CA) (previously Invalid Care Allowance), the Carer Premium in income-related benefits and additional amounts in Pension Credit.

The improvements we have made to the support and benefits for carers on top of the annual upratings of benefits include:

the introduction of the Carers' Grant in 1999 to support local councils in providing short breaks for carers to enable them to continue to care while maintaining their own health and well-being. In response to requests from carers and others, the 2003–04 Carers Grant includes new flexibilities. Local councils can now use as much of the money as they wish in pooled budgets and they can fund more services directly for carers. This offers them the opportunity to support carers in more responsive and innovative ways, and not only through breaks; strengthening, in 2000, of the right of carers to an assessment of their own needs. Local councils were given a mandatory duty to support carers by providing them with services directly and with breaks from caring. In addition, Direct Payments from local councils were made available to carers to enable them to purchase carers services themselves. Resources for personal social services increased by 20 per cent. in real terms between 1996–97 and 2002–03, an average real terms increase of 3 per cent. a year, and will be increased by an annual average of 6 per cent. in real terms from 2003–04 to 2005–06. In 2001–02, local councils provided help to over 140,000 carers through the adults service and to some 52,000 people (including young carers) through the children's service;

increasing the CA earnings limit from £50 to £72 a week in 2001. Since then, the earnings limit has been increased each year in line with the rise in the national insurance lower earnings limit and is currently £77 after allowable expenses;

abolishing the upper age limit on claims to CA in 2002, so that carers aged 65 and over can claim the allowance. People in receipt of basic state pension who are entitled to, but do not receive CA because of the overlapping benefit rules may be entitled to extra money with their income-related benefits or Pension Credit; extending entitlement to CA by up to eight weeks after death of disabled person being cared for; and from April 2003, requiring local councils to make direct payments to carers who have an assessed need and are able to manage the payments (alone or with assistance), and giving local councils discretionary powers to support flexibility in provision of short breaks for carers through the short term breaks voucher scheme.

Carers can find out about the support and benefits available to them through various routes: on-line services such as UK Online, or the Government DWP and carers websites; by telephone via benefits helplines, NHS Direct, carers centres, Carers UK helpline; and booklets/leaflets published by the Government or voluntary sector.

Invalid Care Allowance

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people aged over 65 years have claimed Invalid Care Allowance and subsequently Carer's Allowance since 28 October 2002 in (a) Glasgow, Anniesland and (b) the United Kingdom. [136942]

Maria Eagle: Information for Great Britain is as follows.

Number of claims received for Invalid Care Allowance and subsequently Carers Allowance since 28 October 2002

	Claims received from people aged 65 and over
Anniesland Glasgow	95
Great Britain	31,450

Pension Credit

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Argyll and Bute constituency are in receipt of Pension Credit; and what his estimate is of the number of pensioners in the constituency who are entitled to receive Pension Credit. [139526]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is not available in the format requested.

As at 17 October 2003 the number of people receiving Pension Credit in Argyll and Bute constituency was 2,735.

Around 400,000 pensioner households are entitled to Pension Credit in Scotland.

2. Figures are based on 100 per cent. Generalised Matching Service (GMS) data.

Profiling

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what research he has commissioned on the use of profiling; and if he will make a statement on the use of profiling within the benefit system. [134931]

Mr. Pond: We have commissioned research to explore the potential in using statistical profiling to allocate work-focused help within the Department's client groups: sick and disabled people, lone parents and unemployed people. This research, which has been carried out by the Policy Studies Institute, is due to be published on 20 November 2003 and a copy of the report will be placed in the Library.

We also commissioned a large-scale literature review to help inform the development of the screening process used in the Incapacity Benefit reform pilots introduced in October 2003. This screening is used to distinguish between those incapacity benefit clients who are likely to make an early return to work and those who are not. This enables us to provide more intensive support to return to the labour market to people in this second group. The report of the review "Screening to identify people at risk of long-term incapacity for work" by Professors Gordon Waddell, Kim Burton, and Chris Main was published in May 2003.

In addition we have commissioned a literature review from the Institute for Employment Research, Warwick university to provide evidence to establish whether customer profiling could be useful to Jobcentre Plus, by using international comparisons from other public employment agencies.

Scottish Local Authorities

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which Scottish local authorities have returned unspent discretionary housing payment funds to the Department of Work and Pensions in each year for which figures are available; and how much was returned in each case. [139010]

Mr. Pond: The information is in the table.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Asylum Seekers

Andy King: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many qualified legal advisers have a Community Legal Service franchise to represent asylum seekers in England. [138692]

Mr. Lammy: As at 1 November 2003, there were 504 solicitors' offices in England and Wales[1] with contracts to undertake publicly-funded immigration and asylum work. At the same date, there were 90 Not for Profit organisations in England and Wales with contracts to undertake publicly funded immigration and asylum work. It is not possible to provide figures for the number of advisers employed under these contracts.

[1] The LSC provides publicly-funded legal services in England and Wales through contracts with solicitors' offices and Not for Profit organisations. It is possible for solicitors based in Wales to represent clients in England and visa versa.

County Court Judgments

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many county court judgments have been made against individuals in (a) London and (b) England and Wales in each of the last six years. [139258]

Mr. Leslie [holding answer 17 November 2003]: Information identifying whether or not the claimant or defendant is either an individual or company is not held centrally. Consequently, figures relating specifically to individuals could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

For information, figures showing the overall number of judgments entered in the county courts in (a) London and (b) England and Wales are provided in the table.

	London	England and Wales
1997	67,080	1,185,367
1998	51,589	1,123,568
1999	43,825	1,077,499

2002	34,692	814,824

Dispute Resolution

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what action his Department is taking to promote the use of alternative dispute resolution in legal cases in which Government Departments are involved. [138931]

Mr. Lammy: In March 2001, the Lord Chancellor (Lord Irvine of Lairg) announced the Government's pledge to consider and use alternative dispute resolution (ADR) in their own disputes where suitable and wherever the other party accepts it. Since then, Departments, individually and collectively, have been taking forward work on embedding ADR in the way they handle their disputes.

This Department collates information on the Government's use of ADR under the pledge. The latest report, published in July 2003, demonstrated increasing use of ADR. The report also highlighted the programme of awareness training that has been introduced across Departments. In addition, this Department's legal adviser chairs the ADR sub-group of the Government Legal Service Liaison Group, a cross-government body that was established as a result of the pledge, to promote awareness and use of ADR.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what cost savings have been achieved by Government Departments through the use of alternative dispute resolution in place of legal proceedings since 2001. [138932]

Mr. Lammy: From information provided by Departments, savings have been estimated at over £17 million in the period April 2001 to June 2002, attributable to their use of ADR. That said, it has not been possible to quantify potential savings in every instance.

Marriage Support

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what action his Department (a) has taken and (b) proposes to take to implement the proposed strategy for marriage and relationship support contained in "Moving Forward Together". [138687]

Mr. Lammy: The "Moving Forward Together" report was developed by the Advisory Group for Marriage and Relationship Support (AGMARS) and was published in March 2002. The Advisory Group consisted of officials from across Government and senior representatives of Marriage and Relationship Support (MARS) organisations. The strategy set out in the report was intended to inform the work of both the Government and organisations delivering marriage and relationship support services. The report was welcomed by the Government and in publishing it, my right hon. and learned Friend Lord Irvine the then Lord Chancellor, accepted the Group's recommendations.

Significant progress has been made in taking forward the areas recommended for future development. The aims, objectives, and priorities of the annual Marriage and Relationship Support (MARS) Grant Programme reflect the AGMARS report's recommendations.

As a result of the machinery of government changes in June 2003, responsibility for marriage and relationship support policy has transferred to DfES. My right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Children and Families intends to continue to take the forward the range of developmental activities as an integral and important element of the wider range of family support services for which she is now responsible.

Mediation

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what action the Lord Chancellor is taking to promote the use of mediation and other forms of alternative dispute resolution in (a) civil and (b) criminal cases. [138770]

Mr. Lammy: The Government have long held the view that litigation should be the dispute resolution method of last resort. The Civil Procedure Rules encourage the use of alternative dispute resolution, as do the pre-action protocols, which seek to encourage the settlement of disputes before court proceedings are issued. One of this Department's Public Service Agreement targets is to reduce the proportion of disputes that are resolved by resort to the courts. As part of the programme of work designed to achieve this, a number of court based pilot mediation schemes are being developed that will actively encourage the use of mediation. These will complement the local schemes that are already in operation, or under consideration, in a several of courts in England and Wales. The Government are also keen to expand the use of restorative justice in the adult criminal justice system, as well as continuing to build on its success in the youth justice system. Activity in this area is led by the Home Office, which published a strategy, in the form of a consultation document, in July 2003. The strategy covers both restorative justice, which involves mediated contact between offender and victim, and reparation to the community. The Home Office will publish a summary of the consultation responses on its website in the New Year.

Postcodes

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what use the Department for Constitutional Affairs and its agencies make of postcode areas for (a) the collection and publication of data, (b) devising formulae for the distribution of grants and awards and (c) the delivery of services; and when such usages were last reviewed. [87771]

Mr. Lammy: I apologise for the delay in responding to my hon. Friend's question; this was due to an administrative error.

My Department, the Northern Ireland Court Service and the Land Registry do not currently make use of postcode areas.

The Public Guardianship Office (PGO) has used postcode areas to help in the delivery of its services. During the financial year 2000–01, the PGO used the postcode information held in its case record system to help with the allocation of geographical areas to client visitors. The allocation of postcodes to each visitor was made so that an even number of clients was given to each of the visitors employed. This was intended to ensure fair and even coverage for the client base, as well as even workload for the visitors themselves. The use of postcodes has not been reviewed since this time.

The National Archives has used postcode areas for the publication and dissemination of data on a very limited basis within the Marketing Department and the Education and Interpretation and Department. It does not use postcodes for the collection of data, distribute grants and awards or distribute external services on a postcode basis.

The Legal Services Commission does not publish data at postcode level. However, the Commission collects postcode information for individual clients and suppliers holding contracts with the Commission for the Delivery of Legal Services. This information is held in the Commission's corporate information system and can be used by Community Legal Service Partnerships to identify geographical gaps in the supply of legal services.

The Legal Services Research Centre (LSRC) has recently begun work on a new project, funded by the Office for National Statistics and Neighbourhood Renewal Unit, to identify, and if possible, collate data relating to legal services. Data collated may be by postcode area, though any published data will be aggregated to electoral ward level. The data will be publicly accessible on the Neighbourhood Statistics website: www.neighbourhood.statistics.gov.uk

Probate Procedures

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what progress his Department has made in implementing the recommendations of the review of probate procedures. [138686]

Mr. Lammy: Following the Probate Service Review in 2001, a consultation paper was published in November 2002 seeking responses on the Review's recommendations. The responses are being analysed by the Court Service. The outcome of the analysis will be put to Ministers early in the New Year. A public announcement is expected by Easter 2004.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Advertisement Regulations

Lynne Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will take steps to empower local authorities to remove placards and posters displayed in contravention of advertisement regulations without the requirement to give two days' notice to the advertiser. [139696]

Keith Hill: No. The statutory two days minimum period must elapse before a local planning authority may remove or obliterate a placard or poster where it has served notice, on the person responsible for the poster, of its intention to do so. This provides that person with the opportunity to challenge the local planning authority's notice or to comply with it. Less than 48 hours is an unreasonably short period of time in which to expect the notice to reach the advertiser and for him to take action.

Assisted Property Purchases

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many times local authorities have assisted people in buying properties in each of the last 10 years, broken down by (a) local authority and (b) amount spent. [139349]

Keith Hill: The information requested covers a number of low cost home ownership schemes including the Cash Incentive Scheme, Homebuy, Do It Yourself Shared Ownership and Right to Buy. As this comprises a considerable amount of data I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the reply in the Library of the House.

Care Homes

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average funding offered by each county council and unitary authority to people who have been admitted to care homes was in 2002–03. [138161]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

The 2002–03 average gross weekly expenditure per person, in shire counties and unitary authorities, on supporting adults in residential and nursing care homes is shown in the table.

	Shire counties	Unitary authorities
Older People	351	352
Adults with Learning Disabilities	610	677
Adults with Mental Illness	429	412
Adults with Physical Disabilities	526	552

Community Land Trusts

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the role of community land trusts as a vehicle for providing affordable housing, with particular reference to key worker housing. [139435]

Keith Hill: The Government have not yet fully assessed community land trusts and therefore have no immediate plans to pursue this model but agree in principle about the need to bring together site preparation, the provision of a mixture of social and private sector housing and development contributions where necessary. Sustainable Communities: Building for the Future signals a further move in this direction, for example through closer working between English Partnerships (EP) and the Housing Corporation. The Housing Corporation and English Partnerships have established a joint unit to bring together EP's land holdings expertise with the Corporation's affordable housing programme. And we are proposing to extend the Corporation's power to fund bodies other than housing associations, with a view to widening the opportunities for encouraging new housing development.

Correspondence

Mr. Steen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Totnes to the Parliamentary Under-Secretary at the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, dated 27 August 2003, concerning Dr. C. Taylor of Totnes and the Local Communities Sustainability Bill, which was transferred to his Department. [139764]

Keith Hill: I replied to the hon. Member on 17 November 2003.

Council Housing

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 3 November 2003, Official Report, columns 497–98W, on council housing, what the 10 per cent. additional subsidy represents in cash terms to a local authority. [139140]

Keith Hill: The additional subsidy to support borrowing for expenditure by Arm's Length Management Organisations (ALMOs) for local authorities with ALMOs that qualified for funding in 2002–03 and those that have so far qualified in 2003–04 is as follows:

ALMO qualified in 2002–03
Ashfield	1,012,603	2,400,000
Derby	1,312,164	3,110,000
Hounslow	1,179,452	3,500,000
Kirklees	1,917,808	6,250,000
Rochdale	835,397	2,420,000
Stockton-on-Tees	1,353,288	4,450,000
Westminster	745,260	2,030,000
Wigan	1,788,932	5,830,000
ALMO qualified in 2003–04
Barnsley	—	2,773,770
Blyth Valley	—	1,329,235
Bolton	—	3,427,131
Brent	—	2,342,213
Kensington and Chelsea	—	1,580,334
Leeds (north east and west)	—	1,225,282
Oldham	—	3,033,211
TOTAL	10,144,904	45,701,176

Overall subsidy entitlements for later years, including those for ALMOs that have yet to qualify for funding, have yet to be determined.

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what requirement there will be on regional housing boards to ring-fence additional subsidy provided for arm's length management organisations. [139575]

Keith Hill: Regional Housing Boards advise Ministers on the allocation of housing capital resources. They do not make recommendations on the allocation of funding specifically for arm's length management organisations (ALMOs).

The additional funding awarded for ALMOs takes the form of Housing Revenue Account Subsidy to support borrowing. Housing Revenue Account Subsidy may be used only for Housing Revenue Account purposes.

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 3 November 2003, Official Report, column 498W, on council housing, what plans he has to continue additional funding for arm's length management organisations beyond Rounds 1 and 2 of the current programme. [139576]

Keith Hill: I announced on 28 July 2003 (in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Press Notice 147) that 13 local authorities have been awarded places in Round three of the Arms Length Management Organisation (ALMO) programme. Conditional funding for these ALMOs totals £360 million for 2004–05 and 2005–06. This is in addition to the 20 authorities with confirmed or conditional 2-year allocations of ALMO funding totalling £700 million in Rounds one and two. Bids for places in Round four have been invited by 31 December 2003. Funding for ALMOs beyond 2005–06, including possible further Rounds, is subject to the outcome of the 2004 Spending Review.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to ensure that equal funding is being made available for tenants who wish to remain within council ownership and control rather than stock transfer as an arm's length management organisation. [138894]

Keith Hill: The Sustainable Communities Plan made it clear that local authorities seeking additional investment in their housing stock are able to choose from three options: stock transfer, PFI and ALMOs.

The Plan also made it clear that authorities that do not pursue these options cannot expect increased investment above that provided for through mainstream housing funding.

The funding available for social housing, although greatly increased under this Government, is inevitably limited; and we wish to use it in ways that will most improve the lives of tenants.

To make best use of those resources the Government will only provide additional funding to councils that separate their landlord and strategic functions. This provides a strong incentive to better performance; ensures a sharper focus on the two distinct housing functions; and guarantees that tenants have a greater role in the future management of their homes.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what procedures he has put in place to ensure that full and effective consultation takes place with council tenants during the appraisal of the option of stock disposal; and if he will make a statement. [138895]

Keith Hill: The Government are committed to bringing all social homes up to set standards of decency by 2010. The PSA Plus Review of the decent homes target emphasised that tenants must be at the heart of plans to deliver decent homes.

Arrangements for involving tenants should be set out in locally agreed Tenant Participation Compacts. These should be based on standards set out in the National Framework for Tenant Participation Compacts. Tenants must have access to independent advice and support and to capacity building and training throughout, from the investment appraisal stage to after transfer. An Independent Tenant Adviser (ITA) should be appointed at an early stage in the process and retained until after the ballot.

With ALMOs, local authorities should consult with tenants on the functions to be transferred and the continuing role of the local authority, and the rights of tenants and leaseholders. They should consult on the composition and status of the arms length body and its Board, including the selection and role of the tenant Board members.

In the case of a Transfer, tenants should be central to all stages of the investment appraisal and development of a proposal, including the selection of a prospective new landlord. Tenant consultation and participation should feature strongly in transfer proposals, and transfer landlords are expected to provide opportunities for tenants to have a real say in the management of their homes.

In order to inform tenants about the Decent Homes agenda the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is organising a series of regional roadshows that will help to develop their skills and knowledge so that they can participate effectively in the Options Appraisal process. We are also making arrangements to produce a video for tenants explaining the various stock options.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many council houses have been the subject of stock transfer since June 2001; and what the average capital receipt per property accruing to the local authority was. [139550]

Keith Hill: 205,483 dwellings have transferred from local authorities to registered social landlords since June 2001. The average tenanted market value per dwelling was £4,990. The tenanted market value reflects the requirement to maintain the property for social renting and to a decent homes standard in perpetuity.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with the Audit Commission on the effects of large scale voluntary transfers. [139436]

Keith Hill: Officials work closely with the Audit Commission and were members of the study advisory group for the Commission's report on Housing after transfer: The local authority role which was published on 5 December 2002.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Flight: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) special advisers, (b) press officers, (c) civil servants, (d) advisers to civil servants and (e) permanent staff were working for his Department in each year since 1996. [126479]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was established on 29 May 2002.

Staffing information is available in Table C of the annual publication 'Civil Service Statistics', which covers Permanent Staff numbers in each department and agency from 1995 to 2002. Copies of the publication are laid in the Libraries of both Houses. The latest edition, based on April 2002 data, was published on 24 July 2003. These figures include press officers.

Alternatively, this information is available at the following address on the Cabinet Office Statistics website http://www.civil-service.gov.uk/statistics/css.htm

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister currently employs three special advisers: two full-time and one part-time. The term "advisers to civil servants" is not a recognised job title.

Elected Regional Assemblies

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what mechanisms he has put in place to ensure that public money spent on information campaigns in the three English regions due to hold referendums on elected regional assemblies is not used to promote a particular view. [139122]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government's Information Campaign is in accordance with the requirements of the Civil Service Code and Guidance on the Work of the Government Information Service. Its purpose is to inform people of the key issues and to stimulate debate, not to influence the referendum outcome. Guidance on what civil servants can and cannot do in the run up to the referendum will be issued nearer the time.

English Partnerships

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what criteria English Partnerships uses in reaching decisions on funding priorities; and what account English Partnerships takes of the North West Regional Housing Strategy in its decision-making process. [138719]

Keith Hill: English Partnerships' priorities for new projects focus on:

The 20 per cent. most deprived wards in the country;

The Coalfields programme ;

Urban Regeneration Company areas;

Housing Market Renewal Fund pathfinder areas;

Target areas for major housing growth in the South East of England;

Strategic brownfield sites in or close to any of the above priority areas or in areas of housing pressure or housing abandonment;

Other discretionary projects where funding constraints allow and which would promote wider regeneration benefits, particularly where EP can add significant value.

English Partnerships is represented on the North West Regional Housing Board and takes the strategy into account when making decisions on specific projects in the region.

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister for what period Lancaster City Council has requested funding from English Partnerships for the West End housing regeneration project in Morecambe; and for what sums for that project over that period the Council has applied; [138720]

(2) what discussions English Partnerships has held with Lancaster City Council regarding funding for (a) West End Housing Regeneration Project, Morecambe and (b) Luneside Development, Lancaster; and what decisions were reached; [138721]

(3) what funding English Partnerships is providing to Lancaster City Council to fund (a) a masterplan for the West End Housing Generation Project in Morecambe and (b) annual costs of a project team for the project. [138722]

Keith Hill: The Chief Executive of English Partnerships (EP) met members and officers of Lancaster City Council in October to discuss EP's role in both the West End of Morecambe and the Luneside redevelopment. English Partnerships is working with Lancaster City Council to find appropriate regeneration solutions for both areas.

(a) West End of Morecambe: EP has already committed £100,000 for a masterplanning study to determine the precise scope, cost and timetable for the regeneration of this area. As a result of last month's visit, EP has also agreed to fund the £200,000 cost of a project team for the next 12 months. The Council has made no additional requests for funding from English Partnerships.

EP is working actively with the Council to facilitate the appointment of the masterplanning organisation as soon as possible, hopefully in December.

(b) Luneside: the Council is currently finalising its proposals for the regeneration of this site and a submission is expected to go forward to English Partnerships shortly.

Environmental Health Officers

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people in each year since 1997 (a) were in professional training to become environmental health officers and (b) entered the profession as environmental health officers. [139178]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold this information centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Employers Organisation for local government has provided some limited information taken from the Environmental Health Workforce Survey 2002. This survey shows that during 2002–03 129 student environmental health officers were due to qualify in England. During 2003–04 this figure is expected to increase to 159

During the 12 months up until 1 January 2002, 118 Environmental Health Officers entered English local authorities as first appointments.

Data for other years since 1997 is not available.

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to increase the number of environmental health officers. [139179]

Phil Hope: The Local Government Association set up the Regulatory Services Partnership in July this year, in order to find ways of addressing the need to recruit and retain environmental health officers. The partnership includes the Local Government Association, the Welsh Local Government Association, the Local Authority Coordinators of Regulatory Services, the Improvement and Development Agency, the Employers' Organisation, the Trading Standards Institute and the Chartered Institute of Environmental Health.

The Partnership's programme of actions is aimed at raising the profile of local authority public protection regulatory services with the community and within local and central government. The actions also aim to improve these services generally and address the recruitment and retention issues concerning Environmental Health Officers and Trading Standards Officers.

The need to improve local government recruitment, including that of environmental health officers, has been recognised in the Pay and Workforce Strategy for Local Government. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is working with the Local Government Association and Employers Organisation to take forward the implementation of the strategy.

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many environmental health officers were employed in each year since 1997 (a) in England and (b) broken down by local authority area. [139198]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold this information centrally. The Employers Organisation for local government has provided some limited information taken from the "Environmental Health Workforce Survey 2002". This survey shows that in January 2002 there were 4,565 environmental health officers employed in English local authorities. Data for other years since 1997 is not available.

The survey provides a breakdown by type of authority and shows that 678 were employed in London boroughs, 880 employed in metropolitan districts, 2,299 employed in Shire districts and 708 employed in English unitaries.

Essex Fire and Rescue Service

Mr. Francois: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total number of vacancies for retained firefighters in the Essex fire and rescue service was on 1 September. [139616]

Mr. Raynsford: There are currently 49.25 full-time equivalent (FTE) vacancies for retained firefighters in Essex fire and rescue Service.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many retained firefighters were employed by the Essex Fire and Rescue Service on 1 September 2003. [139662]

Mr. Raynsford: On 31 March 2003 (the latest available figures), there were 379 retained firefighters in post (expressed in 24-hour units). The actual head count figure was 472.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many control room staff were employed by the Essex Fire and Rescue Service on 1 September 2003. [139664]

Mr. Raynsford: On 31 March 2003 (the latest figures available), there were 39 control room staff in post in full-time equivalents (FTE). The actual head count figure was 43.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many fire engines were retained by the Essex fire and rescue service on 1 September. [139666]

Mr. Raynsford: As at 31 March 2003 (the latest figures available) there were 72 front line pumping appliances (fire engines), with 15 reserve pumping appliances.

Exchange Flags (Liverpool)

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what evidence was shown to English Partnerships to substantiate the claim by the Walton Group that they had paid their wholly owned subsidiary Todd and Benn Contractors £23,705,511 in relation to Exchange Flags in Liverpool; [138920]

(2) when the Walton Group presented the certificate to English Partnerships certifying that they had refurbished Exchange Flags in Liverpool; what work was specified in that certificate; and what the (a) names and (b) qualifications were of the persons who signed the certificate. [138921]

Keith Hill: Under the terms of the City Grant Agreement dated 31 July 1992 between the Walton Group and the Secretary of State, each quarterly grant claim submitted by Walton Group was accompanied by a letter from an external auditor and were based on a valuation certificate given by an external Chartered Quantity Surveyor.

The auditor's letters certified that the Walton Group had maintained adequate records and received no other public sector support for the project, and that the claims were in accordance with the City Grant Agreement and Walton Group had defrayed expenditure to cover the qualifying costs incurred.

The last such claim submitted covered the quarter ending 31 May 1994. The accompanying auditor's letter certified that the Walton Group had defrayed expenditure to cover qualifying costs amounting to £23,705,511. It also listed various works that had been undertaken.

I will write to my hon. Friend with further details of this.

Food Expenditure

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much was spent on food by his Department and by each of the agencies for which it is responsible in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; what proportion of that food by value was produced in the United Kingdom; what guidance he has issued to encourage the procurement of home-produced food; and if he will make a statement. [129367]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was formed on 29 May 2002 and it is thus not possible to provide data for the Office prior to then.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's expenditure on food is generally limited to official hospitality provided by the Office and meals and refreshments provided to delegates to the Fire Service College. Expenditure 2002–03 was £225,274 on official hospitality and £341,374 on meals and refreshments at the Fire Service College.

The current catering contracts for the headquarters of the Office neither prescribe the source of produce supplied nor require contractors to provide this information. It is anticipated this will change when new contracts are put in place next year. 72 per cent. of the food supplied to the Fire Service College was produced in the UK.

Officials of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are working closely with the Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) to integrate and promote the principles of sustainable development into the public procurement of food and catering services.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 17 September 2003, Official Report, column 739W, on formula funding share, on what basis he will determine the 2005–06 formula funding share. [138600]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my answer to the hon. Member for Reigate (Mr. Blunt) of 6 November 2003, Official Report, column 794W.

Government Office for the South West

Mr. Flook: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many staff are employed by the Government Office for the South West; and how many were employed in 1997. [137385]

Yvette Cooper: In 1997 the Government Office for the South West (GOSW) carried out work on behalf of four Departments and employed 173 full time equivalent staff. Since then GOSW has taken on additional work for a further six Departments and the administration of the £300 million Cornwall Objective One programme, and now employs 313 full time equivalent staff and 18 inward secondees or attachments.

Hazardous Waste

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many planning applications are being considered for hazardous waste landfill; and how many sites for hazardous waste landfill received planning approval in the last year for which figures are available. [139697]

Keith Hill: Information collected by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on planning applications relates to decisions taken and does not distinguish the waste stream going to landfill. In 2002–03, 335 planning applications relating to landfill were considered by waste planning authorities, of which 302 were approved. A breakdown of those decisions relating to landfill by type of application is in the table.

Nature of application	Number	Granted	Refused
New site	73	57	16
Extension to area	12	11	1
Extension to life	47	45	2
Deepening or other within site	25	25	0
Increasing void for landfill	11	10	1
Ancillary operations	40	38	2
Variation of conditions	69	64	5
Sum of above[1]	227	250	27
Total	335	302	33

[1] Totals do not correspond to number of waste planning decisions because some were categorized as being of a dual nature and some were not specified as to nature of application.

Housing

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 12 December 2002, Official Report, column 488W, on housing, when he expects to publish the updated Survey of English Housing, based on the population figures from the 2001 Census. [139270]

Keith Hill: The report on the Survey of English Housing 2001–02 is due to be published in December 2003. Some of the key findings of the 2001–02 survey were published on 20 August 2002 in "Housing Statistics Summary No. 13", and a large batch of 2001–02 tables was published on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website last December. Further batches have been published since, and currently there are 346 tables on the website. In addition, some of the findings of the 2002–03 survey have been published in "Housing Statistics Summary No. 17" and "Housing Statistics Summary No. 18". It is intended to publish a large batch of 2002–03 tables on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website in December 2003.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many properties in Shrewsbury and Atcham are awaiting adaptations for disabled people; and what the estimated value is of such adaptations. [138886]

Keith Hill: There are currently 353 residential properties in the social and private sector that are awaiting adaptations for disabled people in Shrewsbury and Atcham. The estimated value of the adaptations is £2.3 million.

Landfill Sites

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance he issues to local authorities on the siting of landfill sites in the green belt. [139205]

Keith Hill: National planning policy on waste management is set out in Planning Policy Guidance Note 10 "Planning and Waste Management". This states that > "sites which are protected by national and regional policies on the restraint of development will not generally prove acceptable for waste management facilities".

Local planning authorities should also have regard to Planning Policy Guidance Note 2 "Green Belts" (PPG2). This advises that the carrying out of operations and the making of material changes of use which do not maintain the openness of the Green Belt and conflict with the purposes of including land in the Green Belt would not be appropriate development. In such cases applicants would have to demonstrate that there were very special circumstances that clearly outweighed the harm that the development would cause to the Green Belt. PPG2 also states that when large-scale development or redevelopment of land occurs in the Green Belt (which may include the tipping of waste) it should, so far as possible, contribute to the achievement of the objectives for the use of land in Green Belts.

Morecambe

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much funding was granted by the North West Regional Development Agency in each year since 1997 for regeneration of Morecambe's sea front; and what sums have been allocated by the Agency for future years. [138724]

Keith Hill: A £4.3 million programme for the regeneration of Morecambe was approved in 1994 under the Single Regeneration Budget (SRB) Round 1 scheme "Turning the Tide". Prior to the creation of North West Development Agency (NWDA) in April 1999, this was administered by Government Office for the North West (GO-NW).

The programme was delegated to Lancaster City Council, as Accountable Body, and a Partnership Board which then appraised and approved a number of projects within that delegation limit. Some of those projects provided for the regeneration of the seafront, although the exact amount of funding for that particular activity is not known. The SRB scheme completed in 2002 and was fully spent.

Since it took over responsibility for SRB in 1999, NWDA has allocated over £1 million to Morecambe, including a contribution of £44,000 towards a Morecambe Resort Action Plan study.

Tabled are the breakdowns in the investment since 1997, which includes an additional £482,000 from English Partnerships in 1998–99.

	Investment £ Thousand
1997–98	1,340
1998–99	955
1999–2000	448
2000–01	350
2002–03	72

NWDA is currently working with Urban Splash and Lancaster City Council on proposals to repair, refurbish and re-develop the Midland Hotel and its environs. This could lead to substantial new NWDA investment in future years.

Overcrowded Housing

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the 2001 Census estimate of the percentage of children who live in overcrowded housing; and if he will make a statement. [139268]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is aware of the Census results relating to occupancy, including the relatively high percentage of children who live in "overcrowded" housing. These results, alongside those from the Survey of English Housing, are being taken into account of in our on-going work on this topic.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what obligations a local housing authority has to a household deemed to be statutorily overcrowded. [139269]

Keith Hill: Under section 167 of the Housing Act 1996, a local housing authority is required to have an allocation scheme for determining priorities in the allocation of housing accommodation. That scheme must ensure that reasonable preference is given to:

"people occupying insanitary or overcrowded housing or otherwise living in unsatisfactory housing conditions".

Where a person applies to a local housing authority as homeless, the authority must decide whether or not he is homeless under section 175 of the Housing Act 1996. In reaching their decision, the local housing authority must not treat the applicant as having accommodation (if he does) unless it is accommodation which it would be reasonable for him to continue to occupy. Where statutory overcrowding exists, it will be a relevant consideration in reaching this decision, but under section 177(2) the local housing authority may also have regard to the general circumstances prevailing in relation to housing in the district.

Parks and Green Spaces

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what action his Department is taking to encourage local authorities to protect and develop parks and green spaces, with particular reference to (a) Sunderland and (b) Redcar and Cleveland. [139423]

Keith Hill: Sunderland and Redcar and Cleveland will benefit from our support for local authorities to protect and develop parks and green spaces, which are essential to sustainable communities.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects local authorities to undertake a robust assessment of needs and opportunities and develop a strategic approach to protect and provide their parks and green spaces.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister supports authorities with free advice, delivered through Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment (CABE) Space, to develop a strategic approach to parks and green spaces where they do not already have one.

We will continue to develop and promote better practice in civic spaces.

Regional Co-ordination Unit

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many full-time equivalent employees were employed in the Regional Co-ordination Unit (a) when it was first established and (b) in July. [138132]

Yvette Cooper: 47 full time equivalent staff were employed by the Regional Co-ordination Unit (RCU) when it was first set up in summer 2000 to implement the conclusions of the Performance and Innovation Unit's "Reaching Out" report. Since then the unit has expanded, taking on new roles including business co-ordination and knowledge management, while the network of sponsors has increased from three to 10. In July 2003 there were 65 full-time equivalent employees.

Regulatory Reform Act

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what arrangements he has put in place to assess the effect of orders under the Regulatory Reform Act 2001 on local authorities' activities in (a) the issuing of grants and loans for home repair, improvement and adaptation, (b) aiding people to buy new properties, (c) issuing of disabled facilities grants and (d) the creation of renewal areas; [139347]

(2) how many times local authorities have given financial assistance for home repair, improvement and adaptation (a) in each of the last 10 years and (b) since 18 July 2002, broken down by local authority; and how much was spent in each case; [139348]

(3) how many times local authorities assisted people in buying new properties since 18 July 2002, where the authority judged moving to be more appropriate than adapting an existing home; [139350]

(4) how many times local authorities assisted people in buying new properties where existing homes were subject to compulsory or voluntary purchase for renewal or clearance in each of the last 10 years. [139351]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is working in collaboration with the Joseph Rowntree Foundation and the Welsh Assembly Government by jointly commissioning research to monitor the development and implementation of new strategies by local authorities and to identify good practice for broader dissemination. This follows the coming into force on 18 July 2002 of the Regulatory Reform (Housing Assistance) (England and Wales) Order 2002 (RRO 2002), which gave local authorities wider powers to provide assistance to private homeowners for repair and renovation. This research work is on-going until October 2004. An initial progress report was published by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister at the beginning of November showing that, by March 2003, four-fifths of authorities were in the process of planning and developing loan/grant packages, the majority of which include outside expertise and support. Progress in implementing these strategies will be assessed through the research and from statistical information provided by local authorities.

A table showing the number of grants and amount spent on private sector housing renewal and on disabled facilities by each local authority in England over the last six years has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Separately, data are being collected for 2002–03 and subsequent years on local authority expenditure in England using the new RRO 2002 power. This will show the amount spent on grants and loans by each authority split by type of recipient (elderly on benefit, non-elderly on benefit, disabled) and by geographical area including the amount spent in renewal areas. These data are still being analysed and will not be published until early 2004.

Information is not collected separately on local authority expenditure designed to assist people to move to another dwelling, either for adaptation or because the existing home is subject to compulsory or voluntary purchase for renewal or clearance.

Revenue Support Grant

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much was (a) raised in council tax and (b) contributed in revenue support grant in (i) each authority within and (ii) the county areas of (A) Tyne and Wear, (B) Durham and (C) Northumberland in each year since 2000–01; and what estimate he has made in respect of 2003–04. [139095]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is in the following table.

	Council tax requirement (£000)

Revenue support grant (RSG) figures cannot be considered in isolation in this context, because the amounts payable depend upon the amounts of redistributed national non-domestic rates (NNDR) that an authority receives. Both RSG and NNDR are therefore included in the following table. Grant figures are not consistent between years because of changes in function.

(2) what the percentage cash charge in revenue support grants allocated to Worcester city council was in each year since 1992. [138902]

Note:
In 1992–93, revenue support grant and redistributed national non-domestic rates paid to district councils included a share of the amounts that were payable to the county council for the area, and separate amounts attributable to each district council were not separately identified. Figures for Worcester city council are not therefore available for 1992–93.

Right to Buy

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to publish the review of the system for valuing properties for Right to Buy purposes undertaken by the College of Estate Management. [139250]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects to publish the report of this review in January 2004.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his response to the report of the Select Committee on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the draft Housing Bill, what assessment he has made of extending the Right to Buy discount repayment period to more than five years. [139251]

Keith Hill: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the answer given on 30 June 2003, Official Report, column 116–17W. The Government are committed to the principle of the Right to Buy scheme, and do not wish to penalise tenants disproportionately.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the reports his Department and its predecessors have commissioned since 1979 on valuations for properties bought under the Right to Buy. [139252]

Keith Hill: In March 2002, the former Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions commissioned the College of Estate Management to review the system for valuing properties for Right to Buy purposes. It is expected that the review report will be published in January 2004. No other reports have been commissioned on this topic since 1979.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many right to buy applications there were each month since June 1997, broken down by (a) local authority area and (b) region. [138128]

Keith Hill: The number of right to buy applications in each region are tabled as follows. These are only available on a quarterly basis. Information by local authority is not readily available. Tables providing right to buy sales figures as reported by local authorities are available in the Library of the House.

Sheltered Accommodation

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many sheltered accommodation centres (a) have and (b) do not have resident wardens; and if he will make a statement on the trends regarding resident wardens over the last 10 years. [138911]

Keith Hill: Figures are not available showing how many sheltered accommodation centres have and do not have resident wardens, and on the trends regarding resident wardens over the last 10 years. As part of their on-going assessment of local needs and review of housing-related support services as part of the Supporting People programme, local authorities are examining the amount of sheltered accommodation and housing-related support provided in that accommodation and, for the first time, will be able to gradually build up an indication of longer term trends.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make an assessment of the (a) advantages and (b) disadvantages, including financial considerations, of requiring resident wardens in all sheltered accommodation centres. [138912]

Keith Hill: The Government are committed to ensuring that all vulnerable members of the community receive the housing-related support they need including, where appropriate, warden services in sheltered accommodation, to help them live as independently as possible. To help bring this about, the Supporting People programme provides an integrated framework for planning and funding housing-related support services. Under Supporting People, local authorities will review all housing-related support services, examining their quality, performance and cost-effectiveness. In the case of sheltered housing, we would expect these reviews to consider the advantages and disadvantages of the way in which warden services are provided.

Somali Community (Housing)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what research he has collated on the treatment of the Somali community in relation to housing. [139249]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not carried out any research on this subject. A report on "Somali housing experiences in England" by researchers at Sheffield Hallam university carried out with the support of the Housing Corporation was published earlier this year.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 11 July 2003, Official Report, columns 1062–63W, on housing (black minority ethnic communities), if he will commission research into the housing needs of the Somali community; and whether a decision has been made on taking forward the recommendation on commissioning research on the housing and neighbourhood experiences of black and minority ethnic children. [139259]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has no plans in place to commission research into the housing needs of the Somali community or to collect further data on the housing and neighbourhood experiences of black and minority ethnic children.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister on what research policy decisions on the housing needs of the Somali community are based. [139260]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is not responsible for making policy decisions about the housing needs of specific groups. Local authorities are responsible for formulating Housing Strategy Statements for their areas. These should be based on the best local evidence available. They are required to take into account the needs of particular sections of the community including Black and Minority ethnic populations. Guidance was published in 2000, "Local Housing Needs Assessment: A Guide to Good Practice" and "Black and Minority Ethnic Housing Strategies: A Good Practice Guide".

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the housing needs of the Somali community. [139261]

Sound Insulation

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will include in the decent homes standard the provision of sound insulation in domestic properties (a) constructed and (b) converted into flats and apartments. [139091]

Keith Hill: The issue of noise insulation is already dealt with in the decent home standard. For a property to be considered decent it must meet four criteria one of which is the provision of reasonably modern facilities and services. A property fails to meet this criterion if it lacks three or more of a list of six facilities, one of which is 'adequate noise insulation'.

The guidance on implementing the standard concentrates on insulation from external airborne noise, such as traffic or factory noise. It has this focus because it can be difficult to assess the extent to which domestic noise nuisance is caused by problems with the building itself (either because of its construction or inadequate internal insulation) or by unreasonable activity or behaviour of neighbours or by acute noise sensitivity by the occupant of the home affected.

The Decent Homes Standard applies to all social housing, including purpose built and converted apartments.

Voluntary Bodies (Wolverhampton)

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the voluntary bodies in Wolverhampton in receipt of direct government grant, broken down by (a) capital and (b) revenue. [139139]

Mr. Raynsford: My hon. Friend will be aware that there are in excess of 700 voluntary and community sector organisations in Wolverhampton. They will be attracting funding from a very wide range of government and European funding programmes including SRB, Neighbourhood Renewal Fund, Community Empowerment Fund, ERDF and ESF programmes, New Deal for Communities, Learning and Skills Council and Lotteries funding regimes to name some. There is no single database of organisations and their funding sources, so it is impossible to provide the level of detail required by the question.

A list of organisations funded through the Community Empowerment Network can be obtained from Wolverhampton Network Consortium and the City Council's Voluntary Sector Unit can provide details of the voluntary and community organisations they support via a co-ordinated small grants programme which has sought to simplify the funding process for eight specific small grants initiatives for the voluntary and community sector.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Acceptable Behaviour Contracts

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he collates on the use of acceptable behaviour contracts; in what form; how many local authorities do not use acceptable behaviour contracts; and if he will make a statement. [139224]

Ms Blears: Research conducted in April 2002 showed that there were 173 Acceptable Behaviour Contract (ABC) schemes running in England and Wales, with 1,868 contracts signed. A Home Office Research Development and Statistics publication on the evaluation of an ABC scheme in the London borough of Islington is forthcoming.

The Home Office does not routinely collect statistics on the use or otherwise of ABCs. ABC schemes are voluntary and developed by a range of agencies whose role it is to prevent such behaviour.

Airwave

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what dates he estimates that the Airwave communications system will be fully operational in each police force area. [138527]

Ms Blears: In England and Wales Airwave is already fully operational in the following forces: Cambridgeshire, Humberside, Lancashire, Leicestershire, Greater Manchester, Northumbria, North Yorkshire, Suffolk and West Mercia.

Estimated dates for the other forces in England and Wales to become fully operational are given in the table.

Rollout of Airwave in Scotland will follow after England and Wales.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent to date on the Airwave communications system, broken down by police force area. [138528]

Ms Blears: It is estimated that the Airwave service contract for the provision of the police service's new digital radio communication service will cost £2.3 billion (at 1999 prices) over the 22-year lifetime of the project. In addition, forces have to procure radio terminals and to modernise control rooms. Funding is provided centrally by the Home Office and locally by police authorities.

To date, the Home Office has provided a total of £336.4 million to police forces in England and Wales for Airwave. The break-down by police force area is given in the table.

Alcohol-related Offences

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the proportion of offences related to the misuse of alcohol, broken down by offence category, in each of the last five years. [139227]

Ms Blears: Questions in the British Crime Survey (BCS) ask victims of assault whether they think the perpetrator of the offence was under the influence of alcohol at the time of the incident or not.

Data are available from the 1996, 1998, 2000 and 2001–02 sweeps of the BCS. These are as follows:

Proportion of violent incidents that were alcohol related

	1996	1998	2000	2001–02
Domestic	32	33	44	45
Acquaintance	45	44	36	51
Stranger	55	57	53	58
Mugging	17	15	17	19
All violence	41	41	40	47

The question of whether the perpetrator was under the influence of alcohol or not was not asked of other offences, as this question can only be asked when there is contact with the perpetrator.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost of alcohol-related crime in each of the last five years. [139228]

Ms Blears: As part of their work on developing an Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy for England, the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit published an Interim Analytical Report on 19 September 2003. This report indicated that the annual estimated costs of alcohol-related crime and public disorder were up to £7.3 billion. These estimates were prepared using specially commissioned research by the Strategy Unit. No previous estimates of the costs of alcohol-related crime have been made.

Animal Testing

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many laboratory animals were used in the United Kingdom for the potency testing of batches of botulinum toxin for cosmetic purposes in each year since 2000; and if he will make a statement on Government policy on animal tests for cosmetic products. [136516]

Caroline Flint: Botulinum toxin is not a cosmetic for the purposes of the EU Cosmetics Directive, and no animals have been used to test this material for marketing as a cosmetic in the United Kingdom. It is, however, produced, tested on animals and marketed for clinical use as a prescription only medicine.

The Government, the cosmetic manufacturers and the contract research organisations agreed a voluntary ban on the animal testing of all cosmetics (based upon the EU definition) in November 1997. This voluntary ban applied both to cosmetic ingredients and finished products.

We are committed to putting an end to testing cosmetics on animals across Europe and have led the way and worked hard for many years to try to achieve that. The Government have strongly supported the 7th Amendment on the Cosmetics Directive which was approved by the European Parliament in Plenary on 15 January and by the Council on 27 January 2003. The adopted text extends what has been almost solely a UK ban on testing cosmetic products and ingredients to cover animals throughout the EU.

An animal testing ban on finished products will be introduced immediately after the Directive enters force in 2005, followed by an animal testing ban on ingredients in 2006. The Government welcomes the introduction of an EU wide testing ban as an important and positive step to achieving real improvements in animal welfare standards across the European Community.

The 7th Amendment will also, in due course, introduce a marketing ban. This will mean that cosmetics cannot be marketed in the EU if animal tests have been carried out on either the finished product, or an ingredient or combination of ingredients, once an alternative to that test has been accepted and published by the European Centre for the Validation of Alternative Methods (ECVAM), and not at all after 2009. This ban will apply regardless of whether or not the animal testing took place in the EU. There will be very limited exceptions to the 2009 deadline. The Department of Trade and Industry leads on policy in this area.

Through our contributions to the European Union, we support the work of ECVAM, whose role is to co-ordinate the independent evaluation of the relevance and reliability of tests and validation studies, so that cosmetics products, as well as medicines, vaccines, other biologicals, medical devices, household products and agricultural products, can be manufactured, transported and used more economically and more safety whilst the current reliance on animal test procedures is progressively reduced.

We also support the Test Guidelines Programme of the Organisation of Economic Development and Co-operation (OECD) which should enable alternative methods to be accepted internationally and with minimum delay.

Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to facilitate the trial in normal criminal courts of those detained under section 4 of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001. [139222]

Mr. Blunkett: The Secretary of State will only certify and detain an individual under the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act, (ATCS) part 4 powers, once he is satisfied that criminal charges cannot be brought. This does not preclude the bringing of criminal charges at a later stage, should further evidence come to light. It is not always possible to bring criminal prosecutions. Some types of evidence cannot safely be disclosed in criminal proceedings without putting others at risk and other types of evidence (e.g. intercept evidence) are not permissible in UK criminal courts. This point was extensively debated before Parliament passed the ATCS Act 2001.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders in Gloucestershire have (a) received and (b) breached anti-social behaviour orders since their inception; and if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of ASBOs. [138917]

Ms Blears: The number of notifications received by the Home Office of Anti-Social Behaviour Orders (ASBOs) issued in Gloucestershire from 1 April 1999 (commencement) up to 30 June 2003 (latest available) is seven.

The available information relating to breaches of ASBOs, covers the period 1 June 2000 to 31 December 2001 and shows that of the four ASBOs made, one was breached in Gloucestershire during this time.

Arson

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's strategy is on arson and catching arsonists. [125691]

Ms Blears: We are fully committed to tackling arson through the achievement of our Public Service Agreement target to reduce crime and the fear of crime and through our continued engagement in the work of the Arson Control Forum. We have also recognised the important contribution of the fire service to multi-agency working. From 1 April 2003, all fire authorities are statutory partners in local crime and disorder reduction partnerships, which will help ensure that the fire services play a full role in community safety and raise local ability to tackle arson and the associated areas of crime.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase resources to police forces in order to tackle arson. [137993]

Ms Blears: Provision for policing supported by the Government has increased by 25 per cent. since 2000–01. Allocation of resources locally between various activities is a matter for each police authority and its chief officer of police. Decisions will take account of local pressures and concerns.

Asylum Application

Mike Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when a decision will be taken on the asylum application lodged on 8 June 1998 by Mr. Mohamed Aweis Yusuf, Home Office reference M685182; when the hon. Member for Ilford, South will receive responses to the letters sent to the Minister of State on (a) 16 October 2002 and (b) 1 May 2001; and if he will make a statement. [137514]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 11 November 2003]: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 17 November.

Asylum Seekers

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he plans to take to amend his Department's policies in relation to (a) the detention of children in removal centres and (b) the education of those children in local schools. [131765]

Beverley Hughes: We have no plans to amend our policy in relation to the detention of families with children in removal centres. Children will continue to be detained as members of family groups as it would clearly not be in the interests of children to separate them from their parents. The vast majority of families with children are detained for a short time, most for only a few days immediately prior to removal. Removal centres that may hold families with children for anything more than a few days are required to have arrangements in place to provide educational classes to the children concerned. At present, this relates only to Dungavel Immigration Removal Centre and Oakington Reception Centre. The education provision at Dungavel is well established. The position at Oakington is different in that the need for educational provision has arisen only comparatively recently and is in the process of being put in place. We have no plans to change the overall arrangements for the provision of educational classes or to place the children concerned in local schools.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that asylum seekers are integrated into the community. [138322]

Beverley Hughes: The full integration into British society of asylum seekers awaiting decisions on their claims is neither achievable nor desirable. Asylum seekers are for example, generally not permitted to take up employment. We are working to speed up the decision-making process so that their status is resolved more quickly. Nonetheless the Government is fully committed to ensuring that asylum seekers who make their claims in accordance with the law are enabled to live in decent conditions and gain access to essential services, including education for their children, and that they may live in this country without fear of harassment. We also seek to encourage asylum seekers to contribute through volunteering to the communities in which they live.

In order to promote these ends, the regional management of the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) maintains regular contact with all the relevant statutory and voluntary services in the areas to which asylum seekers are dispersed. NASS holds regular meetings to ensure that issues relating to the local integration of asylum seekers are raised and, where possible, resolved locally. Regional management will be representing NASS and asylum issues in all matters relating to community cohesion. We are also gradually developing our police liaison and intelligence capabilities to help provide safe and secure communities where asylum seekers are dispersed.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with other departments about implementing a strategy to tackle childhood obesity. [138789]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office participates in the Activity Co-ordination Team led jointly by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and the Department of Health which takes forward work on increasing participation in sport and physical activity, primarily in recognition of the significant health benefits.

This is of direct relevance to the prevention and management of childhood obesity.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department has commissioned on the effect on children's criminal behaviour of (a) poor nutrition and (b) childhood obesity. [138788]

Ms Blears: The Home Office is not currently conducting any specific research into the effects that poor nutrition and obesity have on children's criminal behaviour.

There is extensive research on the risk factors which can have an influence on children and young people becoming criminally active. These factors include deprivation and poverty which can of course lead to poor nutrition, and poor diet and lack of opportunity for physical exercise which can contribute to obesity.

The Government's programme to tackle youth crime includes a specific focus on addressing risk factors through the work with families, in neighbourhoods to tackle deprivation, and with education services to improve standards and behaviour and reduce truancy and exclusions.

Class A Drugs

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what percentage of those brought into a police station tested positively for Class A drugs in 2002; and what the level of voluntary take-up of treatment was; [128627]

(2) what percentage of those brought into a police station tested positive for Class A drugs in the last six months for which figures are available; and what the level of voluntary take-up for treatment was for those people. [127671]

Caroline Flint: It is not possible to provide a national figure for the percentage of individuals testing positive for Class A drugs, nor do we have recent data available for positive tests at arrest. However, the percentage of individuals testing positive at charge for cocaine and/or opiates at each of nine pilot sites is shown in the table.

The data have been taken from Home Office Findings 180 "Evaluation of drug testing in the criminal justice system in nine pilot areas". This is available on the RDS website http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs2/r180.pdf and in the House Library.

Home Office Findings 180 "Evaluation of drug testing in the criminal justice system in nine pilot areas".

The Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 gave the police power to drug test arrestees once they are charged with a "trigger offence" (these include property crime, robbery and specified Class A drug offences).

Data on the level of voluntary uptake for treatment by detainees testing positive for Class A drugs has yet to become available from this study. As the evaluation continues information will be collected as detainees/offenders move from one part of the criminal justice system to another, and into treatment.

Communications Masts

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 21 October,

Official Report, column 543W, on communication masts, what plans he has to commission further research recommended in the National Radiological Protection Board report into mechanisms that might transform TETRA energy bursts occurring 17.6 times a second into a current which interferes with biological functions. [139217]

Ms Blears: There is no known mechanism by which the biological functions of the human body could react to radio signals, and the National Radiological Protection Board's independent Advisory Group on Non-ionising Radiation recommended further research on this topic. A study on possible non-linear mechanisms is under consideration as part of the adjunct Mobile Telecommunications and Health Research TETRA programme funded by the Home Office.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 21 October, Official Report, column. 543W, on communications masts, what the conclusions were of the Defence Science and Technology Laboratory study regarding (a) calcium efflux, (b) brain slice electrophysiology and (c) epileptiform activity. [139234]

Ms Blears: The Defence Science and Technology Laboratory (Dstl) work on calcium efflux is complete and shows that TETRA has no effect on calcium exchanges in cells. The work on brain slice electrophysiology and epileptiform activity is still underway. The electrophysiology results are not yet fully analysed. Initial results show no effects of TETRA on epileptiform behaviour.

Community Punishment Orders

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours per week the average offender sentenced to a community punishment order spends engaged in purposeful activity, broken down by probation area. [109594]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not currently collected.

Community Support Officers

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been detained by a community support officer; and in how many cases a police officer took charge of the detainee within half an hour of detention. [139221]

Ms Blears: At present, six police forces are piloting the power of detention, which was given to community support officers by the Police Reform Act 2002. The forces are the Metropolitan Police Service, West Yorkshire Police, Gwent Police, Lancashire Constabulary, Northamptonshire Police, and Devon and Cornwall Constabulary.

As part of ongoing evaluation, when they use their detention powers community support officers in the relevant forces complete questionnaires which are then forwarded to the Home Office for monitoring purposes. The information currently available indicates that;

To date the Home Office has received 161 questionnaires. This does not necessarily represent 161 separate detentions, as it is possible that two community support officers may have been involved in the same incident.

Subsequent evaluation indicates that police officers have arrived within 30 minutes in 98.8 per cent. of cases and that there have been only two incidents where the time limit has not been met.

These questionnaires are still being completed in each force and evaluation of the results is an on-going process. This work is being undertaken jointly by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary and with the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate.

Computer Games Companies

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the contracts his Department has awarded to computer games companies, broken down by (a) company to which the contract was awarded, (b) the date and cost of the contract and (c) the purpose of the contract; what has been delivered to date from each contract; what remains to be delivered; what each game seeks to achieve; and what assessment he has made of their effectiveness in meeting these aims. [139223]

Fiona Mactaggart: No contracts have been awarded to computer games companies.

Note:
The answer includes the Home Department's executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies.

Consultants

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many projects his Department has contracted out to external consultancies in each year since 1997; and at what cost. [138501]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information by project is not held centrally for the Home Department and is not available in the format requested. To provide a complete answer in the time available will incur disproportionate costs.

A similar question was asked earlier this year about spend on consultancy. I therefore refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 29 January, Official Report, column 913W.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will meet the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton to discuss the letter to him dated 9 September, with regard to Mrs. S. Ahmed. [138456]

Mr. Blunkett: I responded to my right hon. Friend in a letter on 13 November 2003. A meeting would serve no useful purpose as there is nothing more I can add to that letter.

Publicity Campaigns

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total cost to his Department was of (a) the Good to be Secure website, (b) the Don't let them bag your booty publicity campaign, (c) the Danny Timpson's Kebabathon computer game and (d) the Bargain Boost computer games; and whether Mr. David Dickinson received a fee for his involvement in the initiative. [138478]

Ms Blears: The Home Office is committed to reducing crime and we implement several campaigns to reduce the risk for the public.

Burglary is a high volume crime. It is a crime that causes fear and concern. Campaigns which help reduce risk and fear is therefore a priority for us. There are several groups who are particularly at risk—the elderly, students, home movers, and holidaymakers.

The campaigns we run are designed to reassure people and reduce their risk by offering them simple, practical advice on burglary prevention.

The students' campaign is one of those key campaigns.

The costs involved in the specific activities (including development costs) the hon. Gentleman mentioned were:

The 'good to be secure' web site	19,470
The 'Don't let them bag your booty' publicity campaign including the 'Bargain bost' computer games	80,000
The 'Danny Timpson's Kebabathon' computer game	12,000
David Dickinson did receive a fee for his involvement in this initiative	10,000
Total	121,470

Departmental Expenditure (Official Residences)

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much the Department spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [134693]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office leases one property, acquired for security reasons, as the London residence of the Home Secretary of the day. A major programme of cyclical refurbishment—the first for some years—was completed in late spring 2002. This was needed to maintain the repair and value of the property and to deal with the impact of substantial flood and storm damage.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans) on 1 July 2002, Official Report, column 176W.

Not included above is rent at £7,100 per annum and costs of security measures. Capital Charge and depreciation are related to the book value of the lease which was revalued in 2001.

2. Officials

Only in exceptional circumstances does my Department provide accommodation for officials other than seconded police officers. At present these are limited to three seconded junior staff carrying out duties which requires them to be located in Central London. The Prison Service also provides its staff including Governor grades with a limited number of married quarters

Excel Exhibition Centre Protesters

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his Answer to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd) of 16 September 2003, Official Report, column 662W, whether he has received the Metropolitan Police report; whether he intends to publish it; and if he will make a statement on the use of anti-terrorism legislation against the protesters at the Excel Exhibition Centre in London on 9 September. [139254]

Fiona Mactaggart: I received an interim report from the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS) on 18 September and a final report on 15 October. The report shows that what happened during the policing of the Defence Systems and Equipment International (DSEi) arms fair has not been routinely replicated across the force area from the time that the Terrorism Act 2000 came into force.

I welcome the steps that have been already been taken to deal with concerns at force level about the use of this power and the enhanced guidance and training that will be given to officers from this point on. I have also agreed with the MPS that we continue to be vigilant and ensure that these powers are deployed correctly.

Drug Offences

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were arrested for drug offences in (a) Tyne and Wear, (b) the North East and (c) the UK in each year since 1997. [138433]

Caroline Flint: Information on the number of persons arrested for notifiable offences is collected at police force area level only. Available data on the number of persons arrested for drugs offences within Northumbria police force area and the North East region are given in the table for the years 1999–2000 to 2001–02. Information for earlier years is not available on a consistent basis. Statistics for 2002–03 will be available later this year.

Figures for Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for the Scottish Parliament and the Northern Ireland Assembly respectively.

Number of persons arrested for drug offences in Northumbria police force area, the North East region and England and Wales

Identity Cards

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the costs involved in introducing a mandatory national identity card scheme in the UK. [132424]

Beverley Hughes: My right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary announced on 11 November that the Government has decided to begin the process of introducing a national identity cards scheme following the consultation paper published in July 2002.

The Government are determined to ensure that the development of a national identity cards scheme is managed to the highest standards, and that the major business change and IT challenges which we face are dealt with effectively. A Programme Board is being established chaired by the Home Office to co-ordinate and drive forward the different elements of the Government strategy. Progress at every stage will be monitored and reviewed as further decisions are taken during the implementation. Before decisions are taken on implementation, there will be an intensive phase of feasibility assessment and prototyping so that decision making is soundly based and risks in the programme are kept to a minimum.

Once the Office of Government Commerce (OGC) has confirmed that the programme is ready to proceed, by means of an OGC Gateway Zero review, we will publish draft legislation to enable the scheme to be introduced.

Set up costs for the first three years have been estimated at £36, £60 and £90 million. Costs thereafter will be covered by charges. Under the proposed scheme, we estimate that a 10 year plain identity card would cost most people approximately £35. The enhanced fee for a combined passport—identity card would be £77and a combined driving licence—identity card would be £73.

The proposed charging schedule would fund free cards for all 16 year olds and a reduced charge of £10 for those on low incomes. We are looking at how those who have been in retirement for some time could obtain a lifelong card, requiring no further payment and are also looking at whether plain identity cards could be paid for by instalments.

For very frail and elderly citizens it would be possible to issue a non-biometric card (for instance those with severe learning disabilities who are in residential care or those over 80).

People who held both a passport and a driving licence would only pay the additional charge for one document. This is because the charge covers the cost of establishing a more secure identity including recording the biometric information which only needs to happen once.

We will continue to work with potential suppliers and partners to ensure estimates are accurate, realistic and deliverable.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his oral statement on identity cards of 11 November 2003, Official Report, column 176, what was the basis for his estimate of savings to be made in benefit and related systems from introducing an ID card was. [139089]

Beverley Hughes: The Department for Work and Pensions estimates that the level of identity fraud in the benefit system is between £20 million and £50 million per annum. A national identity cards scheme would reduce this once cards were widely held. It could also help to streamline the process of allocating National Insurance numbers, though there are no plans in the first stage of the scheme to require the possession of a card in order to obtain a National Insurance number.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from (a) police authorities and (b) other interested parties on the introduction of identity cards, with particular reference to the effect on under-age drinking; and if he will make a statement. [139440]

Beverley Hughes: "Identity Cards—A Summary of Findings from the Consultation Exercise on Entitlement Cards and Identity Fraud" (CM 6019) was published on 11 November 2003 and gives a summary of the comments received from organisations and from the public on identity cards.

It records (at page 111) that police organisations considered that an identity card scheme would assist licensees to control the sale of age related products and (at page 39) that 6 per cent. of members of the public who were surveyed and were in favour of identity cards gave "to stop under-age drinking" as a reason.

Immigration Appeals

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the use in special immigration appeals committees of evidence obtained through torture in a foreign country. [139063]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 17 November 2003]: The Special Immigration Appeals Commission (SIAC) has adopted the common law approach to evidence which may have been obtained elsewhere through the use of torture—save for evidence that is obtained from a party (usually the defendant in a criminal trial), all evidence is admissible, however unlawfully obtained. However, where that evidence may have been obtained by torture, this will bear on the proper weight to be given to the information. The means by which information is obtained therefore goes to its reliability and weight and not to its admissibility.

While we do not condone torture, we do have an obligation to protect national security and public safety and we would be deficient in this duty if we did not properly assess all information involved in association with the war on terror.

IT Equipment

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent on purchasing and upgrading IT equipment in each of his Department's executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003. [138526]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested, which was provided to the hon. Gentleman on 30 October 2003 in response to UIN 135895, is as follows:

Core Home Office:

Notes:

1. The figures are expenditure incurred by the Home Department

National Asylum Support Service

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date Mr. Digby Griffith was appointed to the team which undertook the independent review of the National Asylum Support Service; on what date he was offered his current position at NASS; and on what date he took up that post. [133965]

Beverley Hughes: The independent team established to review the operation of the National Asylum Support Service submitted its report on 30 May 2003.

Mr. Digby Griffith was appointed as Secretary to the independent NASS Review Team during the first week in March 2003 and took up post on 10 March. Following a national open competition he was offered the post of Head of Accommodation in NASS on 24 April. He took up post on 30 June.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences recorded by the police resulted in no further action being taken in each year since 1997. [138499]

Ms Blears: The percentage rates of offences detected and described as 'No further action', are available from 1997 to 2002–03, and are given in the table.

Detection rates as a percentage of recorded offences, for England and Wales

		Percentage of all offences detected with 'No further action' taking place:
Year	Percentage of offences detected (All methods)	Interview of convicted prisoner: (Percentage)	Other (Percentage)
1997–98[2]	28	4	4
1998–99[3]	29	2	5
1999–2000[5]	25	[5]—	4[4]
2000–01	24	[5]—	4[4]
2001–02[6]	23	[5]—	4
2002–03[6]	24	[5]—	4

[1] Crime-related statistics were published on a calendar year basis until 1997, and on a financial year basis thereafter.
[2] Excluding offences of 'other criminal damage' of value £20 and under prior to March 1998.
[3] Percentage detected using the figures derived from the expanded coverage and revised counting rules for recorded crime which came into effect on 1 April 1998, and hence may not be comparable with previous years.
[4] Estimates based on returns from 42 (of the 43) police forces.
[5] Revised detections guidance was implemented on 1 April 1999, and hence detection rates are not comparable with previous years. The new instructions provide more precise and rigorous criteria for recording a detection, with the underlying emphasis on the successful result of a police investigation. Therefore detections obtained by the interview of a convicted prisoner were no longer collected.
[6] The National Crime Recording Standard (NCRS) was implemented by some police forces in advance of it's national implementation on 1 April 2002, and as a result of this, figures are not directly comparable with previous years

MI5

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the undertaking of activities by MI5 which require authorisation by warrant but which have been carried out without such authorisation in place. [138584]

Mr. Blunkett: It is the longstanding policy of successive governments neither to confirm nor deny allegations concerning the activities of the Security Service. We have maintained this policy irrespective of the accuracy or inaccuracy of the allegations made. The intelligence and security agencies each operate under a strict statutory framework. The agencies are overseen by Ministers and by independent Commissioners who hold, or have held, high judicial office. There is no question of the agencies, or anyone else, being above the law.

Passports

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passports have been lost by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in Liverpool in 2003. [133481]

Beverley Hughes: The information is as follows:

(1) 78 passports have been recorded as lost by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in Liverpool during 2003.

(2) The incidence of lost passports amounts to 0.04 per cent. set against the number of applications handled. Current processes do not allow the movement of passports to be tracked through each stage of case consideration.

(3) I have instituted new arrangements to ensure the security and return of passports by IND.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what basis he reached his decision to set fees for (a) applications for variation of leave and (b) endorsing passports at the current level. [136959]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 6 November 2003]: The fees are calculated under Treasury Rules to recover the full administrative cost entailed in considering applications and no more. This is calculated by taking the overall costs of processing the applications divided by the number of decisions we expect to make.

The fee is £155 for a postal application and £250 for personal callers who wish to apply at one of the four Public Enquiry Offices. The charges will ensure we are able to meet the cost of providing for the service and will ensure that we are able to meet the higher standards of service we have set for the Immigration and Nationality Directorate.

Fees were introduced at a time when we were confident that we had in place the service improvements, which were the necessary precursors to charging.

The principle behind charging is to ensure that those who use the service pay for it rather than the general taxpayer.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints he has received in relation to the introduction of fees for (a) applications for variation of leave and (b) endorsing passports. [136961]

Beverley Hughes: I have received a number of letters; particularly those representing the education sector such as UKCOSA, Universities UK and various universities to which I have already responded.

A number of letters, phone calls and emails have also been received from members of the public, including students with regard to both the introduction of charging and the level of the fee. My Officials at Croydon continue to deal with these.

The charges will ensure we are able to meet the cost of providing for the high service standards-service and will ensure that we are able to meet the tighter performance targets we have set for IND. Postal applications should be dealt within 13 weeks from when they are received in IND. We aim to complete 70 per cent. of postal applications within three weeks of receipt in IND. The premium service will enable callers to have their case considered on the same day as long as the application is complete and further enquiries are not required. We have recently invested heavily to ensure that the improved service standards we publish are achievable and sustainable.

The principle behind charging is to ensure that those who use the service pay for it rather than the general taxpayer.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what proportion of the adult population of the United Kingdom does not have a passport. [138694]

Beverley Hughes: Out of the adult population of 45.5 million residents, approximately 10 million, or 22 per cent. do not have a passport.

People Trafficking

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what penalties are in place to punish those convicted of people trafficking; and what measures are in place to deter people traffickers. [139658]

Beverley Hughes: In the White Paper "Secure Border Safe Haven" the Government promised to introduce legislation on trafficking for both labour and sexual exploitation.

The Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act introduced a new offence of trafficking for the purpose of controlling in prostitution with a maximum penalty of 14 years. This offence came into force 10 February 2003.

More wide-ranging offences covering trafficking for the purposes of sexual exploitation were included in the Sexual Offences Bill. The offence of trafficking for sexual exploitation carries a tough maximum penalty of 14 years. In addition to this, the Sexual Offences Bill also introduces a new offence of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of a child, which will protect children up to 18. It covers a range of offences, including buying the sexual services of a child, (for which the penalty ranges from seven years to life depending on the age of the child); and causing, facilitating or controlling the commercial sexual exploitation of a child in prostitution or pornography, for which the maximum penalty will be 14 years imprisonment.

An offence of trafficking for labour exploitation is under development and will be introduced when parliamentary time permits. This will carry the same 14 year penalty, which is the maximum determinate penalty available to the courts.

In addition to these penalties, the Government are taking action against immigration crime bosses to ensure that they do not profit from their crimes. To dismantle these criminal networks, the Government are trebling funding for Reflex with £20 million in this financial year and a further £20 million each year for the following two years.

Reflex is focused on tackling organised immigration crime at source, in transit and in the United Kingdom through intelligence led enforcement action and overseas co-operation. Since April 2003, 20 organised criminal gangs have been disrupted and 16 facilitators have been convicted. Under Reflex successful partnerships have or are being established in a variety of countries such as Romania, Serbia, Bosnia, Montenegro and Bulgaria.

Performance Monitoring

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total cost was of (a) setting, (b) monitoring and (c) measuring the performance targets for his Department in 2002–03; and how many and what grades of civil servants monitor these targets. [137956]

Fiona Mactaggart: Performance targets for the Home Office were agreed as part of the Spending Review 2002. The monitoring and measurement of Public Service Agreement (PSA) targets forms part of departmental performance management. Performance management is an integral part of the day to day running of the Department, and as such it is not possible to separate the specific costs out. The monitoring of progress towards, and performance against, the Department's PSA targets is undertaken by a wide variety of staff at all levels of the organisation.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the performance targets that (a) his Department and (b) its agencies and non-departmental public bodies are required to meet; and if he will specify for each target (i) who sets it and (ii) who monitors achievement against it. [137971]

Fiona Mactaggart: Key performance targets for the Home Office were agreed as part of the Spending Review 2002 and the latest set were published in Spending Review 2002: Public Service Agreements 2003–2006 (CM 5571). They have also been published in various Home Office publications, including "Targets Delivery Report" (CM5754), and on the Department's website. The Department monitors progress towards the targets along with Her Majesty's Treasury and the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit and progress is reported regularly.

Targets relating specifically to Home Office agencies and executive non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) are set by the Secretary of State for the Home Office and are monitored by the Department, including through meetings between each organisation and Ministers or officials. A list of Home Office-sponsored agencies and executive NDPBs is as follows:

Home Office agencies

Criminal Records Bureau
Forensic Science Service Prison Service Agency
UK Passport Agency

Home Office executive NDPBs

Central Police Training & Development Authority (Centrex)
Community Development Foundation

Criminal Cases Review Commission
Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority
Independent Police Complaints Commission

Information on targets, and performance against them, is set out in each organisation's Annual Reports and Accounts, which are laid before Parliament. Information on each organisation, along with links to their individual websites, is also available in the main Home Office website at www.homeoffice.gov.uk.

Police (Firearms)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to release the 2002–03 authorised firearms officer figures for all forces in England and Wales; what the cause of the delay in releasing the figures is; and if he will make a statement. [139068]

Ms Blears: The police use of firearms statistics for 2002–03 are currently being validated and I hope to release them by way of a ministerial statement early in the new year.

Police Funding

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the projected funding per head of population for each police authority in England and Wales is in 2003–04. [138231]

Ms Blears: The information is set out in the table.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the projected funding for 2004 is for each police authority in England and Wales under the Rural Sparsity Grant. [138233]

Ms Blears: I shall announce details of the Rural Policing Fund allocations for 2004–05 with the provisional police funding settlement for 2004–05.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what police funding was allocated to the North West in each year since 1992. [134898]

Ms Blears: The information is set out in the tables.

[1] Government Grant includes Home Office police grant, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) Revenue Support Grant and non national domestic rates, Crime Fighting Fund, Rural Policing Grant, Basic Command Unit funding, Community Support Officer funding, DNA Expansion Programme, Street Crime Initiative and Special Priority payments.

[2] Before 1995–96, when most Police Authorities became independent local authorities, revenue support grant and non-national domestic rates were paid as part of respective county council grant funding.

[3] The grant figures for 2001–02 and 2002–03 are not directly comparable, owing to changes from 2002–03 in the method of funding the National Crime Squad and the National Criminal Intelligence Service. Based on the new arrangements, comparable grant figure for 2001–02 would have been £917,614,378.

* The North West region is policed by Cheshire, Cumbria, Greater Manchester, Lancashire and Merseyside forces.

In addition, the North West forces received the following funding in capital grant, including Airwave and the Premises Improvement Fund.

Police Vehicles

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police vehicles there were in the last year for which figures are available, broken down by (a) police authority area and (b) manufacturer. [139054]

Ms Blears: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Policing Costs

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance is issued to police forces in relation to negotiating contributions from the organisers of (a) football matches and (b) other public events towards the costs of policing those events. [138498]

Ms Blears: Section 25 of the Police Act 1996 enables Chief Officers of Police to provide special police services upon request and in return for payment at a rate set by the police authority.

Home Office guidance is that where the police charge for special services arrangements should be made for full recovery of costs. Home Office circular 34/2000 deals specifically with charging for policing football matches and offers guidance on the calculation of full costs.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to make football clubs responsible for a greater proportion of the costs of policing football matches. [138548]

Ms Blears: Section 25 of the Police Act 1996 enables chief officers of police to provide special police services upon request and in return for payment at a rate set by the police authority.

We appreciate that policing football raises particular issues about resources and deployment which is why a working group, involving the police, police authorities, football authorities and others was set up to consider these matters.

The group has met on a number of occasions but has not concluded its deliberations. It would be premature to speculate on the outcome but a final or interim report will be sought early next year.

Pupil Visa Charges

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will initiate a review of the introduction of visa charges on pupils from overseas attending United Kingdom boarding schools which provides an opportunity for consultation with schools affected. [133072]

Beverley Hughes: The level of charges are set under Treasury rules to recover the full costs associated with delivering the service. Under these rules, there is a requirement for an annual fee review with which the Home Office will comply. My officials are looking at a number of issues for the future including fee structures, the possibility of differential charging and how to further improve the service.

I cannot, of course, guarantee the outcome of the fee review. However, the hon. Gentleman has my assurance that Home Office officials will engage with the DfES, British Council, UKCOSA and others to ensure that the education sector's representations are taken into account.

The principle behind charging is to ensure that those who use the service pay rather than the general taxpayer.

Racism

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many racist incidents were reported to the police in England and Wales in each of the last 10 years. [138400]

Ms Blears: Section 95 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 requires the Secretary of State to publish such information as he considers expedient in order to enable those involved in the criminal justice system to become aware of the financial implications of their decisions, or to avoid discrimination on grounds of race, sex or any other improper grounds.

The number of racist incidents both 'reported' to and 'recorded' by the police in England and Wales since 1991 and published under section 95, can be seen in the following table.

	Total
1991	7,882
1992	7,734
1993–94	11,006
1994–95	11,878
1995–96	12,222
1996–97	13,151
1997–98	23,049
1998–99	23,049
1999–2000	47,814
2000–01	53,092
2001–02	54,351

We believe that the sharp rise in incidents recorded by the police reflects better recording and greater confidence of communities in reporting incidents.

Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department are taking to ensure consistency in using the Regulations of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 across all Government Departments. [136132]

Caroline Flint: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has issued statutory Codes of Practice relating to the exercise and performance of powers and duties under the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000. Subject to the approval of Parliament, new and revised codes will be issued. These codes, together with provision of advice from independent Commissioners and the delivery of training and seminars, support consistency in the use of powers under the Act.

Independent Commissioners, who are appointed by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, are under a statutory duty to keep under review the exercise and performance of the powers and duties conferred or imposed on public authorities by the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000. The Commissioners' role includes, where necessary or appropriate, ensuring consistency in the application of the Act's provisions or the interpretation of the statutory Codes of Practice.

The Government are committed to ensuring that the relevant Commissioners have the necessary resources to carry out effective oversight of public authorities' use of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000.

Road Traffic Regulations (Police Confiscation Powers)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions the police have used their new power to confiscate vehicles that persistently infringe road traffic regulations or are used off-road causing public annoyance in (a) Crosby and (b) England. [137824]

Caroline Flint: The new powers given to the police by the Police Reform Act 2002 relate to offences under sections three and 34 of the Road Traffic Act 1988. Those offences cover driving on-road without due care and attention and driving off-road without authority. As from January 2003, where a vehicle committing one of these offences is being driven in such a way that it is causing or is likely to cause alarm, distress or annoyance to members of the public, a constable in uniform is empowered to stop and seize it. Unless a warning has been given previously, the police are required where practical to warn the person before seizing the vehicle, so that its anti-social use can be stopped.

The new power came into effect at the start of the year and its effective use is being developed. Figures for the number of vehicles that have so far been seized under this legislation are not collected centrally. I understand, however, from the Merseyside Police that as at 10 November, 14 warnings had been issued and one vehicle had been seized in Crosby.

Road Traffic Speeds

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what help he will give chief constables to reduce illegal speeding. [139039]

Caroline Flint: The National Safety Camera Scheme the Government have introduced enables local partnerships to net off money from fixed penalties for speeding offences detected by camera to fund camera enforcement. The Scheme has been shown to be effective in reducing speed related death and injury and in the National Policing Plan we have encouraged all forces to support it. All forces will be fully participating in the scheme by the middle of next year.

Secondment

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people from science and technology backgrounds have been seconded into the Civil Service in his Department in each of the last five years for which data are available. [138628]

Fiona Mactaggart: Secondments are part of the Interchange initiative, which promotes the exchange of people and good practice between the Civil Service and other organisations—public, private and voluntary. Interchange provides opportunities for civil servants to learn new skills, widen their experience and develop ideas, it also brings in skills and experiences from other sectors. 198 staff were seconded into the Home Office during the period 1 April 1998 to 31 March 2003. The Home Office records data on inward secondees according to their originating sector, but it does not specifically collate data on secondees with a science and technology background.

The annual number of inward secondments to the Home Office from outside the Civil Service was:

Year
1998–99	25
1999–2000	30
2000–2001	21
2001–2002	44
2002–2003	78

Terrorism Act

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 4 November 2003, Official Report, column 575W, on the Terrorism Act, if he will break down the number of stop and searches under section 44 (1) and section 44 (2) of the Terrorism Act 2000 by (a) ethnicity and (b) gender in each year. [139267]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 17 November 2003]: The data collected on stops and searches made under section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000 is not automatically cross-referenced with data on the ethnicity and gender of those stopped. This information could be collated and verified only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for authorisations under section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000 have been received from (a) Avon and Somerset, (b) Merseyside, (c) West Midlands, (d) South Wales and (e) Northumbria police forces. [138507]

Mr. Blunkett: The applications received from the listed forces for the authorisation of section 44 powers are as follows.

Listed forces	Applications
Avon and Somerset Police	3
Merseyside Police	7
West Midlands	19
South Wales Police	17
Northumbria Police	2

UK/US Extradition Treaty

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason the Extradition Treaty he signed on 31 March gives the US the right to request extradition from the UK without the need to provide prima facie evidence but does not provide an equivalent right for the UK in respect of individuals in the US. [139131]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Baillieston, (Mr. Wray) on 8 July 2003, Official Report, column 722W.

Website

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the content and design of his Department's website. [139372]

Fiona Mactaggart: We are in the process of redeveloping the Home Office website so that it is seen as a key communication with the general public.

As well as the Home Office site, we have specific issue sites that deal with high priority issues such as policing and crime reduction.

www.policecouldyou.co.uk has processed nearly 5,000 police applications.

www.good2bsecure.co.uk provides crime prevention advice particularly to students who are one of the country's most vulnerable groups.

Working Immigrants

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how significant he estimates working immigrants will be in remedying problems of an ageing population in the UK. [138272]

Beverley Hughes: The latest (interim 2001-based) projections from the Government Actuary indicate that the proportion of the population aged over 65 is projected to increase from 16 per cent. in 2001 to 21 per cent. in 2026 and the number of dependants of pensionable age per 1,000 persons of working age is estimated to grow from 299 in 2001 to 341 in 2026.

Working immigrants help fill labour shortages in a variety of sectors and contribute to productivity and economic growth. However working immigrants are just one factor that can help mitigate the effects of an ageing population. They complement a variety other measures such as increasing labour market participation, improving productivity as well as savings policies and the provision of public services.

HEALTH

Painkillers

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many over-the-counter painkillers contain codeine phosphate; and if he will make a statement. [134993]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 28 October 2003]: According to the records held by the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency, there are currently 96 granted marketing authorisations for medicinal products containing the active ingredient codeine phosphate. These are licensed as pharmacy medicines and are available without prescription from a pharmacy under the supervision of a pharmacist. No products containing codeine phosphate are licensed for general sale.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many opiate-based painkillers are available on prescription. [134994]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 28 October 2003]: According to the records held by the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency, there are currently 440 granted marketing authorisations for products containing opiate or opioid-based substances which are prescription only medicines and licensed for pain relief.

"Making Amends"

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether the reforms set out in his Department's document, "Making Amends", will require primary legislation; [139563]

(2) if he will publish the responses his Department has received to the Chief Medical Officer's consultation paper, "Making Amends". [139564]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The type and scope of legislation needed to implement changes to the way the national health service handles incidents that may involve clinical negligence will depend on the Government's response to the Chief Medical Officer's (CMO's) recommendations on this issue. The CMO's recommendations were set out in his consultation report, "Making Amends", which was published on 30 June. Formal consultation ended on 17 October and responses are now being analysed. It is expected this will take several weeks, given the complexity of the issues.

All those who responded to the consultation exercise on the CMO's report were asked whether they were willing for their responses to be published. More than 170 responses were received and the majority have given consent for their comments to be published. We intend to publish these responses as soon as possible, on the Department of Health's website.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Patrick Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average annual personal care costs were for someone with Alzheimer's disease living in their own home in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [138927]

Dr. Ladyman: Data are not collected centrally on the average annual personal care costs for someone with Alzheimer's disease living in their own home.

Ambulances

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what length of time on average ambulance crews spent on each emergency call out in each of the London boroughs in the last year for which figures are available. [137320]

Mr. Hutton: This information is not held centrally.

Ambulatory Oxygen Systems

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will amend the contractual procedures with equipment suppliers so as to bring forward the date when ambulatory oxygen administration systems can be made available to patients in the NHS; [138564]

(2) when he expects that all patients in England and Wales who have a medical need for ambulatory oxygen administration systems will have them supplied under the NHS; [138565]

(3) by what date ambulatory oxygen administration systems will be made available to NHS patients; [138566]

(4) what assessment he has made of the number of patients in England and Wales in need of ambulatory oxygen administration systems. [138585]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In June, we announced plans to introduce a modernised, integrated, oxygen service. The new contract for oxygen services, currently being drawn up, will set out clear standards for the delivery of services to meet individual patient needs. Specialist hospital consultants will take on the responsibility for assessing and prescribing oxygen, including ambulatory oxygen, with service contractors required to provide the type of service needed.

We are working towards an operational date of 1 April 2005 for the new oxygen services contract. This is the earliest practical date, taking into account the need to minimise inconvenience to patients and to ensure fair and open competition for the new contract.

Details of the service specification for the new contract, currently being drawn up, will be available in early 2004.

Information on the numbers of patients who need ambulatory oxygen is not held centrally.

Audiologists

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies there are for audiologists at each NHS trust. [137855]

Mr. Hutton: Information is not collected separately on audiologists, they are included within the physiological measurement area of work. Information on the number of vacancies lasting three months or more for qualified physiological measurement staff has been placed in the Library.

Chiropody

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will amend the restrictions placed on the provision of chiropody in the health service. [134095]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 4 November 2003]: There are no centrally imposed restrictions on the provision of chiropody in the National Health Service. Primary care trusts have the responsibility for improving the health of the community. In commissioning services PCTs need to plan local services near to patients and ensure that they are identifying the health needs of patients and securing services for them.

Commission for Patient and Public Involvement

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of whether the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement will have new structures in place and working by 1 December 2003. [135637]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health (CPPIH) is well on track to meeting its statutory obligations to ensure all its new structures are in place and working by the time of the abolition of the community health councils on 1 December 2003. The Independent Complaints Advocacy Service has been in place since 1 September 2003, supporting individuals who wish to pursue a complaint against the national health service. Recruitment to patients' forums is progressing well, with national and local advertising campaigns eliciting a large number of applications leading the CPPIH to have every confidence in being able to achieve full forum coverage by 1 December 2003.

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Public Bodies (Access to Meetings) Act 1960 applies to the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health. [134583]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Public Bodies (Access to Meetings) Act 1960 does not apply to the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health (CPPIH), which was also the case with the community health councils.

The NHS Reform and Healthcare Professions Act 2002 requires the CPPIH to adopt the provisions of the Local Government Act 1972 (part v), in respect of access to public meetings. These requirements have been applied and appropriately modified under the CPPIH's Membership and Procedures Regulations 2002.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to extend the life of community health councils in advance of the transition to the new structure. [135634]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Community health councils (CHCs) will be abolished on 1 December. We do not support any further delay in the abolition. We believe such a move would place remaining staff under great strain, give rise to widespread logistical problems and cause confusion among patients and the public.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures he has put in place (a) for the employment of community health council officers and staff in the new complaint and consultation structure and (b) to ensure that community health council (i) records, (ii) skills and (iii) experience are not lost to their local communities. [135635]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A human resources framework for community health council (CHC) staff, agreed with the relevant trades unions, was issued in June 2003. The framework included arrangements for those CHC staff who wished to leave early to take up posts in organisations providing independent complaints advocacy services, local network providers to patients' forums, overview and scrutiny committees (OSCs) and other posts in the national health service dedicated to patient and public involvement. The framework also made provision for clearing houses, training opportunities and helplines to assist CHC staff find alternative employment in the NHS. Guidance on the retention and disposal arrangements for CHC records was also issued in June 2003. The Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health continues to work with CHCs to consider the best ways to transfer valuable local knowledge to patients' forums to help them build local capacity. CHCs have for some time been working with patient advice and liaison services and OSCs, including sharing experiences and local knowledge, so that those organisations are able to carry out their new responsibilities as effectively as possible.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy that new organisations handling complaints and patient issues in place of community health councils should establish (a) local offices and (b) drop-in advice services. [135636]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The independent complaints advocacy service, that supports people if they want to make a complaint against the national health service, provides a service across the whole of England from a mixture of regional and local offices. It is not a general drop-in advice service.

Patient advice and liaison services, providing on-the-spot help and advice to patients, their families and carers, exist in almost all NHS trusts and primary care trusts (PCTs) and do provide a drop-in advice service.

Patients' forums, providing new opportunities to get involved in health services, are being set up for every NHS trust and PCT and will operate locally. Providing a drop-in advice service is a function of PCT patients' forums.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines are in place to ensure that patients' interests are safeguarded during the period leading up to the abolition of community health councils. [136461]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The majority of community health councils (CHCs) will continue to operate to ensure that patients' interests are safeguarded up to the abolition date. Each CHC has an exit strategy based on national and local guidelines. The Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health continues to work with CHCs to consider the best ways to transfer valuable local knowledge to patients' forums to help them build local capacity. CHCs have also been liaising with organisations providing independent complaints advocacy services and have for some time been working with patient advice and liaison services and overview and scrutiny committees, sharing experiences and local knowledge to enable those organisations to pick up their new powers and responsibilities.

Dementia

Mr. Patrick Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of people in care homes have a form of dementia; what proportion of care homes are registered as being able to accept people with Alzheimer's disease; and what plans he has to ensure that care home staff receive dementia care training. [138926]

Dr. Ladyman: Data are not collected on the number of people with dementia, in the population generally or in care homes in particular. Research evidence shows that about five per cent. of the population over 65 has dementia. This represents about 600,000 people in the United Kingdom. Alzheimer's disease causes up to 60 per cent. of cases of dementia.

All care homes which have the client group/service user category of DE (dementia under 65 years) or DE(E) (dementia over 65 years) are able to accept client/service users with Alzheimer's disease.

Regulation 18 of the Care Homes Regulations 2001 requires care home providers to ensure that at all times there are suitably qualified, competent and experienced staff working in care homes in such numbers as are appropriate for the health and welfare of the residents. It also requires providers to ensure the staff they employ receive training appropriate to the work they are to perform. The National Care Standards Commission is responsible for ensuring care homes conform to the regulations and meet the assessed needs of residents.

Dentistry

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact which moving responsibilities for dentistry from health authorities to primary care trusts has had on registration numbers. [135281]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts (PCTs) took over the responsibility for the administration of the general dental services (GDS) arrangements from 1 October 2002. National arrangements for determining remuneration of dentists working in the GDS were not affected by these changes. The level of patient registrations in the GDS has remained broadly stable since October 2002. Patients do not need registration in order to access national health service dentistry through the community or personal dental services. Arrangements are also in place for patients to access NHS dentistry on an occasional basis in the GDS.

Subject to Parliament, the Health & Social Care (Community Health & Standards) Bill will give new duties to PCTs from April 2005 to secure dental services and will enable them to provide assistance and support to dental practices with which they contract. From the same date, the £1.2 billion held centrally for dentistry will be devolved to PCTs to support them in delivering their new duties on dentistry.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists offered NHS treatment in (a) Taunton and (b) Somerset in each year since 1997. [136899]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is available for the Somerset Health Authority area for the years 1997 to 2001 and is shown in the following table. For the years 2002 and 2003, information is given in the table for Taunton Dean Primary Care Trust (PCT) area and for four Somerset PCTs.

General Dental Service: Number of Dentists in Somerset 1997 to 2003

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the safety of (a) mercury and (b) silver fillings in dentistry; [138971]

(2) what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) received on risks associated with using (i) mercury and (ii) silver in tooth fillings; and if he will make a statement. [138985]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Dental amalgam is a combination of alloy particles, mainly silver, and mercury. Dental amalgam is the most frequently used material for restoring decayed teeth. Its main advantages include wide indications for use, ease of handling and excellent physical properties. It has been used in dentistry with good results for more than a century.

The 1998 European Union expert report concluded that currently available data indicate that mercury from dental amalgam restorations will not cause an unacceptable health risk to the general population. There is little evidence that an unacceptable health risk is associated with occupational exposure of dental personnel providing due care is used in the preparation and handling of dental amalgam. The same report also concluded that there is no scientific evidence that the use of dental amalgam is related to adverse effects on pre- and post-natal health or fertility. There are therefore no plans to commission further research into amalgam safety. However, it remains the Department's advice that dentists should continue to avoid or delay any dental intervention or medication during pregnancy.

Digital Hearing Aids

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the waiting time is for digital hearing aids in the NHS, broken down by primary care trust area. [138491]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not collected centrally. We have invested £94 million over two years, which will be used to make digital hearing aids available across England by April 2005.

Early Intervention Services

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been invested in the (a) planning and (b) establishment of Early Intervention Services; how much has been allocated to each primary care trust; how many Early Intervention Services have been established; and where they are. [138475]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The funds necessary to set up early intervention teams, as envisaged in the Priorities and Planning Framework 2003–06, have been made available to primary care trusts within their general allocations.

The numbers of early intervention teams in operation, according to local implementation team catchment areas, are shown in the table.

Epilepsy

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the provision of specialist epilepsy nurses for children with epilepsy. [139149]

Dr. Ladyman: We recognise the important role that epilepsy specialist nurses play in the treatment and management of children and adults with epilepsy. Around 100 epilepsy specialist nursing posts have already been developed in both hospital and community settings. Primary care trusts are best placed to determine the number of such posts required to support the development and delivery of local epilepsy services.

We are currently developing the national service framework (NSF) for long term conditions, which will focus on improving the standard of neurology services across England for a range of conditions, including epilepsy. As part of the process of developing the NSF, work is in hand to consider relevant work force issues such as the need for increased numbers of staff but also for new ways of working, including skill mix, role extensions and multi-disciplinary working, based around patient needs. We expect that the group looking at these work force issues will make recommendations on the future supply of professionals and development of new ways of working to inform national work force planning processes. The needs of people with epilepsy will be considered in this work alongside other specialties and conditions.

Foundation Hospital Trusts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the likely range of costs of (a) building and (b) maintaining the membership base of an NHS foundation trust. [138559]

Mr. Hutton: The costs associated with a membership base for a National Health Service foundation trust will depend on a number of factors, including the size of membership. Experience of other membership organisations suggested that the cost of establishing and maintaining a membership base of 5,000 people is likely to be approximately £2.25 per member per annum, although these costs will be lower the larger the membership.

Foundation Trusts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he made of the effects of piloting the proposals for NHS foundation trusts before allowing their roll-out in England. [139117]

Mr. Hutton: Piloting was a consideration as the proposals for national health service foundation trusts were developed. However, it was concluded that piloting would not achieve the radical and comprehensive reform that is required to deliver the freedoms and local accountability central to the Government's policy on NHS foundation trusts. There will, however, be opportunities to learn from the experience of the first wave NHS foundation trust applications.

General Practitioners

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow), of 8 January 2003, Official Report, columns 278–79W, on general practitioners, what the figures were for the year to April 2003. [137377]

Mr. Hutton: The number of whole-time equivalent general practitioners in each strategic health authority, Government office region and in England between October 1997 and March 2003 are shown in the table.

Health Care Assistants

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health care assistants work in the NHS; and if he will list the titles they work under in (a) England, (b) each region and (c) each NHS trust. [138177]

Mr. Hutton: As at September 2002, there were 210,462 healthcare assistants employed in the national health service according to the non-medical workforce census. Healthcare assistants perform a similar role as other groups in the NHS, including nursing auxiliaries and assistants to qualified scientific, therapeutic and technical staff. These staff are included in the above figure and also the Performance and Planning Framework target for 27,000 more healthcare assistants by 2005 over a 2002 baseline.

Job titles of staff within NHS organisations are determined at a local level and are not collated centrally.

Details of the number of healthcare assistants by primary care trusts have been placed in the Library.

Heath Care (Bath/North East Somerset)

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time for patients from Bath and North East Somerset was in (a) 1997 and (b) 2003 for (i) cancer treatment and (ii) heart operations. [136327]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information for 1997 is not available. Specific information on heart operations is collected from patients waiting over nine months at the end of the quarter. At quarter ending September 2003, there were no patients waiting over nine months within the Bath and North East Somerset primary care trust area. Trust level data on waiting times for cancer treatment for quarter ending September 2003 are published at: http ://www.doh.gov.uk/waitingtimes

Health Services Planning

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Government will reassess the priorities and planning framework for health and social services; and how future priorities and planning frameworks will take account of the needs of people with disabilities. [138462]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government has introduced a three year planning cycle to allow for greater stability in National Health Service and social care planning. We are aiming to announce the priorities and planning framework for the next three year period, 2005–06 to 2007–08, in autumn 2004. No decisions have yet been made about the contents of this priorities and planning framework.

Kaiser Permanente System

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the findings of his visit to the Kaiser Permanente healthcare system in the US, with particular reference to the costs of the system. [138834]

Dr. John Reid: During my visit to Washington DC in October, I visited the West End Medical Centre to meet staff and patients and to see at first hand how Kaiser Permanente serves its members. At the medical centre, I learnt about the way in which Kaiser involves patients in their own care, and heard a presentation about the prevention and treatment of diabetes. I was given a tour of the medical centre and talked to staff and patients. The costs of the Kaiser system have been studied by independent researchers whose comparison of the national health service and Kaiser was published in the British Medical Journal last year. Departmental officials are working with Kaiser to explore how we might learn from their approach in the next stages of NHS reform.

Long-term Care

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response he has given to the statement published in October by nine members of the Royal Commission on Long-Term Care. [139298]

Dr. Ladyman: No statement has been made in response to the statement by nine of the members of the Royal Commission on Long-Term Care which reported in 1999. However, we do not believe that making personal care free for everyone is the best use of limited resources. Instead we have significantly increased investment in other aspects of older people's services. We believe that investing in this way will secure greater benefits for older people than could have been achieved by simply providing free personal care.

The recent publication of performance indicators and star ratings for social services for 2002–03 demonstrates that the Government's policy is now having the desired effect with 81,500 people in England now receiving intensive home care to maintain their independence. The proportion of households over the age of 65 receiving intensive home care has risen from 7.9 per 1,000 in 1998–99 to 10.4 per 1,000 in 2002–03 and 57 per cent. of older people in England report that they were either very satisfied or extremely satisfied with the services they received in their own home.

Long-term Conditions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the Government will ensure that the National Service Framework for Long Term Conditions is given sufficient priority by primary care trusts; and what the reasons were for the decision not to set milestones and targets. [138461]

Dr. Ladyman: Our strategy to support delivery of the NHS Plan is to set a clear national framework of standards backed up by strong inspection regimes and increasingly to give more responsibility to front-line health and social services providers so that local organisations have more flexibility and freedom to plan, resource and deliver services. As a result we set fewer central targets. Progress in policy areas not directly linked to national targets can be monitored and driven forward in a number of ways, for example:

Primary care trusts can set local targets and performance manage progress locally.

The Commission for Health Improvement (to become, subject to legislation, the Commission for Healthcare, Audit and Inspection) and the Social Services Inspectorate (to become, again subject to legislation, the Commission for Social Care Inspection) will take account of nationally set standards including national service frameworks when inspecting hospitals and other providers, and may undertake themed inspections.

Patients' forums will be able to identify where services are not meeting the standards.

Patient feedback, both informal and formal (for example, patient surveys), will provide a local means of identifying shortfalls in services.

Policies like the expert patients programme and the patients choice programme are also giving people an increasing say in local services and their own treatment.

Mental Health

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make it his policy to exempt people with mental health problems from paying prescription charges; [136114]

(2) if he will assess the long-term effects upon NHS finances of providing free prescriptions for people with long-term mental health problems; and if he will make a statement. [136133]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We have no plans to make an assessment of the effects upon national health service finances of providing free prescriptions for people with mental health problems.

Prescription charges are expected to raise some £446 million for the NHS in 2003–04 and are a valuable source of revenue for the NHS.

Our policy is to help those who may have difficulty in paying prescription charges, rather than extending the exemption arrangements. There are extensive exemption, remission and prepayment arrangements which mean that around 85 per cent. of all prescribed items are supplied free of charge. Around 10 per cent. of items are paid for at the point of dispensing with another five per cent. going to holders of prepayment certificates.

Patients who are liable to pay may seek help through the NHS low income scheme or by using a prescription prepayment certificate need to pay more than £32.90 for four months or £90.40 for 12 months, for all the NHS medication that they are prescribed.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of whether the prevalence of physical illness amongst mental health service users is higher than amongst the general population. [138352]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Office for National Statistics survey, "Psychiatric Morbidity Among Adults Living in Private Households", 2000, found that there was a clear relationship between the number of neurotic disorders present and the reporting of a physical complaint.

Just under 38 per cent, of adults with no neurotic disorder reported having a physical complaint while this figure rose to 57 per cent, of those with one neurotic disorder. Among those with two or more neurotic disorders, 67 per cent, reported at least one physical complaint.

The same survey found that people assessed as probably having a psychotic disorder were more likely than those without to report a longstanding physical health problem. Overall, 62 per cent, of those with probable psychosis reported a physical complaint, compared with only 42 per cent, of those without this disorder.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mental health care beds in the independent sector have been occupied by NHS patients on average in the last five years, broken down by (a) number of patients and (b) bed days. [138492]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not centrally available. However, individual primary care trusts would be able to provide details of the beds they have commissioned from the independent sector upon request.

Arrangements are being made for National Health Service use of the independent sector to be included in centrally returned data via hospital episodes statistics. In time, this will capture all activity sub-contracted by NHS trusts or commissioned by the NHS. Early estimates have been made in respect of general and acute activity only.

MRI Scans

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in (a) East Sussex and (b) England are waiting for MRI scans; and what the longest time is that a patient has had to wait for an MRI appointment. [137081]

Mr. Hutton: Specific data on waiting times for diagnostic tests are not collected centrally. The central returns capture consultant speciality level data on waits for a first out-patient appointment and for in-patient admissions.

However, it is the Government's priority to ensure that all patients are seen quickly in the first instance so that if diagnostic tests are required they are requested sooner. Where this is not the case, we are determined to speed up the process. The national health service is committed to reducing the length of time that people wait before their treatment starts and the NHS Plan set targets for staged reductions in waiting times.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his plans to provide additional MRI scanning capacity in East Sussex. [137082]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Brighton and Sussex University Hospitals National Health Service Trust and Royal Surrey County Hospital NHS Trust have been identified as priorities for an additional magnetic resonance imaging scanner from central funding. Both scanners will be delivered by December 2004.

National Institute for Clinical Excellence

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria are used in deciding which treatments are referred to the National Institute for Clinical Excellence. [139145]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The work programme for the National Institute for Clinical Excellence is determined by Ministers having regard to national health service priorities and published selection criteria. These criteria are set out on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/nice/consultation2002/overviewdec02.pdf.

National Miminum Standards

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the formal status is of the national minimum standards of the National Care Standards Commission. [139558]

Dr. Ladyman: Whereas regulations are mandatory and form a statement of the law, compliance with national minimum standards is not itself enforceable. However, in assessing whether a care establishment conforms with the relevant regulations the National Care Standards Commission must take the national minimum standards into account.

National Service Framework

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he intends to publish the National Service Framework for long-term conditions; [139488]

(2) if he will provide additional ring-fenced funding for the implementation of the National Service Framework for Long-Term Conditions. [139499]

Dr. Ladyman: We currently plan to publish the national service framework for long-term conditions at the end of next year. Implementation will take place over 10 years from 2005 and will be in line with our overall strategy to support delivery of the NHS Plan, which is to set a clear national framework of standards backed up by independent inspection and, increasingly, to give more responsibility to front-line health and social services providers so that local organisations have more flexibility and freedom to plan, resource and deliver services. As a result we are increasing general funding allocations to local national health service and social care organisations.

Needlestick Injury

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for the introduction of safer devices to reduce the risk of needlestick injury in the NHS. [135220]

Mr. Hutton: The Department is currently carrying out work on the production of guidance on health, safety and welfare issues for national health service staff. The Medical Devices Agency has also issued guidelines for the safer use of needles and sharps.

We are working closely with colleagues from the Unions, Royal Colleges, Safer Needles Network and manufacturers and expect to launch new web based guidance in the spring of 2004.

Both the Health and Safety Executive and the Department are advising NHS Trusts to carry out risk assessments in areas of high risk and to introduce into these areas "safer" devices, which they can then evaluate in use.

The Department is also working closely with colleagues in the Health and Safety Executive, the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency and the NHS Purchasing and Supplies Agency, to identify further action that can be taken on this issue.

NHS Charges

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much accrued to the NHS from charges on non-UK citizens for treatment in the NHS in each of the last five years. [137491]

Mr. Hutton: Entitlement to free national health service treatment is based on residence in the United Kingdom. The National Health Service (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Regulations 1989 place a duty on NHS trusts to establish whether a patient is ordinarily resident or otherwise eligible for free NHS hospital treatment and if not to levy a charge for any treatment provided.

The amounts collected from NHS charged patients are not separately identified in trust accounts and are not collected centrally.

NHS Dentistry

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statistics his Department has collected on the availability of NHS dentistry in each year since 1997; if he will make a statement on the level of availability of NHS dentistry; and what measures he is taking to increase the availability of NHS dentistry. [134710]

Ms Rosie Winterton: For the general dental service (GDS), statistics are available each month as a by-product of the dentists' payment system. Relevant statistics include: the number of dentists; patient registrations; and the number of courses of treatment. The personal dental service (PDS) commenced in October 1998 and summary activity statistics are available. For the community dental service (CDS), data is available annually on the number of dentists and on activity. Information is also available annually on the emergency dental service (EDS). Since November 2001, information is also available on dental telephone calls made to NHS Direct.

There were 18,200 GDS dentists in June this year, compared to 16,300 in June 1997; a rise of 1,900.

From September 1996, the registration period for adults was shortened from 24 months to 15 months. As a result adult registrations fell between 1997 and August 1998. Registrations lapse if a patient does not attend during the registration period. In the five years between September 1998 and September 2003, adult registrations fell by 100,000, or 0.7 per cent.

Children's registrations have fallen by 1.5 per cent., but the children's population is also falling.

The number of adult courses of treatment in the GDS increased by about one million between 1997–98 and 2002–03. In addition, 500,000 patients were seen in 2002–03 in the PDS, which started in October 1998.

With regard to EDS, a total of 17,000 sessions were worked in 1997–98 and 133,000 patients were seen. The corresponding figures for 2002–03 were 38,000 sessions and 241,000 patients.

The number of episodes of care in the CDS fell from 1.1 million in 1997–98 to 0.6 million in 2002–03. During this time some CDS services have moved into PDS arrangements.

The number of calls to NHS Direct increased from 11,000 in November 2001 to 18,000 in July 2003.

We recognise that in some areas people are not able to register with a national health service dentist. Patients who cannot or choose not to register with a dentist can access dental services by telephoning NHS Direct for information on NHS dental services. Arrangements are also in place for patients to be seen under the GDS on an occasional basis.

The Government remain committed to NHS dentistry and are taking forward major reform to modernise it. Subject to Parliament, under the Health & Social Care (Community Health & Standards) Bill primary care trusts (PCTs) will assume responsibility for commissioning primary dental services from April 2005. With this new responsibility will go the £1.2 billion funding for dentistry which is held centrally.

The Health & Social Care (Community Health & Standards) Bill will also enable PCTs to provide assistance and support to dental practices with which they contract. To enable PCTs to provide such assistance in advance of 2005, the General Dental Services Incentive Schemes Directions 2003 have been published, together with guidance to PCTs.

We have also set up a NHS support team to work with those areas which are hardest pressed and have announced new funding of £44 million to support dental access, choice and quality.

NHS Direct

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of NHS Direct staff has a clinical role. [134857]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on each of the NHS Direct staffing groups is not collected centrally. The proportion of NHS Direct frontline staff who deal with the handling of clinical calls is 1,756. The figure of 1,756 comprises of 1,063 nurses, 543 call handlers and approximately 150 health information advisers.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases have been dealt with by NHS Direct; how many calls have been abandoned; how many call centres have closed; how many call centres are operational, and where they are; what the running costs in 2003–04 are of each call centre; and if he will make a statement. [136869]

Ms Rosie Winterton: NHS Direct has handled over twenty million calls since the launch of the service in March 1998. Since December 1999, NHS Direct has collected national data centrally and a total of eight per cent. of the total calls to NHS Direct have been abandoned. NHS Direct has been operating from twenty-two NHS Direct sites since October 2000 and all of these sites are still fully operational.

Running costs for the 22 sites in 2003–04 are shown in the table.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average monthly running costs of NHS Direct have been over the last six months; and if he will make a statement. [136872]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The average monthly running costs of NHS Direct over the last six months are approximately £12,686,000 a month.

NHS National Programme

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what cost-benefit analyses have been carried out as part of the initial work of the NHS National Programme projects. [127634]

Mr. Hutton: Each major project within the national programme for information technology in the national health service (NPfIT) is subject to business case approval process. The business cases include what conventionally can be termed cost-benefit considerations, developed with increasing detail through the life of the project and subject to review and approval at key stages.

The business cases completed and approved to date are as follows:

NHS E-mail and Directory Service—Full business case approval received 13 September 2002, contract awarded to EDS on 26 September 2002.

Electronic appointment booking—Full business case approval received 26 September 2003, contract awarded to SchlumbergerSema on 8 October 2003.

The procurement process is continuing for the remaining key elements of NPfIT and relevant business case approval will be received before proceeding through to final award of contract for the following:

Integrated care records service (includes local service providers for the geographic clusters and national application service provider for NHS Data Spine)

N3 (The New NHS Network).

National Institute for Clinical Excellence

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria the National Institute for Clinical Excellence uses to decide when to look at new treatments in between their particular class appraisals. [137575]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The work programme for the National Institute for Clinical Excellence is determined by Ministers having regard to national health service priorities and published selection criteria. These criteria are set out on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/nice/consultation2002/overviewdec02.pdf

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide the National Institute for Clinical Excellence with extra funds (a) to carry out more appraisals and (b) to issue interim guidance on new technologies during 2004. [137576]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence has been notified of its funding for the three financial years 2003–04 to 2005–06. The funding includes provision for an additional appraisal committee to be established.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is being given to funders to ensure that new medical treatments that are class compatible with the National Institute for Clinical Excellence appraised treatments are not denied funding because they have become licensed in between NICE's appraisal. [137577]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In August 1999, the Department issued Health Service Circular 1999/176, which asks national health service bodies to continue with local arrangements for the managed introduction of new technologies where guidance from the National Institute for Clinical Excellence is not available at the time the technology first became available. These arrangements should involve an assessment of all the available evidence.

Nurses

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many learning disability specialist nurses are employed in each primary care trust; [138041]

(2) what the ratio is of specialist learning disability nurses to (a) population and (b) patients receiving such specialist care in each primary care trust area. [138042]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 11 November 2003]: Information is not collected centrally on the number of patients receiving specialist learning disabilities care. Employment arrangements of learning disabilities nurses vary from place to place; they are employed by organisations other than primary care trusts (PCTs), which often cover several PCT areas. It is therefore not possible to show the ratio of qualified learning disability nurses to PCT populations. Information on the number of qualified learning disabilities nurses by strategic health authority and per 100,000 population has been placed in the Library.

Older People (Services)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the definition of a stroke unit in relation to the milestones within the National Service Framework for Older People. [138180]

Dr. Ladyman: The formal definition of a stroke unit is still being developed. We would expect, however, that there would be a consultant physician with specialist knowledge of stroke formally recognised as having principal responsibility for stroke services. This consultant would be supported by a multi-disciplinary team who are specialists in stroke care.

Overseas Treatment Scheme

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 9 June 2003, Official Report, column 692W, on overseas treatment, how many further operations have been carried out abroad under the NHS overseas treatment scheme; whether he is now in possession of information on the clinical outcomes of these operations; and what proportion of them resulted in medical complications. [136944]

Mr. Hutton: Since 9 June 2003, no patients have been treated in France as part of the overseas treatment programme. The total number of patients treated in France is 275. The total number of patients treated abroad, including the pilot project, is 588.

The Department does not routinely collect information about the post-operative complication rates arising after surgery for patients treated abroad.

National health service organisations may collect and analyse this kind of information, among other indicators of quality, as part of their local clinical governance arrangements designed to assure and continuously improve the quality of care for all NHS patients. The NHS is responsible for ensuring that NHS patients receive high clinical standards of care wherever they are treated. From November 2003, where orthopaedic patients are treated abroad, there is support and agreement to register these patients on the United Kingdom National Joint Registry.

East Kent Hospitals NHS Trust local audit committee, commissioned by the overseas commissioners, is undertaking a comparative audit of outcomes against patients treated by local consultants. When completed, East Kent Hospitals NHS Trust will hold this information.

Patient Forums

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the proposed statutory patient and public involvement forums in England are served by local network providers who are insolvent. [137199]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No local network provider contracted to support patients' forums is insolvent.

One organisation involved in a joint contract, The College of Health, has recently become insolvent. However, the Council of Ethnic Minority Voluntary Organisations, which was a joint contractor with the College of Health to provide staff support, is now contracted solely to provide the support to the patients' forums previously covered under the joint contract.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who will determine which applicants will be selected to serve on each patient and public involvement forum. [137484]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health is responsible for appointing members of patients' forums. Regional managers or delegated members of staff lead the selection decision for each potential patients' forum member. The decision is made against nationally uniform selection criteria, supported by an appeals procedure.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications have been received for each patient and public involvement forum. [137485]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information for individual patients' forums is not available. The national figure for applications for membership of patients' forums is 3,793 at 11 November 2003, which represents over 90 per cent. of the target for the first tranche of recruitment.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to ensure that (a) organisations given contracts to organise patients' forums and (b) the members of patients' forums (i) have experience in patient advocacy, (ii) have knowledge of the working practices of the NHS and (iii) live in the local community. [135632]

Ms Rosie Winterton: People from all walks of life are encouraged to join patients' forums, bringing with them a diversity of experience and views. The majority of members of a forum must be people for whom services are being or have been provided by the relevant national health service trust or relevant primary care trust (PCT) and, in the case of PCTs' patients' forums, are living in the area where the service is provided. A general understanding of the NHS by members is desirable. More important is to find individuals who have a real interest in improving services and a commitment to represent the views of the community served by the trust or PCT.

Local network providers were identified using a competitive tendering programme and were awarded contracts on the basis of their ability to provide effective support at a community level, not where they were located.

It is not the role of patients' forums or local network providers to provide patient advocacy. Under the new system this is given by patient advice and liaison services and independent complaints advocacy services.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patient forums are in place; and how many members have been appointed. [135633]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The programme of recruitment to the patients' forums is still under way. We understand the national and local advertising campaigns have elicited a large number of applications, which are currently being processed by the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health (CPPIH). The CPPIH is on track for achieving full forum coverage by 1 December.

Performance Targets

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his Answer to the honourable Member for Truro and St Austell of 6th February 2003, Official Report, column 450W, on performance targets, how his Department will measure progress towards achieving the public service agreement target on value for money. [138199]

Mr. Hutton: The value for money Public Service Agreement (PSA) target requires that 'Value for money in the National Health Service and personal social services will improve by at least 2 per cent. per annum, with annual improvements of 1 per cent, in both cost efficiency and service effectiveness'.

For the NHS, the cost efficiency element of the PSA target will be measured by comparing data from the National Schedule of Reference Costs between one year and the previous year. Adjustments to this simple comparison will be made to take account of changes in casemix, quality investment, input price inflation and externally driven, one-off, cost-increasing events such as rising employer pensions contributions.

The quality element of the target will be assessed by comparing the estimated expenditure on increasing service effectiveness with data on quality from the NHS performance ratings exercise. A key element of this will be the value that can be placed on the lives saved from reducing mortality following health care interventions.

For personal social services, costs will be based on unit costs of services, after some adjustments to allow for increases in funding for quality improvements. The quality element will be based on the quality indicators published by the Department, in the social services performance assessment framework, for instance, waiting times for care packages.

Personal Care

Mr. Patrick Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to reassess the means test limit for personal care costs. [138928]

Dr. Ladyman: All individuals receiving residential care services are assessed as to their ability to pay for the cost of personal care and for their board and lodging. The capital limits used in the means test are subject to an annual review. Any revisions would be implemented from April 2004. Care from a registered nurse is free to individuals in all settings regardless of their financial position following an assessment of their care needs.

Pressure Ulcers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the number of pressure ulcers occurring in the NHS in (a) England and (b) each strategic health authority, in each of the last six years; if he will estimate the cost of pressure ulcers to the NHS in these years; and if he will make a statement. [138178]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not held centrally. We are taking steps to improve services for patients with pressure ulcers.

A pressure ulcer risk assessment and prevention guideline was published by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) in April 2001. An updated version of the guideline was published on 22 October 2003. The guideline outlines best practice for health professionals caring for individuals who are vulnerable to or at risk of developing pressure ulcers.

A wound care package of guidelines is also currently being developed by NICE, which will include a guideline on pressure ulcer treatment.

As part of the guideline development process, NICE estimated that the cost of treating pressure ulcers may be as high as £750 million a year.

Psychiatric Hospitals

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) in-patients and (b) in-patient beds there are in psychiatric hospitals in England and Wales; how many individuals serving prison sentences have been diagnosed with severe mental health problems; and if he will make a statement. [138450]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There were 178,065 admissions to National Health Service inpatient facilities under mental illness specialties in 2001–02, the latest year for which figures are available. The data has not been grossed for coverage and therefore has a provisional status.

Information about the number of beds in psychiatric hospitals in England is not available. However, the average daily number of mental illness beds for England in 2002–03 was 32,753. Questions about Wales are now matters for the devolved administration.

We cannot say precisely how many sentenced prisoners have been diagnosed with severe mental health problems. Based on data from a survey of mental ill-health in the prison population of England and Wales, undertaken in 1997 by the Office for National Statistics, the NHS Plan (2000) stated that at any time some 5,000 people with a serious mental illness will be in prison.

Smallpox Vaccine

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS staff were given smallpox vaccine in 2002–03; and how many suffered ill-effects as a result of the immunisations. [135758]

Mr. Hutton: As of 4 November 2003, the number of health care workers who have been vaccinated in England stood at 262. Of this total, 128 are doctors, 116 are nurses, 15 are scientists and three are from other areas.

Information on suspected vaccine-associated adverse events experienced as part of the current vaccination programme have been collected by the Health Protection Agency and the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency. The type of adverse reactions noted after smallpox vaccinations so far were mostly non-serious; the majority were expected reactions to successful vaccination with smallpox vaccine or are known to occur after any vaccination. These included reactions at the site of injection, fever, feeling unwell and swollen glands. Two vacinees were hospitalised, one with suspected encephalitis and one with severe local cellulitis. A further four people developed cellulitis at the injection site. Two vacinees reported shortness of breath. One vacinee retrospectively reported having experienced retrospective symptoms of suspected mycocarditis though no confirmation tests were carried out. Adverse experience occurring after vaccination does not necessarily mean that the vaccine caused the problem. Other factors, such as an underlying illness present before vaccination, must be considered as possible alternative causes.

Social Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 6 October 2003, Official Report, column 1351W, on social services, how the figure published in paragraph 2.79 of the Chief Inspector of Social Services Annual Report was derived. [134068]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 27 October 2003]: The Department is working towards achieving a guideline figure of 5 per cent. vacancy rates across the social care work force. The figures published in paragraph 2.76 are based upon current data published in the Social Services Workforce Survey 2002, gathered by the Employers Organisation on behalf of the Department.

The figure of 50,000 whole-time equivalent (wte) people to join the work force is derived from an estimated 20,000 wte people coming into the system to staff service development and an additional 30,000 wte identified from SR2002 funding, estimated to be sufficient to bring vacancy rates down to the 5 per cent. guideline.

The figures about the number of care trusts were extracted from the delivery and improvement statements which are those self reported to Social Services Inspectorate by all councils in May 2002. Each council was asked to report on progress with care trust planning.

We can confirm that the actual number of children's trusts is 35. The number previously reported in the published Chief Inspector's report of 34 was an error.

Strokes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the average waiting time of those waiting for a scan after a suspected stroke; and if he will make a statement on waiting times for these scans. [138181]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not collected centrally. The target in this area is to achieve a computed tomography or magnetic resonance imaging scan in less than 48 hours. The summary report of the 2001–02 National Sentinel Stroke Audit reported that more patients than ever had brain imaging, with at least 83 per cent. meeting that target.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the research his Department has commissioned on the cost of (a) treating and (b) caring for patients who have had a stroke. [138182]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has not commissioned any recent research on the cost of treating and caring for patients who have had a stroke.

Valuing People

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures within Valuing People are aimed at children; and what plans he has to expand its remit. [138495]

Dr. Ladyman: Our proposals for improving services for people with learning disabilities, their families, and carers are set out in the White Paper, Valuing People: A New Strategy for Learning Disability for the 21st Century (Cm 5086), published in March 2001. Valuing People had a chapter on disabled children which set out Government objectives and proposals for maximising opportunities for disabled children and supporting young people's transition into adulthood. In particular, it set out how we would develop an integrated approach to supporting disabled children. In Making Change Happen (HC 514), our 2003 annual report to Parliament on learning disability, we highlighted the progress we had made towards the achievement of the objectives.

The Green Paper, Every Child Matters gave further commitments to improving services for disabled children and their families, particularly through: the development of the children's national service framework, which will set new national standards across the National Health Service, social services and interface with education for children; the development of the children trusts pathfinders, a significant number of which will focus on disabled children and their families; and the forthcoming special educational needs action programme.

Waiting Lists

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the clinical areas where the NHS in London has longer (a) waiting lists and (b) waiting times than the national average. [133742]

Mr. Hutton: The clinical areas where the national health service in London has longer waiting lists and waiting times than the national average is shown in the tables.

Systemic Neglect (NHS Hospitals)

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of systemic neglect have been reported by users at NHS hospitals in (a) England and (b) Shropshire in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [139115]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally.

Waiting Times

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time for hearing assessments for (a) patients under 60 and (b) patients over 60, broken down by primary care trust, was in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [138157]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not collected centrally. We have invested £94 million over two years, which will be used to make digital hearing aids available across England by April 2005.

Working Time Directive

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will revoke the application of the European Working Time Directive as it applies to the healthcare profession. [137071]

Mr. Hutton: No. European Directives are negotiated and implemented across member states and they cannot be revoked by an individual country.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 19 November 2003

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Departmental Expenditure (Official Residences)

Mr. Flight: To ask the Solicitor-General how much the Department spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [134702]

The Solicitor-General: Nothing. None of the Departments for which the Attorney-General is responsible have residential properties used by Ministers or officials.

CABINET OFFICE

Civil Service

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement on progress towards achieving ethnic diversity within the senior civil service. [139750]

Mr. Alexander: The Government are strongly committed to achieving ethnic diversity in the senior civil service and to ensuring that the civil service is fully representative of the community it serves.

Latest data, for April 2003, show that ethnic minorities make up 2.8 per cent. at senior civil service level, up from 1.6 per cent. in 1998. Our target is for ethnic minorities to make up 3.2 per cent. of the senior civil service by 2004–05.

Departmental Website

John Barrett: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what recent assessment he has made of the content and design of his Department's website. [139340]

Mr. Alexander: The Cabinet Office commissioned an external review of the content and design of its internet presence in February and March of 2003. We are now putting in place the recommendations from this review.

Market Research

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how much his Department spent on (a) opinion polling and (b) market research in the last financial year; and if he will make a statement. [139991]

Mr. Alexander: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 15 May 2003, Official Report, column 402W.

Government Bodies

Norman Lamb: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement on the (a) purpose, (b) annual budget since inception, (c) projected budget for the next two years and (d) current work programme of the (i) Prime Minister's Delivery Unit, (ii) Office of Public Services Reform and (iii) Office of the e-Envoy. [139775]

Mr. Alexander: The work of the units is explained in the Cabinet Office's Departmental Report for 2003, published in May 2003.

Budgets for the next two years will be decided on completion of the Cabinet Office planning round, which is currently under way.

	Financial year unit established	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03[1]	Budget 2003–04
Prime Minister's Delivery Unit	2001–02	0	0	0.9	3.1	3.8
Office of Public Services Reform	2001–02	0	0	2.0	5.7	4.2
Office of the e-Envoy	1999–2000	38.5	22.7	25.5	24.8	17.5

[1] Subject to audit.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many staff are employed in the (a) Prime Minister's Delivery Unit, (b) Office of Public Services Reform and (c) Office of the e-Envoy; where these staff are located; and if he will make a statement. [139776]

Mr. Alexander: As at 3 November 2003, there were 28 staff working in the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit, 40 working in the Office of Public Services Reform and 105 in the Office of the e-Envoy. These figures are for Cabinet Office employees and are rounded to full-time equivalents. All of these units are based in central London.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many times the (a) Cabinet Office Strategy Board, (b) Business Regulation Team, (c) Regulatory Reform Strategy Team, (d) Public Sector Team, (e) Europe and Economics Team, (f) Reform Strategy Group and (g) Corporate Development Group have met since they were established; how much each meeting cost; what the (i) annual budget since inception has been, (ii) projected budget for the next two years is and (iii) current work programme of each body is; and if he will make a statement. [139777]

Mr. Alexander: The Cabinet Office Strategy Board has met regularly since its formation earlier this year. The secretariat for the Cabinet Office Strategy Board is an integral part of the Managing Director's private office. There is no separate budget line for this work.

The terms of reference for the Cabinet Office Strategy Board are available on the Cabinet Office website (www.cabinet-office.gov.uk).

The Business Regulation Team, the Regulatory Reform Strategy team, the Public Sector Team and, the Europe and Economics Team are all functional work areas within the Cabinet Office's Regulatory Impact Unit, and therefore do not 'meet' in the way an ad-hoc Board or committee might do.

The Resource Outturn for these teams since their inception is as follows:

	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04
Business Regulation Team	0	0	0.1	0.3	0.3
Regulatory Reform Strategy	0	0	0	0.2	0.4
Public Sector Team	0.1	0.3	0.6	0.6	0.7
Europe and Economics Team	0.6	0.4	0.3	0.4	0.4

The work of the Regulatory Impact Unit is explained in the Cabinet Office's Departmental Report for 2003, published in May 2003.

The Reform Strategy Group and Corporate Development Group are functional units of the Cabinet Office. Annual budgets are as follows:

	2002–03	2002–03
Reform Strategy Group	1.6	[1]—
Corporate Development Group	17.1	14.7

[1] The work of the Reform Strategy Group has been absorbed within other units.

Budgets for the next two years will be decided on completion of the Cabinet Office planning round, which is currently under way.

Official Properties

Mr. Flight: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how much the Department spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [134685]

Mr. Alexander: Admiralty House contains residential accommodation for Ministers and the occupying Departments are responsible for relevant costs associated with each of the residential flats. No Cabinet Office Ministers are currently accommodated in Admiralty House. The Cabinet Office is responsible for costs associated with the common parts, as well as for maintaining the fabric of the entire building.

The Cabinet Office's share of the maintenance costs of Admiralty House for 2002–03 was £2,295.

From February 2002 to September 2002, a major electrical rewiring, asbestos removal and redecoration project was undertaken to the ground floor state rooms and two of the residential flats. The cost of this work (which was borne by the Cabinet Office) was £629,266.

The Cabinet Office's share of the running costs of Admiralty House (i.e. excluding the appropriate share of the costs from the occupying Departments) for 2002–03 was £631,421.

Information about the costs of official residences used by Ministers for previous financial years is already in the public domain.

Two Cabinet Office officials occupy accommodation in residential properties in the grounds of the Emergency Planning College in Easingwold. One flat is occupied by an official working at the Emergency Planning College on detached duty. The other occupant pays a market rent for the property, which was established by a valuation conducted within the past 18 months by independent valuers appointed by the Office of Government Commerce. Records are not held separately of the maintenance, renovation and running costs associated with these properties in particular and these costs could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The council tax for 2002–03 associated with the property occupied by the individual on detached duty was approximately £175. For 1997–98, the council tax associated with properties occupied by college employees was approximately £190, for 1998–99 and 1999–2000 no college employees resided in college properties, for 2000–01 the approximate council tax was £50, and for 2001–02 the council tax was approximately £150.

From 1997 to May 2002, some officials were accommodated in civil service college properties on the college's Sunningdale estate. The individual occupants of the properties were responsible for paying the rents that had been established by independent valuers. From June 1999 to March 2000, a number of general repairs were made, to some of the residential dwellings occupied by college staff, amounting to £20,827. In October 2000, £365 was spent on repairs. In January 2002, £3,160 was spent on repairs. There may have been other costs incurred under a maintenance contract let to cover the whole of the Sunningdale Park estate, however, it is not possible to disaggregate costs to a level of individual building. The individual occupants were responsible for their own council tax and running costs (such as utility bills).

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many cases of work-related stress have been reported in his Department in each of the last three years; how much compensation has been paid to employees; how many work days have been lost due to work-related stress, and at what cost; what procedures have been put in place to reduce work-related stress, and at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [136844]

Mr. Alexander: The Cabinet Office does not record reported cases of work-related stress. However, in August 2002 it introduced a mechanism for recording sickness absence caused by work-related stress as distinct from non-work related stress.

Since that date, the number of reported cases where work-related stress has been recorded as the reason for sickness absence has been less than five. To protect the privacy of individuals, more detailed information cannot be provided.

No compensatory payments have been claimed or made.

The Cabinet Office is aware of its legal responsibilities to reduce stress at work. It provides in-house guidance and training to its managers and individuals, has an in-house counselling service that can be accessed by all and has procedures in place for dealing with complaints, harassment and bullying.

It also encourages, where possible, flexible working arrangements that allow for both work and home commitments to be accommodated.

Information on the individual costs of these initiatives could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Marine Consents Unit

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on regulating impact assessments which have been carried out into the work of the Marine Consents Unit. [138551]

Mr. Morley: The Government's first Marine Stewardship Report announced a Review of Development in Marine and Coastal Waters. This included an examination of a range of marine controls, including those exercised by the Marine Consents and Environment Unit, from a regulatory perspective. A range of options for short-term and long-term reform are currently being considered. An announcement will be made in due course.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the regulatory impacts of the proposed spatial planning body within the Marine Consents Unit. [138552]

Mr. Morley: The Government's first Marine Stewardship Report contained a commitment to explore the role of spatial planning for the marine environment. This is being followed up in a number of workshops. There is currently no proposal for a spatial planning body within the Marine Consents Unit.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the progress of the review being conducted into the Marine Consents Unit. [138555]

Mr. Morley: No review is being conducted into the Marine Consents Unit. However, the Government are currently undertaking a Review of Development in Marine and Coastal Waters to see how the complexity of the current regulatory control regime might be reduced. The review is being led by my noble Friend the Lord Rooker, Minister of State for Regeneration and Regional Development. The findings from the review will be announced in due course.

Agriculture

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will publish the consultation on measures to address the environmental impacts of agriculture through the use of economic instruments referred to in her speech to the Environmental Industries Commission Annual Conference on 25 June 2003. [139478]

Mr. Morley: The Government included a discussion of agriculture and economic instruments in an annex to the Strategy for Sustainable Farming and Food, published in December 2002. The main route for progressing issues raised in the annex has been through work on diffuse water pollution. The aim is to publish a consultation paper on a broad range of policy options, including economic instruments, by the end of this financial year.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) strategy has been implemented and (b) funds have been committed to (i) identifying and (ii) eradicating bovine tuberculosis. [138031]

Mr. Bradshaw: In 2002–03 we spent nearly £74 million on the bovine tuberculosis (TB) Five Point Plan, based on:

Protecting human health;

Cattle testing and controls;

Development of a TB vaccine;

Research into how TB is spread; and

A badger culling trial

We are keen to improve diagnosis of the disease in both cattle and badgers and have commissioned the Veterinary Laboratories Agency to carry out two research projects, at a total estimated cost of over £950,000.

The current TB programme is under review and we expect to consult on proposals for a new TB strategy for Great Britain, and on short-term policy options for TB control, around the end of the year. In developing the strategy we will need to consider whether eradication of the disease is a realistic goal within the 10 year period over which the strategy will apply, and on the most appropriate ways of achieving it.

Cement Kilns

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent analysis has been carried out by the Environment Agency to establish emission levels from the Rugby Cement Works, Rugby; what conclusions have been drawn in respect of the health implications for residents in the town; and if she will make a statement. [138577]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Environment Agency is the regulator for the cement works in Rugby and last conducted independent monitoring at the installation on 13 August 2002. I understand that further independent tests have been scheduled for the week beginning 10 November 2003.

The Rugby Cement Works is regulated under the Pollution Prevention and Control (England and Wales) Regulations 2000. The Environment Agency recently issued a permit to the cement works in Rugby under those regulations.

It is the Environment Agency's opinion that compliance with the very carefully designed PPC permit conditions is sufficient to protect human health and the environment. The rationale for the Environment Agency's decision to grant a PPC permit is set out in full detail in a lengthy decision document (Ref. BL7248) which has been placed on public registers maintained by the Environment Agency and the Rugby borough council. A copy of the agency's Decision Document can be obtained by telephoning 01684 850951.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the impact on emission levels from the burning of tyres in cement kilns used for co-incineration, with particular reference to (a) nitrogen dioxide, (b) sulphur dioxide and (c) particulate matter; and if she will make a statement. [138578]

Mr. Bradshaw: As the competent authority under the Pollution Prevention and Control (England and Wales) Regulations 2000, the Environment Agency is responsible for assessing the impact of emissions from cement kilns that burn tyres. The Environment Agency's assessment methodology shows that tyre burning trials have consistently demonstrated that emissions of the principal pollutant from cement kilns—oxides of nitrogen—are reduced when conventional fuels such as coal and pet coke are substituted by scrap tyres, in some cases significantly. Whilst there might be an increase or decrease in other, less environmentally significant, emissions, the use of scrap tyres has been repeatedly demonstrated to result in a net environmental benefit.

Childhood Obesity

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with other Departments about implementing a strategy to tackle childhood obesity. [138786]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra has been working closely with the Department of Health, the Department for Education and Skills and the Food Standards Agency in relation to cross-Government initiatives such as the Food and Health Action Plan, Food in Schools, the National School Fruit Scheme and the Five a Day Programme. These are aimed at educating and encouraging both children and the wider population to adopt a healthier diet and lifestyle, including tackling the growing problem of obesity.

Cod Farms

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will make a statement about the future of cod farming; [138809]

(2) how many cod farms have been proposed to be built in the UK; [138810]

(3) if she will make a statement on the health aspects of eating farmed cod; [138811]

(4) if she will make a statement about the effects of cod farming on natural fish stocks. [138812]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government's policy on aquaculture is to encourage the development of viable, competitive and sustainable enterprises (including cod farming) provided that this can be done within a framework which safeguards public health and also protects the health and welfare of farmed and wild stocks.

At present there are six farming enterprises on growing cod on seven sites in Scotland. In general, the English coastline is unsuitable for marine cages, and the alternative (enclosed water re-circulation systems) is capital-intensive.

While cod-farming on this relatively modest scale may well meet a niche market demand, and there is potentially a vast market for farmed cod, it is not clear that significant expansion in cod is economically viable, given the cost of inputs and the price obtainable for final output.

The Food Standards Agency advises that there are health benefits to consumers in eating at least two portions of fish a week as part of a healthy diet, at least one of which should be oily. We have no reason to believe that farmed cod should not contribute to a healthy diet as does cod from the wild.

Consumer Reward Card

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will commission a study of the potential effect of a consumer reward card scheme to influence people's behaviour and its impact on the environment; and what studies she has received of the NU card scheme in the Netherlands. [139183]

Mr. Morley: The Department is aware of the scheme which is being tried out in the Netherlands, as the National Consumer Council and the New Economics Foundation have recently had discussions with stakeholders in this country about the scheme's potential. We have not received any studies as such, nor at this stage do we have any plans to commission one; but this is an interesting approach and we will keep in touch with developments.

Contingency Planning

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on new measures in place to deal with disease breakdown following foot and mouth disease. [139473]

Mr. Bradshaw: A new EU directive on measures to control foot and mouth disease was adopted in Agriculture Council on 29 September 2003 and is due to be transposed into domestic legislation by 30 June 2004.

Under the terms of this directive, the slaughter of infected animals and known "dangerous contacts" remains the principal tool in tackling an FMD outbreak. The main area of change in the new directive is the emphasis it places on emergency vaccination, which has now moved to the forefront of disease control strategies and has to be considered immediately the first case of FMD is confirmed.

The policies and operational arrangements that would be implemented in an outbreak are captured in the Foot and Mouth Disease Contingency Plan which is reviewed, updated and laid before Parliament annually.

Corporate Environmental Performance

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department undertook on the environmental reporting of FTSE 350 companies prior to the Prime Minister's challenge in October 2000 to produce more corporate environmental reports; when her Department will next report progress made by UK companies in voluntary reporting of environmental performance; and what information her Department collates on the response of UK companies to the Prime Minister's challenge. [139673]

Mr. Morley: Prior to the challenge in 2000, the Department drew on published sources to establish trends in environmental reporting by business. Last year the Department conducted its own survey of reporting by FTSE 350 companies and an account of this was placed in the Library of the House in July 2002. That exercise has not been repeated, but several surveys by other organisations are now publicly available. One recent survey indicates that over half of FTSE 250 companies now report publicly on their environmental performance.

Country Land and Business Association

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the invitation from the Country Landowners Association to speak at their November conference. [135591]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 3 November 2003]: My Diary Secretary sent an interim response to the invitation, by e-mail, to Richard Jarman, Head of CLA Public Affairs, on 29 August 2003. After further contact by telephone, a final response was sent, again by e-mail, on 29 October 2003, confirming that I was, regrettably, unable to attend, but that Alun Michael would be delighted to speak at the CLA Conference in my stead.

Countryside Agency

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to abolish the Countryside Agency; and if she will make a statement. [138958]

Alun Michael: There will be a continued need for the functions which the Countryside Agency performs. I refer my hon. friend to the written ministerial statement of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 11 November, in which she announced the intention to create an integrated agency incorporating some elements of work currently undertaken by the Countryside Agency, and to focus delivery on others in partnerships with regional development agencies, local government and the voluntary sector in order to provide the best services to rural communities.

The Countryside Agency will continue with a new, well focused role which we will discuss with the Agency and others over the next few months.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the future of the Countryside Agency Headquarters in Cheltenham. [138913]

Alun Michael: No decisions have been taken yet on the future structure of the Countryside Agency beyond what the Secretary of State announced on 11 November. We will work closely with the Countryside Agency as we develop more detailed proposals, and intend to give more details in the spring.

Dry Walls

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much Government assistance has been given for repairing dry walls in each of the last five years. [139975]

Alun Michael: Grants for repairing dry stone walls have been given under the Environmentally Sensitive Area Scheme since 1987 and the Countryside Stewardship Scheme since 1991. On the latest information available, the total length of wall repaired under these schemes since those dates is approximately 1,100 kilometres, at a current cost of between £12 and £28 per metre.

Egg Industry

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with (a) representatives of the UK's egg industry and (b) the European Union about possible changes in the EU intervention price of feed grain; and if she will make a statement. [138087]

Mr. Bradshaw: The question of whether to change the cereals intervention price was considered as part of the CAP reform discussions earlier this year. As announced in conjunction with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's statement to the House on 26 June 2003, Official Report, column 1220 21, in the final compromise deal the Agriculture Council decided not to implement the 5 per cent. reduction proposed by the European Commission, although monthly increments will be reduced by 50 per cent. from the 2004 05 marketing year. I have had no specific discussions with the egg industry on this issue.

Energy Consumption (Standby Units)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate

she has made of the daily energy consumption resulting from the use of standby units on televisions; and if she will make a statement. [139192]

Mr. Morley: The Government's Market Transformation Programme estimates that the 61.5 million televisions in the UK consume approximately 38 million KWh of electricity per day. Of this approximately 3.3 million Kwh (8.5 per cent.) per day is consumed by these televisions while they are in stand-by mode.

The Government is aware of the potential for many types of appliance to consume significant amounts of energy while left in stand-by mode. It is therefore already working via the Market Transformation Programme (www.mtprog.com) to encourage manufacturers to reduce both the "on" and "stand-by" power consumption of household appliances, including televisions, through the adoption of design improvements, voluntary codes of conduct, and the establishment of best practice guidelines and targets. To date this approach has been fairly successful and we expect that the majority of new televisions sold in the UK should soon consume around 1 watt of power in stand-by mode rather than the 3–8 watts consumed by older models.

In addition, the Government's recently announced commitment to purchase goods and services that meet higher environmental standards ("Quick Wins") requires any government department which purchases televisions to specify a stand-by power requirement of no more that 1 watt.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the dates of meetings of (a) the EU Committee for the adaptation to scientific and technical progress of the directive on water intended for human consumption, (b) the EU Management Committee of the common organisations of agricultural markets for sheep and goats and (c) the EU Committee on the Directive on packaging and packaging waste during the Danish and Greek presidencies; what items were on each agenda for each meeting; what representative of the Scottish Executive was present; what preparatory meetings were held for each meeting, including the officials present; and if she will make a statement. [132714]

Mr. Morley: The information is as follows:

(a) The EU Committee for the adaptation to scientific and technical progress of the Directive on water intended for human consumption

The Drinking Water Directive management committee met during the Danish presidency on 26 November 2002 and during the Greek presidency on 8 May 2003. Issues discussed included sampling and monitoring for radioactivity, lead, copper and nickel, and studies on drinking water.

(b) The EU Management Committee of the common organisations of agricultural markets for sheep and goats

The Management Committee of the common organisations of agricultural markets for sheep and goats met during the Danish presidency on 5 July 2002. It discussed the Implementation of the Council Regulation concerning the community scale for the classification of Ovine animals. The Committee did not meet during the Greek presidency.

(c) The EU Committee on the Directive on packaging and packaging waste

The EU Committee on the Directive on packaging and packaging waste met during the Danish presidency on 25 July 2002 and during the Greek presidency on 29 January 2003. Issues discussed included data reporting on recycling and recovery of packaging waste, development of the CEN standards on packaging, and notification of Belgium concerning Article 6(6) of Directive 94/62/EC.

The devolved Administrations, including the Scottish Executive, are kept fully informed of the work of all Committees and their views are fully reflected at Committee meetings.

Regarding any preparatory meetings, Exemption 2 to the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information applies.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the dates of meetings of (a) the EU Committee for the adaptation to scientific and technical progress of the Directive on protection of waters against pollution caused by nitrates from agricultural sources and (b) the EU Committee on the conservations of natural habitats and of wild fauna and flora (habitat) during the Danish and Greek Presidencies; what items were on each agenda for each meeting; what representative of the Scottish Executive was present; what preparatory meetings were held for each meeting, including the officials present; and if she will make a statement. [132716]

Mr. Morley: The information is as follows:

(a) The EU Committee for the adaptation to scientific and technical progress of the Directive on protection of waters against pollution caused by nitrates from agricultural sources;

The EU Committee for the adaptation to scientific and technical progress of the Directive on protection of waters against pollution caused by nitrates from agricultural sources did not meet during the Danish Presidency. It met on one occasion during the Greek presidency on 27 March 2003. Issues discussed at the Committee included grassland fertilisation and nitrates, tracing nitrate origin, and updated monitoring guidelines for groundwater and surface waters.

(b) The EU Committee on the conservations of natural habitats and of wild fauna and flora (habitat);

The Habitats Committee (the Committee on the conservation of natural habitats and of wild fauna and flora) met during the Danish Presidency on 20 November 2002 and during the Greek Presidency on 10 March 2003. Issues discussed included the Natura 2000 Network and conservation projects.

The devolved administrations, including the Scottish Executive, are kept fully informed of the work of all Committees and their views are fully reflected at Committee meetings.

Regarding any preparatory meetings, Exemption two to the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information applies.

Fallen Stock

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what provisions there will be for farmers to deliver their own casualty animals to the collection point under the new Fallen Stock Scheme. [138782]

Mr. Bradshaw: There will be no need for farmers to deliver their own casualty animals to collection points under the Scheme. The subscription fee paid by farmers which join the Scheme covers collection and disposal of fallen stock from farm premises. If farmers nevertheless wish to use their own vehicles to transport carcases to approved collection centres their vehicles will need to comply with the Animal By-products Regulations 2003 and they will need to establish with the approved collection centre that they are prepared to accept carcases which are so delivered.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to publish details regarding the collection of carcases under the Fallen Stock Scheme. [138780]

Mr. Bradshaw: Progress is being made drawing up the detailed requirements for collection of carcases and the other conditions of the Scheme. These will be made widely available shortly for collection and disposal operators who wish to provide services to the Scheme.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether hunts will be able to register as (a) collectors and (b) receivers of fallen stock. [138781]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Animal By-products Regulations 2003 require hunt kennels that collect and treat fallen stock carcases to be approved by Defra as collection centres and premises which only receive treated carcases for feeding to hounds are required to be approved as final users. Appropriately authorised hunt kennels will be eligible to register as collectors and/or disposal agents under the National Fallen Stock Scheme if they wish to do so.

Farm Holdings

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assistance is provided by the Government to young farmers who wish to obtain their own farm holding. [137260]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government recognise the importance of encouraging new entrants into farming. The Strategy for Sustainable Farming and Food sets out how industry, Government and consumers must work together to secure profitable and international competitive farming and food industries which are attractive to those already engaged in them and to potential new entrants.

This Department has commissioned research which will seek to identify the existence and nature of any artificial barriers to new entrants, and the potential means by which such barriers might be overcome. We are discussing with interested organisations how to take forward any measures which are found to be necessary.

Farmers' Markets

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what help was given to farmers' markets in England in 2001–02. [139041]

Mr. Bradshaw: During the financial year 2001–02, Defra provided the following help to farmers' markets in England:

funding to help the National Association of Farmers' Markets (NAFM), the umbrella organisation for farmers' markets, re-launch farmers' markets following the foot and mouth outbreak;

funding under the Agriculture Development Scheme to NAFM for the publication of information booklets to help producers develop their knowledge of sales and marketing, and to help NAFM develop its certification programme for accrediting farmers' markets; and funding under the Rural Enterprise Scheme for the Somerset Farmers' Market Company.

In addition, the Countryside Agency, which we grant aid, provided start-up funding to NAFM.

Fisheries

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proposals she will bring forward at (a) national and (b) European level to tackle cetacean by-catch; and if she will make a statement. [138088]

Mr. Bradshaw: At a national level, the UK has published a strategy for the reduction of small cetacean by-catch, which includes a number of recommendations for action. As part of this strategy, trials to reduce cetacean by-catch have been carried out in the offshore bass fishery. These trials have demonstrated that separator grids are a viable means of minimising dolphin by-catch in this fishery and the Scottish fishermen involved in this fishery have already indicated that they will continue to use the grid on a voluntary basis. I am determined to move forward from trialling the separator grid to deploying the gear in the fishery. However, given that the UK is not the main prosecutor of this fishery, it must be understood that whatever action we might consider by way of requiring the use of separator grids or other mitigation measures, or even closing the fisheries, would need to be implemented at the EU level in order to have significant effect.

The importance of reducing cetacean by-catch has been raised by the UK at ministerial level with the Fisheries Commissioner on a number of occasions and bilaterally with France. In particular, the UK has pressed for the introduction of a observer programme across the EU to broaden the information available about which fisheries, and which vessels, are involved in the problem.

The Commission published, on 24 July 2003, a draft Council regulation concerning the incidental by-catch of cetaceans in fisheries. Discussions on this proposal are at a very preliminary stage.

Food Standards

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will assess the adequacy of charges available to prosecutors under food regulations. [137584]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

As part of its action plan to implement the recommendations of the Waste Food Task Force, the Food Standards Agency (FSA) has undertaken to consider a number of legal issues with stakeholders. These issues include the offences available to enforcers when taking prosecutions for illegal diversion of unfit meat, the penalties available for such offences, the time limits for investigation of these offences and the issues involved with lack of a power of arrest for food safety offences. The FSA will be discussing these issues with stakeholders at a seminar on 26 November 2003 to discuss the lessons to be learned from the prosecutions in the Denby Poultry Products case.

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps are being taken to improve enforcement of food safety regulations at animal by-products processing premises arising from recent meat fraud cases. [137588]

Mr. Bradshaw: Food safety regulations are the responsibility of the Food Standards Agency. The State Veterinary Service (SVS) visits animal by-products premises for the purposes of administering the animal by-products legislation, which is enforced by local authorities and the Meat Hygiene Service. SVS instructions were amended in light of the fraud cases referred to, with the aim of preventing further such incidents. They improved audit procedures and highlighted the need to liaise more closely with enforcement agencies where there are possible breaches of food hygiene or other legislation. To improve communication and co-operation between the relevant bodies, Defra has also provided joint training on the new Animal By-Products Regulation for all the relevant enforcement bodies.

Genetically Modified Crops

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether estimates of yield for GM maize in the GM farm scale evaluation published by her Department will be based upon maize crops grown using the same herbicide regime as used on these farm scale evaluations. [137655]

Mr. Morley: The Department has not published yield estimates for the GM maize grown in the farm-scale evaluations. The paper by Champion and others 'Crop management and agronomy of the farm-scale evaluations' published in the Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society on 16 October explains that crop yields were not routinely recorded. The GM and conventional maize crops in each field evaluation were assessed and compared at every stage of growth and results were only included in the analysis where these correlates of yield were comparable and consistent with the protocol requiring 'cost effective weed control'.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the public relations companies employed by her Department to present the Government's viewpoint on GM (a) foods and (b) crops; and how much public funding has been allocated for this purpose. [139768]

Mr. Morley: This Department does not employ public relations companies to present our viewpoint on GM food and crops.

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the (a) role and (b) responsibilities of the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment in relation to GM (i) crops and (ii) trials. [139807]

Mr. Morley: The Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment (ACRE) is the statutory advisory committee established under Section 124 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. ACRE advise Government and the devolved administrations on all aspects of releases of GMOs into the environment, including the release of GM crops for the purposes of marketing or research. ACRE'S full terms of reference are included in their most recent annual report, which is available on the internet at http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/acre/annrep9/index.htm.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the effects she estimates the adoption of genetically modified crops in the UK would have on the organic farming industry. [138808]

Mr. Morley: The Government recognises that the growing of GM crops could affect the economic position of organic and conventional farmers growing equivalent crops. This was highlighted in the Strategy Unit report entitled 'Field Work: weighing up the costs and benefits of GM crops', published last July. The issue is also being discussed amongst member states of the European union. The Agriculture and Environment Biotechnology Commission has been analysing the co-existence of GM and non-GM crops and associated liability issues and was due to publish a report last month. When the report is published we will consider it very carefully, taking into account the possible effects on the organic sector.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what information she has received about whether the planting of GM crops would lead to a change in the use of (a) pesticides and (b) chemical weed killers. [138813]

Mr. Morley: Almost all of the GM crops that have been grown under trial in the EU in recent years, or are under consideration for commercial growing, are associated with changes in the use of herbicides and/or insecticides. Each GM crop is assessed on its own merits and any application to release must be accompanied by a dossier that includes detailed information on any potential changes in pesticide use and the effects this would have on the environment. The GM crop farm-scale evaluations, conducted in the UK, made a detailed assessment of the impact of herbicide use associated with three types of GM crop. A copy of the results, which were published last month, is in the Library.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact of EU labelling and traceability regulations in respect of GM (a) seeds, (b) animal food and (c) food for human consumption. [139015]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

The Food Standards Agency and the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs have commissioned an independent study on the impact of the new GM regulations. This study and information obtained from stakeholders will form the basis of a Regulatory Impact Assessment on the regulations. This will be part of a consultation package which will be issued at the end of December 2003 and will include the draft domestic implementing regulations and draft guidance to accompany the regulations.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment her Department has made of the application for the sale of GM sweetcorn Bt11; and what advice her Department will offer to forthcoming Council of Ministers meetings on the application. [139016]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

The Food Standards Agency (FSA), as the competent authority under the EC Novel Foods Regulation, is advised by the independent Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes (ACNFP). The ACNFP assessed the original data submitted in support of the application for the sale of genetically modified sweetcorn Bt11 and the opinion of the Dutch competent authority. The European Commission's Scientific Committee (SCF) for food carried out a further assessment of these data and additional information submitted in support of the application and its opinion was also considered.

Ministers have agreed that the FSA will advise the Council of Ministers that the United Kingdom should support this application based on the conclusion of the SCF, which stated that:

"Bt11 sweet maize is as safe for human use as its conventional counterparts".

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with her counterparts in the National Assembly for Wales in respect of their decision to declare Wales a GM-free nation. [139017]

Mr. Morley: I understand from ministerial colleagues in the Welsh Assembly Government that their policy is to adopt the most restrictive approach possible on GM crops within the confines of European Union and domestic law. They have made clear that this is not the same as declaring Wales GM-free. Ministers and officials in Defra and the Assembly Government keep in close touch on GM issues and hold regular meetings.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment has been made through (a) research commissioned by her Department, (b) farm scale trials and (c) other research of the potential for GM herbicide tolerant plants to create herbicide tolerant hybrid weeds; and what the results of that research were; [139018]

(2) what assessment her Department has made of the (a) likelihood and (b) impact of hybridisation of GM oilseed rape. [139156]

Mr. Morley: There has been considerable research investigating hybridisation between GM and non-GM crops, including the crops studied in the Farm Scale Evaluations, and between GM crops and wild relatives. This includes studies commissioned by my Department (e.g. "Monitoring large scale releases of genetically modified crops, incorporating report on project EPG 1/5/30: monitoring releases of genetically modified crop plants" (December 2002)), studies carried out in parallel with the Farm Scale Evaluations (e.g. "Gene Flow Monitoring from the GM Crop FSE Sites: Monitoring Gene Flow from the GM Crop to Non-GM Equivalent Crops in the Vicinity. Part 1: Forage Maize" (October 2003)) and other research published in scientific journals (e.g. Wilkinson et al. (2003) Science online www.scienceexpress.org (9 October 2003)). The issues of gene flow and hybridisation between GM and non-GM crops are addressed in Chapter 7 of the GM Science Review published in July 2003 (http://www.gmsciencedebate.org.uk/).

The impact of hybridisation between herbicide tolerant GM crops and other crops or wild relatives is considered as part of the risk assessment carried out prior to any decision to authorise the release of herbicide-tolerant GM crops.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans her Department has to monitor the impact of GM animal feed on animal health. [139152]

Mr. Morley: The Department has no current plans to monitor the impact of GM animal feed on animal health.

Under EU Directive 2001/18, no genetically modified organism may be used in animal feed in the EU unless and until EU member states have agreed collectively that it is safe to do. In making these decisions, each GM product is judged on its own merits according to evidence of risk to human health or the environment. If authorisation is granted, any subsequent marketing of the GM product in question will be subject to conditions of consent, including details of how the GM product must be monitored. These monitoring conditions may or may not include a requirement to monitor the impact of GM animal feed on animal health depending on the details of each specific case. No such condition has been thought necessary to date.

In the UK, we are advised on GM product applications by a statutory expert body the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment (ACRE). If a proposed GM product were intended for use in animal feed, ACRE would consult the Advisory Committee on Animal Feedstuffs (ACAF), which would provide advice on any risks to animal health. If the experts advised that a proposed GM product was safe but that its effects on animal health should be monitored, we would use our voice within Europe to call for this to be included in the monitoring plan.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what role the GM Science Review Panel will play in advising her Department on future decisions in respect of applications to grow GM crops in the UK. [139153]

Mr. Morley: The GM Science Review Panel will not play a role in advising on future decisions on GM crop applications. The Government are advised on these matters by a statutory expert body, the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment.

The GM Science Review was commissioned specifically to undertake a comprehensive review of the science of genetic modification relevant to crops and food. The Government are taking its findings into account along with other elements of the GM public dialogue (the Strategy Unit study of costs and benefits and the debate "GM Nation?") in shaping its overall approach to GM crops and food. The GM Science Review Panel published their first report in July 2003 and will shortly conclude their work with the publication of a second supplementary report.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what role her Department will have in implementing the surveillance scheme proposed in the Food Standards Agency's study on post-marketing monitoring. [139155]

Mr. Morley: I am aware that in July 2003 the Food Standards Agency published research by Imperial College looking into the feasibility of monitoring the buying and eating of novel foods, including GM foods. I understand that the Food Standards Agency has not yet decided whether or not to proceed with the recommendations.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 4 November 2003, Official Report, column 561W, what research has been conducted on unintended biochemical consequences of genetic modification in the GM crops that were tested in the farm scale evaluations. [139218]

Mr. Morley: Potential unintended biochemical consequences of specific genetic modifications are considered as part of the case-by-case risk assessment of all GM crops. This consideration is based on research studies of the composition of particular crops grown under a range of conditions. Data examining composition of the crops in the Farm Scale Evaluations will form an important part of the assessment of any applications to market the crops concerned.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will set up a GM public debate on the findings of the farm-scale evaluations. [139582]

Mr. Morley: The government has already sponsored 'GM Nation?'—the public debate on GM issues—to explore the public's opinions on GM crops.

The results of the farm-scale evaluations, published on 16 October, are in the public domain and are being discussed widely. The results relate to specific GM crops and have been passed to the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment (ACRE) for statutory advice. ACRE will be holding open meetings on 25 November in London and fourth December in Edinburgh to take evidence from stakeholders and the public. There are no plans to hold a further public debate specifically on the results of the Farm Scale Evaluations.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what research the choice of (a) dose, (b) timing, (c) formulation and (d) method of application of the herbicide used on GM maize in the farm scale evaluations was based. [139804]

Mr. Morley: Research and other information necessary to make these choices was determined by the company concerned. The specific use of the herbicide in the farm-scale evaluations was covered by an approval issued by the Pesticides Safety Directorate.

Housing

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the rural proofing of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's new regional housing policies. [137827]

Alun Michael: I refer to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Housing and Planning on 11 November 2003, Official Report, column 259W. I shall also be meeting with my noble Friend Lord Rooker next month to discuss this issue.

Livestock Industry

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what has been the average (a) disposal sale price and (b) market price for (i) commercial dairy cattle and (ii) pedigree dairy cattle in (A) England and (B) Wales for each of the last five years for which figures are available. [136409]

Mr. Bradshaw: The average (a) disposal sale price of (i) commercial dairy cattle (ii) pedigree dairy cattle and the (b) market price of (ii) pedigree dairy cattle is not recorded by either Defra or the MLC and is therefore unavailable.

The average (b) market price for (i) commercial dairy cattle for the last five years is available, as an aggregate of (A) England and (B) Wales due to the few Welsh markets from which data is available. Six years data of the yearly average market price for Friesian Holstein dairy cows sold at auction markets in England and Wales shows the trend of livestock prices prior to the foot and mouth outbreak.

Average price of dairy cows sold at livestock auctions (England and Wales)

	Average price £ per head
1998	555
1999	489
2000	479
2001	616
2002	593
2003	744

Notes:
1. 2001: The yearly average price was calculated from data collected during January and February 2001, until foot and mouth forced the closure of the livestock auctions.

2. 2002: The yearly average price was calculated from data collected from the auction markets which began to re-open from February 2002 onwards, the numbers steadily increased as more markets opened after the restrictions were lifted due to the end of foot and mouth.
3. 2003: The yearly average price was calculated from data collected during the period January until October 2003.

Milk Chocolate

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact on consumption of milk chocolate in the EU of its re-designation as family milk chocolate. [139133]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

Directive 2000/36/EC harmonising labelling and composition rules on cocoa and chocolate products only took effect on 3 August 2003. It is therefore too early to make an assessment on whether there has been any effect on the consumption of milk chocolate in the European Union.

National Environment Campaigns

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment has been made of the impact of the Bag It and Bin It campaign on individual behaviour, with specific reference to the change in the number of items disposed of inappropriately. [139182]

Mr. Morley: Bag It and Bin It is a water industry campaign and it is for the water companies themselves to assess the impact of the campaign.

Nuclear Waste Sites

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the (a) sites in the United Kingdom on which intermediate level nuclear waste is stored and (b) volume stored on each site. [139507]

Mr. Morley: The following is a list of sites at which intermediate-level radioactive waste (ILW) is stored. The figures have been taken from the 2001 waste inventory published by Defra and Nirex in October 2002. The figures for each site are the volume of conditioned waste, in cubic metres, and, where appropriate, include the ILW estimated to arise from continued operation and decommissioning.

Performance Monitoring

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total cost was of (a) setting, (b) monitoring and (c) measuring the performance targets for her Department in 2002–03; and how many and what grades of civil servants monitor these targets. [137973]

Alun Michael: The monitoring of progress towards PSA targets is part of the mainstream work of the department and involves a wide variety of staff at all levels of the organisation. Progress towards achieving targets is also monitored by staff in HM Treasury.

Pesticides

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will carry out the appraisal of the progress of the voluntary initiative on pesticides at the end of 2003, as recommended by the Environmental Audit Committee in its First Report of Session 2002–03. [139530]

Alun Michael: In its response to this Environmental Audit Committee report, the Government said that it would continue to make regular assessments of progress and would be looking for real steps forward during 2003. In particular, the Government said it would be important for the initiative to demonstrate growing farmer uptake and progress on outcomes, particularly in respect of the water catchment project.

The Government's assessments of progress are published in the Budget and Pre-Budget Reports. The next such assessment will be in next month's Pre-Budget

Pig Farming

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress is being made with measures to support British pig farmers; and if she will make a statement. [137249]

Mr. Bradshaw: This Government has done and will continue to do what it can to help the pig sector. Since December 2000 over £63 million of taxpayers money, comprising £21.8 million for ongoers and £15.6 million for outgoers under the Pig Industry Restructuring Scheme and some £26 million in relation to Classical Swine Fever, has gone or will go direct to pig farmers as well as £200 million of indirect support in areas such as private storage aid schemes, export refunds, development grants and market promotion.

We meet frequently with representatives of the pig industry to discuss the challenges they face and have pledged to continue to encourage all parts of the pigmeat supply chain to work together, with ourselves and with Sir Don Curry's Implementation Group, in order to build a sustainable future for all sections of the industry. The Department helped to sponsor the first World Pork Congress in June and assisted industry in getting the approval of the Pigmeat Management Committee to use a new method of carcase grading — Autofom — in Great Britain.

In addition the Red Meat Industry Forum has made a successful start in providing information designed to help improve competitiveness for all the players in the red meat supply chain. In particular, this includes benchmarking for pig producers.

We will also be publishing a 10 year Animal Health and Welfare Strategy next spring, after a comprehensive consultation process. The aim of the Strategy is to improve the health and welfare of animals kept by man, and protect public health from animal disease. One major initiative of the Strategy, will be the publication of dedicated sector based sub-strategies, based on a partnership approach between Government and industry. We have been working closely with the pig sector over the past 12 months to help develop such a sub-strategy, which I believe will be launched later this year.

On illegal imports, we have made much progress in implementing our Action Plan in the past two years. Successes include the transfer of anti-smuggling responsibilities to HM Customs, new risk assessments are being carried out by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency, looking at the risk of illegally imported meat. These assessments will be published next year. We are also raising awareness of the import rules among travellers, using a wide variety of methods to get our messages across.

The Department has been active in persuading overseas authorities to accept UK exports again. Last year an Export Certification Users Group was set up for live pigs, their genetic material, meat and products. The Group meets regularly to identify priority export markets which remain closed and it also enables us to consider export certification for potential markets abroad.

Furthermore we recently launched the Public Sector Food Procurement Initiative to procure food in a manner that promotes sustainable development. Its aim is to encourage public bodies to procure food in a manner that promotes sustainable development and to provide greater opportunities for small and local suppliers to compete for public sector business.

The Government is also making rapid progress on setting up a National Fallen Stock Scheme to help reduce costs to farmers, including pig farmers, for disposing of their fallen stock. We are aware of the pig industry's concerns about biosecurity and will consult the industry on the scheme's biosecurity conditions before issuing. The Directors who will sit on the Board of the Company that will run the scheme have now been selected by industry interests and formally appointed and we hope that the scheme will be up and running early in the new year.

Plankton

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what data her Department holds on plankton (a) density and type (b) around the British Isles; and whether areas of cold water plankton have been replaced by warm water types. [134010]

Mr. Morley: The Department does not hold data on plankton density and type, but does fund the international marine environmental charity 'Sir Alister Hardy Foundation for Ocean Science' (SAHFOS) which is based in Plymouth, UK. SAHFOS currently operates the Continuous Plankton Recorder survey, which has been in operation since 1931 and provides one of the longest and largest marine biological data sets in the world. More than 70 years of information on the density of over 450 plankton types is contained in the database. Plankton samples have been collected from all over the north Atlantic but predominantly from waters around the British Isles.

Plankton are at the bottom of the marine food-web and because of this they are an essential food-source to virtually all marine life from fish to marine mammals and sea birds. The results of monitoring plankton communities can be used to monitor the state of the marine environment and have been employed to assess the ecological health of the waters around the British Isles.

Recent research using data from the Continuous Plankton Recorder survey has shown significant changes to the North sea ecosystem. Cold-water species of plankton that are an important food-source for cod and salmon have been displaced northwards, particularly over the last decade, and appear to be being replaced by more southerly warmer-water species.

Pollution Incidents

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to her answer of 12 December 2002, Official Report, column 435W, on discharges into the environment, in respect of pollution incidents, if she will place in the Library an updated list of the documents provided in writing to the hon. Member for Lewes. [139185]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency is currently updating the information provided to the hon. Member. This will take a little time, and I will write when it is available.

Protected Geographical Indicators Scheme

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many products from the United Kingdom, broken down by region and nation, are being considered for registration under the Protected Geographical Indicators Scheme by the EU. [138214]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are two products, both Scottish, Arbroath Smokies and Scottish Farmed Salmon, which are currently being considered for registration as Protected Geographical Indications by the EU.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many regional foods are registered in each EU state; and how many of these in each state have registered within the last 12 months. [138215]

Mr. Bradshaw: The numbers of regional foods registered as protected food names by all EU member states are set out in the following table.

Member state	Protected designations of origin (PDOs) and Protected geographical indications (PGIs)	Traditional speciality guaranteed (TSGs)	Total registered
Italy	132	1	133
France	132		132

The numbers of regional food products registered within the last 12 months are set out in the following table:

Member state	Number registered
Italy	10
Greece	4
Portugal	4

Rats

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will estimate the rat population (a) in England and (b) broken down by local authority area (i) in each year since 1997 and (ii) in each year to 2006. [139180]

Mr. Bradshaw: The most recent estimate of the Norway rat population in England was a minimum of 5,240,000 individuals. This figure was established by a review that assessed the population and conservation status of all British mammals, published in 1995. The only recent objective national survey of rat presence is within the English House Condition Survey. The latest report available is for the 1996 survey which revealed that 0.23 per cent. of properties had rats indoors and 1.6 per cent. had rats present outside.

With regard to local authorities, section 2(2) of the Prevention of Damage by Pests Act 1949 required every local authority to maintain records of activities undertaken to destroy rats and mice. However, this section was repealed in 1980 since when no information on rat presence within individual local authority areas has been collected by central Government.

Sewage

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what powers water companies have to divert sewage into rivers; and if she will make a statement. [139187]

Mr. Morley: Water companies have duties under section 94 of the Water Industry Act 1991 to provide and maintain sewers to ensure that they are effectively drained, and the sewer contents are effectively dealt with by treatment works or otherwise.

Consents to discharge sewage effluents, sometimes in emergencies, into controlled waters are subject to conditions and are issued by the Environment Agency under the Water Resources Act 1991 (WRA91).

In certain situations water companies may have to make discharges other than in accordance with a consent. In these circumstances, the WRA91 provides two distinct defences to offences of polluting controlled waters under section 85 of the WRA91.

Section 89(1) states that a person shall not be guilty of an offence of polluting controlled waters if the discharge is made in an emergency to avoid danger to life or health, if steps are taken to minimise the polluting effects of the discharge, and if details of the incident are provided to the Agency as soon as possible after it occurs.

Section 87(2) states that a sewerage undertaker shall not be guilty of an offence if the undertaker could not reasonably be expected to prevent the discharge into the sewer or works, if a discharge into the sewer is caused by another person and if the undertaker was not bound to receive it, or if it was, the conditions of the discharge were not observed.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many recorded incidents there have been in each year since 1997 of water companies diverting sewage into rivers under section 89 of the Water Resources Act 1991; what the location was; and what the volume of sewage released was in each case; [139188]

(2) if she will list the incidents under investigation by the Environment Agency relating to cases where water companies have diverted sewage into rivers; what the location was; which water company was involved; and what volume was released in each case; [139189]

(3) what estimate she has made of the total cost in each of the last five years of cleaning up rivers as a result of incidents where water companies have diverted sewage into rivers. [139190]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sugar Costs

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received from food manufacturers about the process of applying for reimbursment of sugar costs from the Rural Payments Agency. [139132]

Alun Michael: None. The Rural Payments Agency maintains on-going dialogue with industry representatives through its Industry Forum and Experts Group. There is also frequent contact with individual companies in connection with the payment of claims. The RPA tells me that it is not aware of any particular representations having been made by the sector in question.

Timber

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the local authorities which have not responded to the letter from the Environment Minister on timber procurement of 19 September 2002. [139176]

Mr. Morley: Written replies to the Environment Minister's letter dated 19 September 2002 about timber procurement, and the follow up letter dated 7 April 2003, have not been received from the following local authorities:

Transfrontier Shipment Notifications

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if a transfrontier shipment notification can be issued when a company does not have a licence to dispose of the shipment. [137925]

Mr. Morley: The notifier (the company submitting the transfrontier shipment notification) is required to submit the notification to the relevant competent authorities. The notifier is unlikely to be the company recovering, or disposing, of the wastes. However, the waste should be consigned to a suitably licensed facility.

US Warships (Decommissioning)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she has secured from the US authorities undertakings that the ships from the US Naval Reserve due to be stored at Hartlepool will (a) remain the responsibility of the US authorities and (b) be returned to the United States. [139206]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 November 2003]: The legal responsibility of the ships will remain with the contractors: the US Marine Administration and Able UK. Able UK hold the Waste Management Licence for the site where the ships will be stored, pending a decision on their future.

If dismantling cannot be completed consistent with international rules and Community Law, the law requires that the ships be returned to the US, unless the waste can be recovered in an alternative, environmentally sound manner.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what requirements the Environment Agency has put in place to prevent environmental damage arising from the storage at Hartlepool of ships from the US Naval Reserve. [139208]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 November 2003]: On 12 November, the Environment Agency used its emergency powers under section 43(4) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to modify Able UK's existing waste management licence to include conditions which:

(a) Impose restrictions so that ships cannot be dismantled, decommissioned, cut or broken at the Able facility.

(b) Require the installation of floating booms across the dock entrance and around waste vessels that are berthed in the dock. The booms must be inspected daily, and should oil be identified within the boomed area, it must be removed within two hours.

(c) Require that no removal of bilge or ballast water from waste ships shall take place except in accordance with a method statement submitted to and approved in writing by the Agency.

(d) While waste ships are in the dock, sampling of the dock water and estuary water upstream and downstream of the dock must take place weekly. Results must be submitted to Agency within four weeks. In the event that any results exceed specified trigger levels, the Agency must be notified within 24 hours.

In addition to these conditions imposed on Able UK, the Agency will carry out its own unannounced site inspections initially at a weekly frequency. The Agency will carry out its own environmental monitoring, as well as auditing the monitoring carried out by Able UK.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is on who will bear the cost of storage, including any inspection and basic safety measures necessary, of ships from the US Naval Reserve at Hartlepool. [139209]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 November 2003]: It is the Waste Management Licence holder's responsibility to comply with the conditions of a Waste Management Licence at their expense. The modification to the conditions of Able UK's Waste Management Licence now requires them, in effect, not to undertake any dismantling of the ships or other works, save for pollution control measures.

The Environment Agency will conduct such inspections as it considers necessary to ensure compliance with the conditions of the licence. The costs of these are recovered through subsistence charges.

Any costs from the safety inspection would be borne by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what factors underlay her press statement of 7 November that immediate return of the ships sent for disposal to Able UK at Hartlepool would be impractical. [139211]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 November 2003]: The immediate return of the ships is impractical primarily due to the prevailing weather conditions in the Atlantic over the winter. In the interests of safeguarding human health and the environment, it has been agreed that the ships should be stored temporarily at Hartlepool, pending a decision on their future.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her recent discussions with the US Transportation Secretary on the fleet of ships en route from the USA to Hartlepool. [139212]

Mr. Morley: My Department issued a statement on 15 November following discussions between US and UK authorities, the text of which is reproduced below.

"Following exploration of alternative options, the Government has agreed with the US authorities that the third and fourth US ships currently on their way to the UK, should continue their passage to Hartlepool, where they will be securely stored pending a decision on their future. As with the first two ships, the Environment Agency will place requirements on them to ensure the environment is fully protected and the ships remain ready for return to the United States.

We explained last week that we were working closely with the United States authorities to examine the practicability of the return of the third and fourth ships to the United States. We have now reached a shared view that it would be imprudent for these ships to attempt a return crossing at this time of year; and that there is no other suitable storage site available. Hartlepool therefore best meets our objectives of safety and environmental protection.

The US authorities accept that the four ships will have to return to the United States next Spring, unless environmentally suitable and legally acceptable methods for their disposal have by then been identified."

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reasons the Environment Agency's press statement of 6 October 2003 about the decommissioning of United States ships did not refer to the Agency's earlier advice that the ships should not sail from America. [137768]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency's 6 October press release was issued in response to specific statements made by Friends of the Earth about its legal challenge to the Agency. It was also based on the Agency's understanding of the legal situation at that time.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment has been carried out of the (a) economic and (b) environmental impact of the arrival of the ships due to arrive from the United States for dismantling by Able UK. [138064]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is as follows:

(a) No formal assessment of the economic aspect of the contract has been undertaken. It has been reported that the contract could result in the creation of several hundred jobs.

(b) In September the Environment Agency undertook an assessment of whether the proposed modification to the waste management licence would be likely to have a significant effect on Teesmouth and Cleveland Coast Special Protected Area (SPA) and Ramsar site alone, or in combination with other plans or projects. The assessment was based on the construction of a bund or dry-dock. More recently they undertook another assessment of whether a proposed modification to the waste management licence to impose pollution prevention conditions on the licence, would cause likely significant effect on the SPA and Ramsar site, alone, or in combination with other plans or projects.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what powers Government Ministers have to prevent ships entering United Kingdom waters; and on what occasions they have used these powers. [138065]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

Powers of intervention, including the power to direct a ship to leave UK waters, may only be exercised where a ship is already in UK waters. Such powers may be exercised only where it is considered necessary for the purpose of securing the safety of the ships or other ships; the safety of persons or property; or preventing or reducing significant pollution.

Warm Front Scheme

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many grants made under the Warm Front scheme have been suspended this year to date; and if she will make a statement. [137085]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 10 November 2003]: Warm Front is the Government's main programme for tackling fuel poverty in the private sector in England.

No grants have been suspended under the Warm Front scheme. However a number of applications have been cancelled either by the applicant, or by the scheme managers in cases where proof of eligibility has not been provided.

Waste Incineration

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research is being undertaken into the health effects of energy-from-waste incinerators. [138820]

Mr. Morley: The Government has commissioned a review of the environmental and health effects of waste management options including incineration. This appraisal is currently being peer reviewed by the Royal Society and is due to be published around the time of the Pre-Budget report 2003.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the distribution of proposed waste incineration. [138823]

Mr. Morley: At present just over 12 per cent. of England's municipal waste is recycled or composted, about 9 per cent. of municipal waste is incinerated and the rest is landfilled.

There are 16 Municipal Solid Waste Incinerators in the whole of the UK (14 in England and Wales, two in Scotland) with a total capacity of about 2.7 million tonnes of municipal solid waste per year. There are many hundreds of other incinerators for sewage sludge, hazardous waste, clinical waste, production waste from factories etc.

The Government has no plans for constructing any particular number of incinerators: the choice of waste treatment facilities is a matter for local authorities to take into consideration with the communities they serve; along with other factors such as their recycling targets and national waste policy.

Waste Performance Reward Grant

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the practice in other EU countries in relation to excluding rubble and incineration bottom ash from recycling totals. [139455]

Mr. Morley: No detailed assessments have been made of the practice in other EU countries. In the UK and England, any wastes that are recycled are included in the relevant statistics for recycling.

However, for the purposes of local authority Best Value Performance Standards in England, rubble and incineration bottom ash, among some other wastes, are excluded from the recycling figures. They are not included in the Standards because the Government want to encourage the recycling and composting of dry recyclables and compostable materials separated from mixed household wastes.

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to receive the report of the review into the health and environmental effects of waste disposal. [139458]

Mr. Morley: The report on the review of the environmental and health effects of waste management options is due to be published around the time of the pre-budget report.

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what capacity there is in the United Kingdom for the (a) treatment, (b) recovery and (c) recycling of (i) end of life vehicles and (ii) electrical and electronic equipment. [139460]

Mr. Morley: A recent study, undertaken by the Industry Council for Electronics Recycling (ICER), estimated the UK's current capacity to treat waste electrical and electronic equipment (WEEE) to be between 130 and 180 facilities UK wide. At present, there are between 70 and 120 specialist treatment facilities that only treat and process electrical waste, mainly IT waste. There are also 19 fridge recyclers in the UK, and ICER suggest that these facilities may turn to treatment of other WEEE in the future. In addition to the specialist treatment facilities, there are around 40 plants UK wide that shred and granulate WEEE in preparation for recycling, and these types of plants treat most types of WEEE, alongside other waste streams, like end-of-life vehicles (ELVs).

Similarly, it is estimated that there are presently around 950 businesses with waste management licences, and a further 1,750 registered exempt businesses, treating end-of-life vehicles. A recent study, carried out for the Department by TRL Ltd., calculated that approximately 77 per cent. of the weight of ELVs scrapped in 2000 was reused, recovered and recycled.

However, it is not clear what the UK capacity will be for recycling WEEE, although we do know that much of the recycling industry has already taken the opportunity to recycle electronic and vehicle scrap now entering the waste stream.

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent measures she has introduced on waste minimisation. [139461]

Mr. Morley: The Government have committed over £40 million over the next three years (2003–06) to the Waste and Resources Action Programme's (WRAP) waste minimisation work. Its work tackles waste minimisation through four schemes:

an expansion of home composting;

promotion of re-usable nappies;

a research and development programme, aimed at identifying and developing innovative approaches to waste minimisation; and work with major retailers to reduce the amount of waste entering the waste stream from supermarkets.

In addition, WRAP will take forward an education and awareness programme. This will operate at both a national and local level to raise the public's awareness about waste issues, including waste minimisation.

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the amount of commercial and industrial waste diverted to local authority managed civic amenity sites in the last year for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [139462]

Mr. Morley: Section 51(1) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 places a duty on waste disposal authorities to provide reasonably accessible places (civic amenity sites) for persons resident in their area to deposit their household waste. Section 51(3) of the 1990 Act enables waste disposal authorities to include in those sites arrangements for the deposit of other controlled waste (commercial and industrial waste) by other persons on such terms as to payment (if any) as the waste disposal authority determines.

Defra does not hold information on the amount of commercial and industrial waste diverted to local authority managed civic amenity sites.

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many local authority projects for waste minimisation are funded from the Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund. [139463]

Mr. Morley: In 2003–04, the National Waste Minimisation Fund received 34 funding bids for waste minimisation, including education. Of these, 11 received just over a total of £2 million.

Mr. Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the Waste Performance Reward Grant. [139464]

Mr. Morley: The Government announced on 12 August 2003 that they would consult interested parties on the design of the waste performance reward grant in the autumn. Preparations for launching the consultation are well-advanced.

Website

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is on the use of computer games on her departmental website. [139296]

Alun Michael: Our aim is that our website should include material that is suitable for its intended audience. On occasion, we have developed website content, typically aimed at a schools audience, that uses quizzes and similar content to stimulate users of the site as part of their learning process.

Yoghurt Classification

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice has been given to yoghurt manufacturers to help them comply with EU Directives on yoghurt classification. [139045]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

I am advised by the Food Standards Agency (FSA) that there is no specific European Union legislation on the composition and labelling of yoghurt. However, the European Commission is considering the need for such legislation and the form it might take. The FSA is currently consulting interested parties on a draft document prepared by the Commission.

SCOTLAND

Bechtel

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel in each year since 1997 by the Scottish Office, stating in each case (a) the nature of the work, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the duration of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [137731]

Mrs. McGuire: No consultancy or other work was carried out by Bechtel for the Scottish Office between 1997 and 30 June 1999. Responsibility for contracts after that date is a matter for the Scottish Executive.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel for agencies responsible to his Department and its predecessor in each year since 1997, stating in each case (a) the nature of the work, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the duration of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [138066]

Mrs. McGuire: No consultancy or other work was carried out by Bechtel for agencies responsible to the former Scottish Office between 1997 and 30 June 1999; or for agencies responsible to the Scotland Office since 1 July 1999.

Civil Service

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many civil service jobs there were in Scotland in each year from 1974 to 1999, broken down by (a) local authority area, (b) Department and (c) agency. [135271]

Mrs. McGuire: Information on civil service numbers is contained in the Cabinet Office publications 'Civil Service Statistics', back copies of which are available from the Library of the House. Electronic copies from 1995 onwards can also be accessed from the web: www.civil-service.gov.uk/statistics/css.htm. Specific details relating to location of jobs by local authority area is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Performance Monitoring

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the total cost was of (a) setting, (b) monitoring and (c) measuring the performance targets for his Department in 2002–03; and how many and what grades of civil servants monitor these targets. [137953]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office has no public service agreements. Details of other performance targets are set out in Departmental Reports. Performance management is an integral part of the day to day running of the Department, and as such it is not possible to separate the specific costs. The monitoring of progress towards, and performance against, targets is undertaken by a variety of staff at all levels of the organisation.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the performance targets that (a) his Department and (b) its agencies and non-departmental public bodies are required to meet; and if he will specify for each target (i) who sets it and (ii) who monitors achievement against it. [137968]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office has no public service agreements. Details of other performance targets are set in Departmental Reports. Monitoring progress toward departmental targets is undertaken by a variety of staff at all levels of the organisation.

Website

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent assessment he has made of the (a) content and (b) design of his Department's website. [139503]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office website is kept under regular review and content is added when required. It is currently being redesigned.

TRANSPORT

Licensed Cabs

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to remove local authority powers to restrict the number of licensed cabs in a local authority area; and if he will make a statement. [138956]

Mr. McNulty: We are currently considering the taxi and private hire vehicle market study report published on 11 November by the Office of Fair Trading which recommended that local authorities' power to control taxi numbers (outside London) should be abolished. We are now consulting principal stakeholders and are committed to responding to the recommendations within 120 days of the report's publication.

Traffic Control

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who has statutory authority to direct traffic on a public highway; and if he will make a statement. [139944]

Mr. Jamieson: The police have the prime statutory authority for directing traffic on public highways. Traffic wardens, as part of the Police Service, are empowered to direct traffic in certain circumstances. A limited number of authorised persons, including school crossing patrols, have power to stop vehicles for particular purposes. Vehicle and Operator Services Agency examiners, accredited under the Police Reform Act 2002, have powers to stop vehicles for the purpose of inspecting their roadworthiness.

Air Transport White Paper

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish the new Air Transport White Paper. [139356]

Mr. McNulty: The White Paper will be published before the end of the year.

Silent Aeroplanes

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide funds to Cambridge University for research into silent aeroplanes. [140078]

Mr. McNulty: The Cambridge-MIT Institute (CMI) launched its project to design a 'silent' aircraft on 10 November 2003. The project, centred around collaborative research teams at Cambridge University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), has been established using Government funding.

Ballast UK

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contracts Ballast UK has for the renewal of the rail network; and what the value is in each case. [132925]

Mr. McNulty: Decisions on letting contracts for work on the rail infrastructure are an operational matter for Network Rail. Network Rail advises that it has no contracts with Ballast UK.

British Transport Police

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents of violence on underground trains have been reported to British Transport Police in the last six years for which figures are available. [139381]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 18 November 2003]: The British Transport Police have provided the following information regarding criminal offences on London Underground trains that have been reported to the force.

Offence category	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	April–October 2003

Sexual offences	183	287	279	234	208	133
Robbery	224	379	376	497	259	143
Total	668	1,075	992	1,072	872	554

Buses

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of bus lanes there are in England. [137683]

Mr. McNulty: Allocation of road space is a matter for local highway authorities. The Department does not maintain a central register of the length of bus lanes.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his policy is on re-regulation of buses. [139749]

Mr. McNulty: The current statutory framework for buses is set out in the Transport Act 2000. As with all other legislation, we keep the situation under review. Ministers have discussed these matters with a number of groups and individuals representing both local authorities and bus operators.

Call Centres

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department plans to outsource call centre work to premises outside the United Kingdom. [132100]

Mr. McNulty: The Department has no call centre plans which specify a location outside the United Kingdom.

Central Railway Project

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reason he is unable to make an immediate decision on the Central Railway project. [138772]

Mr. McNulty: A decision cannot be made until all aspects of Central Railway's proposal have been fully examined.

Climate Change

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has conducted on the effect of climate change on railway infrastructure; what assessment he has made of the likely impact of future climate change upon the transport sector; and if he will place in the Library copies of reports published from research funded by his Department on the effects of climate change on (a) railways, (b) roads, (c) aviation and (d) other transport. [139761]

Mr. McNulty: An assessment into the impact of climate change on transport policies was undertaken by the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions in 2001 and is now available from the Defra website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/climatechange/impacts/01.htm.

The Rail Safety and Standards Board published their own research, entitled 'Safety Implications of Weather, Climate and Climate Change', in April 2003. This is available from their website, www.railwaysafety.org.uk.

The Highways Agency completed a report entitled 'Climate change and the Highways Agency' in January 2001. The report covered both the influence the Agency had on climate change as well as the implications of climate change on the Agency's operations. A copy of all three reports will be placed in the Library of the House.

Computer Games

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what contracts his Department has awarded to external computer game companies, broken down by (a) the company to which the contract was awarded and (b) the date and total cost of the contract; what the purpose of each contract was; and what has been delivered to date on each contract; [139587]

(2) if he will list the computer games on (a) his Department's website and (b) other websites supported financially by his Department; what the cost to date was of (i) producing and (ii) promoting these; what each game seeks to achieve; and what assessment has been made of the effectiveness of each in meeting its aims. [139588]

Mr. Jamieson: Our THINK! Road Safety web site www.hedgehogs.gov.uk – which is designed to engage children has a games area:

The contract for the games area was awarded to Draught Associates on 13 February 2001 and cost £13,125 ex vat. The purpose was to design and develop a series of interactive games as a fun and relevant vehicle for communicating important road safety messages to 7–11 year olds. The contract has finished and five interactive games were delivered. This included versions of the games for under 7s, and for 8–11s. The contract cost covered design, production, testing and research.

The site and games were launched as part of the 'Be Safe Be Seen campaign' in October 2001 and the URL has been on advertisements, T-shirts, stickers, etc we have aimed at children since then. We do not incur expenditure promoting the games specifically as Be Safe, Be Seen is itself our promotional message.

For the under 7s there are three games:

'Double Up' is a simple matching pairs game where children must find a total of 18 pairs of road safety icons e.g: crash helmet, zebra crossing, lollipop lady, etc.

'Simon' is a game where children have to remember a sequence of coloured cars as they drive past. It becomes increasingly difficult and there is a road safety message after each sequence

'Look Out' is a game where children must scroll through a street scene and, when prompted, identify children being careless in various scenarios eg:

playing with a ball near the road, cycling without a helmet, etc

For the 8–11 years old there are five games:

'Double Up' is similar as for the under 7s except it uses more advanced icons eg: road signs etc.

'Zebras'—in this game players navigate a zebra through a series of crossings. They must use crossings where the man is green to score points 'Simon' is similar to the under 7s game of the same name except the player follows a cyclist and identifies his arm signals.

'Walkies' is a similar concept to the game where you have to feed a metal loop along a wire without touching the two together. The player has to walk their pet dog along a road and use designated crossings etc to score points.

'Look out' is similar to the under 7s game of the same name but uses scenarios which are more relevant to older children.

Qualitative research was carried out with groups from the target audience to test the games. The hedgehogs site is popular with children and has had 403,719 page impressions this year.

Deep Vein Thrombosis

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research studies he has (a) commissioned and (b) received on alternative designs for the layout of aeroplane cabins to minimise the risk of deep vein thrombosis. [138979]

Mr. McNulty: The Government has neither commissioned nor received any such studies. Following the House of Lords Report on air travel and health, the Government is co-funding research through the World Health Organisation into the incidence and possible causes of deep vein thrombosis amongst air travellers.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents of deep vein thrombosis in passengers on aeroplanes there were in each of the last 12 months. [139608]

Mr. McNulty: This data is not collated centrally. Such data would be difficult to obtain as any passenger developing thrombosis is usually likely to do so a number of days or weeks after the flight has taken place.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance he has issued to airline companies on informing passengers on (a) the risk of deep vein thrombosis and (b) drinking water during the flight to reduce the risk of DVT. [139694]

Mr. McNulty: In 2001 the Government issued advice on deep vein thrombosis and air travel. It identified groups of people with a higher risk of DVT and provided guidance on measures to reduce the risk, including a recommendation that passengers should drink plenty of water to avoid dehydration. All UK airlines operating long-haul flights have based the information they give to passengers on this advice.

Website

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent assessment he has made of the content and design of his Department's website. [139371]

Mr. McNulty: The DfT web site, re-launched in July 2003, was developed to provide improved design, navigation and information retrieval. Following the launch of the site, we carried out an internal content review over the summer and commissioned a survey of external users designed by NOP. Further changes to improve customer focus are planned as a result of these exercises.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many complaints were received by (a) the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency, (b) his Department and (c) other bodies about the process by which licence applications are processed by the DVLA, broken down by the nature of each complaint, in (i) 2001–02, (ii) 2002–03 and (iii) 2003–04 to date. [139728]

Mr. Jamieson: The following table provides information about formal complaints received directly by DVLA about the driving licence application process. Figures are not available on complaints received by other bodies.

Environmental Impact Assessments

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has incorporated Directive 85/337/EEC on environmental impact assessment into its consideration of the future development of air transport in the UK. [138840]

Mr. McNulty: Directive 85/337/EEC makes it clear that environmental impact assessment is a matter for developers, as part of the procedure for seeking consent to any development. That said, we believe our strategic appraisal of airport options is consistent with the aims of the Directive.

Environmentally Sustainable Aviation

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce an environmentally sustainable aviation policy; and if he will make a statement. [138876]

Mr. McNulty: The Air Transport White Paper will be published before the end of the year and will address the issue of environmental sustainability in the context of aviation policy.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the EC-Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia Joint Transport Committee met during the Danish and Greek presidencies. [132682]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not centrally available.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the EU Advisory Committee on transport met during the Danish and Greek presidencies; and if he will make a statement. [132719]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not centrally available.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the dates of meetings of (a) the EU Committee for the establishment of conditions for the interoperability of the trans-European high-speed rail system, (b) the EU Committee on the System of Charging for the Use of Transport Infrastructure and (c) the EU Advisory Committee on unfair pricing in maritime transport during the Danish and Greek presidencies; what items were on each agenda; what representative of the Scottish Executive was present on each occasion; what preparatory meetings were held for each meeting; which officials were present at each preparatory meeting; and if he will make a statement. [132723]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested is as follows:

(a) During the period in question, there were four meetings of this Committee, on 3 July 2002, 30 September-1 October 2002, 4 February 2003, and 23–24 June 2003. The UK is represented on this Committee by the Strategic Rail Authority. The Committee is primarily responsible for assisting and overseeing the production, adoption and revision of Technical Standards of Interoperability. The purpose of these specifications is to technically harmonise the European railway supply market. The committee oversees the development of these TSIs for both the High Speed (96/48/EC) and the Conventional Interoperability (2001/16/EC) Directives. During the specified period, the Committee discussed principles for the drafting groups to adhere to in writing the TSIs and monitored the progress being made on the production of these TSIs. It also considered the cost-benefit analyses (including methodology) that accompany the TSIs and the co-ordination of notified bodies (organisations appointed in Europe to verify compliance with TSIs).

(b) This Committee did not meet during the period in question.

(c) UK involvement in this Committee is not the responsibility of the Department for Transport.

Exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information covering internal discussion and advice applies.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether (a) the EC-Bulgaria Joint Transport Committee, (b) the EEC-Slovenia Joint Transport Committee and (c) the EC-Romania Joint Transport Committee met during the Danish and Greek presidencies. [132728]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not centrally available.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the dates and locations of meetings of (a) the EU Advisory Committee on the definition and use of compatible technical and operating standards and specifications for the procurement of air-traffic management equipment and systems, (b) the EU Advisory Committee on restrictive practices and dominant positions in the shipping industry and (c) the EU Advisory Committee on restrictive practices and dominant positions in air transport during the Danish and Greek presidencies; what items were on each agenda; what representative of the Scottish Executive was present on each occasion; what preparatory meetings were held for each meeting; which officials were present at each preparatory meeting; and if he will make a statement. [132731]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is as follows.

(a) This Committee did not meet during the period in question.

(b) and (c) UK involvement in these Committees is not the responsibility of the Department for Transport.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether (a) the EC-Czech Republic Joint Transport Committee, (b) the EC-Slovak Republic Joint Transport Committee, (c) the EC-Hungary Joint Transport Committee and (d) the EC-Poland Joint Transport Committee met during the Danish and Greek Presidencies; and if he will make a statement. [132761]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not centrally available.

Freight

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, how much freight in (a) actual and (b) percentage terms was carried by (i) road, (ii) rail and (iii) water in each year from 1974 to date. [133111]

Dr. Howells: The information requested is as follows:

Heathrow Pollutants

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what research he has commissioned on methods of maintaining levels of nitrogen dioxide around Heathrow Airport within EU limits; [138839]

(2) whether a third runway at Heathrow Airport would remain an acceptable option in the forthcoming Aviation White Paper in the event that relevant pollutants could not be contained within EU limits; [138841]

(3) what assessment his Department has made of the action plan to minimise emissions from Heathrow Airport which BAA plc was required to produce as a condition of the planning permission for the fifth terminal. [138842]

Mr. McNulty: The Government has reviewed a wide range of evidence, including information contained within the BAA plc Air Quality Strategy and Action Plan, in considering the future development of Heathrow. The Government remains of the view that a new runway at Heathrow could not be considered unless it could be confident that levels of all relevant pollutants could be consistently contained within EU limits. Final decisions will be announced in the forthcoming air transport White Paper.

Missile Incidents

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents since 1997 have been caused by missiles thrown from bridges over (a) motorways and (b) trunk roads. [138882]

Mr. Jamieson: Police and Highways Agency procedures for recording details of incidents on motorways and trunk roads do not support identifying those caused by missiles being thrown from bridges.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures the Government is taking to reduce the number of incidents caused by missiles thrown from bridges over motorways and trunk roads. [138883]

Mr. Jamieson: The Agency is tackling the problem of missiles thrown from bridges and trunk roads in several different ways.

These include education initiatives, visits to schools by Police and local Road Safety officers, to make younger children more aware of the consequences of this type of activity. The Agency is also looking to support the Police in implementing additional enforcement measures, including increased CCTV coverage and warning notices on the approaches to problem sites. The Agency has also incorporated guidance on measures to prevent missile throwing within the latest version of its standard for the design of footbridges.

NM Rothschild and Sons Ltd

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on services provided to his Department by NM Rothschilds since 1997. [139967]

Mr. McNulty: The Department was formed in May 2002. No services have been provided to the Department by NM Rothschilds.

Rail Industry

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to take back into full public ownership (a) rail operations, (b) full responsibility for track renewal and (c) London Underground; and if he will make a statement. [137898]

Mr. McNulty: The Government aims to deliver a safer, more reliable and efficient rail system.

What is essential is for the public and private sector working together to focus on delivering improvements. Major structural change can be disruptive and would detract effort from making improvements to the day to day management of the network.

Network Rail have said they will continue to use contractors to carry out renewals, upgrading lines or installing a new signalling system—areas where there is a competitive supply market. This work is typically carried out on a project basis, making use of a specialist workforce and is well-suited to competitive tendering.

Responsibility for London Underground (LUL) transferred from central Government to Transport for London, an agency of the London Mayor on 15 July 2003. It is now for London Underground, working with the infrastructure companies, to ensure the stable long-term funding that Government is providing is used to bring the Tube up to modern standards.

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent assessments his Department has made of the potential of high-speed rail as an alternative to short-haul flights. [139354]

Mr. McNulty: Scope for the railways to provide an alternative to short-haul air services was among the many issues on which we invited views in our consultation on the future development of air transport in the United Kingdom.

We will set out our conclusions in the air transport White Paper, which we expect to publish next month.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place a list of the stations which have secure station accreditation in the Library. [139743]

Mr. McNulty: The list of the 163 stations currently accredited under the Secure Stations Scheme has been placed in the House Library today. Seventy three of these stations have been reaccredited.

Approximately two thirds of all overground rail journeys, and approximately one half of all London Underground journeys now involve passengers starting or finishing their journey at a Secure Station.

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new train carriages will be ready for use by December but cannot be used due to insufficient power supply. [133039]

Mr. McNulty: Over 2,000 new carriages are being introduced to replace all the slam-door trains—most of which are over 30 years old—across the three south-of-the-Thames franchises. Railtrack failed to plan for the associated upgrade of the power supply. The Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) now has a grip on the project and expects to complete it early in 2005. Meanwhile, many of the new carriages are already in service and none is in store because of power shortages. As deliveries continue, around a 100 out of over 2,000 new carriages may be stored by December, but the SRA is leading work on ways in which they might be introduced into service using existing power supplies.

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made towards reducing the train journey time between London and Manchester; and if he will make a statement. [134556]

Mr. McNulty: Work is currently underway to modernise the West Coast Main Line which will substantially reduce the current journey time of two hours 41 minutes. The Strategic Rail Authority's West Coast Main Line Strategy, published in June 2003, projects a reduction in minimum journey times between London and Manchester of around 40 minutes by 2007.

Reflective Clothing

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment has been made of the effect of wearing reflective clothing on the number of (a) child and (b) road casualties; [139589]

(2) what support has been given to the Cats Eyes for Kids road safety campaign; and what assessment there has been of its impact on (a) the number of casualties and (b) promoting better individual behaviour related to road safety. [139590]

Mr. Jamieson: The Nationwide's Cats' Eyes for Kids campaign promotes reflective clothing, and provides reflectors for children to wear. It is not possible to quantify exactly how much the wearing of such materials impacts on casualties. But together with other good practice, it undoubtedly makes our children more visible when walking in the dark and thus safer on the roads. The Nationwide initiative is an excellent example of how the private sector can help us to meet national casualty reduction targets.

Road Accidents

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) deaths of and (b) injuries to (i) vehicle drivers, (ii) vehicle passengers and (iii) pedestrians occurred as a result of road accidents involving (A) converted-van or multi-purpose vehicle taxis and (B) purpose-built taxis in (1) the United Kingdom and (2) London in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [137682]

Mr. Jamieson: The available information relates to the number of deaths and injuries to (i) vehicle drivers/riders, (ii) vehicle passengers and (iii) pedestrians as a result of road accidents involving taxis (hackney carriages) in (1) Great Britain and (2) Greater London in each of the last five years. This information is shown in the following table. Information is not available on accidents involving converted van or multi-purpose vehicle taxis. Information for Northern Ireland is collected on a different basis and does not identify pedestrian injuries resulting from accidents involving taxis.

Road Traffic Control

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on permitting civilians to direct vehicles on public highways; and if he will make a statement. [139945]

Mr. Jamieson: There are limited circumstances in which civilians can direct vehicles on public highways. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I have given today (ref. 139944). In developing its role as a network operator, as announced by the Secretary of State for Transport in his statement to the House on 20 June 2003, the need was identified for civilian traffic officers working on the trunk road network, around the clock to keep traffic flowing. This followed a review undertaken by the Agency, in partnership with the Association of Chief Police Officers, of both organisations roles and responsibilities for traffic management. This concluded that responsibility for a number of tasks associated with traffic management should transfer from the police to the Highways Agency. In order to develop its role the Highways Agency needs new, limited, traffic management powers and is preparing the necessary legislation.

The Highways Agency continues to work in partnership with the police and has held discussions with representatives of primary stakeholders, including constabularies, road contractors, County Surveyors Society, AA and RAC.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the SPECS electronic signs on the M4 between junction 4 and junction 15 contain cameras which (a) read vehicle number plates, (b) compute vehicle speeds and (c) are used to issue speeding tickets; and if he will make a statement. [139948]

Mr. Jamieson: There is no camera equipment located on the M4 between junctions 4 and 15 that is capable of (a) reading vehicle number plates, (b) computing vehicle speeds in order to (c) issue speeding tickets.

Sleeping Drivers

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road accidents caused by drivers falling asleep while driving there were in each year since 1997. [138938]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested is not available. Research has estimated that tiredness is a principle factor in around 10 per cent. of car driver accidents and about 15–20 per cent. of all accidents on motorways and other similar roads.

Speed Partnerships

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for the future of speed partnerships. [138948]

Mr. Jamieson: At present 42 partnership areas are participating in the scheme. We plan to continue with the national roll out of this successful programme.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidelines there are for setting speed areas for speed partnerships. [138949]

Mr. Jamieson: Guidelines for the setting of speed limits are contained in Circular Roads 1/93.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what level of fine proceeds from mobile partnership speed vans was given to public authorities in the Avon and Somerset area in 2002–03. [139036]

Mr. Jamieson: Fines from speeding offences detected by mobile units are not separated for the purpose of Home Office statistics.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidelines he has published on partnership speed camera vans in the Somerset and Avon area. [139038]

Mr. Jamieson: Vehicles associated with mobile camera units need to be in a livery that makes clear the vehicles contain the speed enforcement cameras.

Transport Security

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what steps he is taking to minimise the security risk from terrorists using haulage vehicles to attack targets; [138357]

(2) what security checks are carried out on (a) individuals and (b) organisations seeking permits to transport hazardous materials. [138363]

Mr. Jamieson: The UK's existing transport security regimes are kept under review to ensure they continue to manage the assessed risk, although for obvious reasons it is not appropriate to set out the detail of the particular security measures.

Transport Staff

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff were employed by (a) the Office of the Rail Regulator, (b) the Strategic Rail Authority, (c) Her Majesty's Railway Inspectorate, (d) sections relating to railway matters within the Health and Safety Executive and Health and Safety Commission and (e) the (i) Rail Delivery Directorate and (ii) Railways Restructuring Directorates, or their equivalent, within his Department in each year since 1997. [139727]

Mr. McNulty: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 3 February 2003, Official Report, column 46W. As at 1 April 2003, 83 staff were employed in my Department's Rail Directorate.

Trunk Roads

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what weight restrictions are in place on trunk roads; [139078]

(2) which trunk roads have weight restrictions placed on them. [139079]

Mr. Jamieson: I have asked the Acting Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Stephen Hickey, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Stephen Hickey to Mrs. Jackie Lawrence, dated 19 November 2003:

I have been asked by David Jamieson to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about weight restrictions on trunk roads.

The trunk road network in England, which is the responsibility of the Highways Agency, has very few permanent and temporary weight restrictions below the 40 tonne requirement in place, following a programme of strengthening work that has been carried out in recent years. The locations where restrictions are currently in place are listed in Table 1.

Weight restrictions below 40 tonnes

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the expected (a) cost and (b) completion date were of the renewal of the west coast main line when the contract was let; and what his latest estimates of (a) and (b) are. [137939]

Mr. McNulty: The West Coast Route Modernisation project was originally developed by Railtrack in the late 1990s, which claimed that it would be completed by 2005 at a cost of around £2.2 billion. A number of contracts were let with project managers and suppliers for its delivery. However, under Railtrack's management the projected costs eventually escalated to over £13 billion, and it became clear the committed outputs were undeliverable. The Strategic Rail Authority and Network Rail have now established a robust framework for delivering the project, based on the SRA's June 2003 'West Coast Main Line Strategy', which indicated that the costs would be kept within a cap of £9.9 billion. Further work is under way to explore the scope for reducing the costs further. The outputs are currently on course to be delivered by 2007–08.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the West Coast Main Line connection between Crewe and Liverpool Lime Street will be fully modernised by 2005. [139285]

Mr. McNulty: The West Coast Main line Strategy, published by the SRA in June 2003, shows that the upgrading of the line between Crewe–Weaver Junction and Liverpool for higher maximum line speeds is projected to be completed by 2005.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average speed of trains on the West Coast Main Line between Crewe and Liverpool Lime Street will be after the line has been fully modernised. [139286]

Mr. McNulty: Under current timetable proposals for fastest Crewe-Liverpool journey times of some 34 minutes by the end of 2004, average journey speed would be around 60mph, depending on the number of intermediate stops. Timetabling proposals for later years are not yet developed.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what effect the estimated increase in the costs of modernising will have on the Government's plans for the West Coast Main Line. [139287]

Mr. McNulty: The Strategic Rail Authority's 'West Coast Main Line Strategy', published in June 2003, established a robust framework for delivering the project. The Strategy indicated a project cost within a cap of £9.9 billion. Further work is under way to explore the scope for reducing costs. The project outputs are currently on course to be delivered fully by 2007–08.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the estimated train journey time is for services between London and Liverpool using the West Coast Main Line after 2005. [139288]

Mr. McNulty: The Strategic Rail Authority's 'West Coast Main Line Strategy', published in June 2003, gave an indicative best journey time of 2 hours 12 minutes in 2005 for London to Liverpool services.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether the whole of the West Coast Main Line will be fully modernised by 2008; [139289]

(2) what the estimated journey time is for trains using the West Coast Main Line between London and Glasgow after 2008. [139290]

Mr. McNulty: The Strategic Rail Authority's "West Coast Main Line Strategy", published in June 2003, envisages that the modernisation of the line will be complete by 2008 when the fastest journey time from London to Glasgow is projected to fall to some four hours 18 minutes.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Official Residences

Mr. Flight: To ask the Leader of the House how much was spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials in his Department in each year since 1997. [134695]

Mr. Hain: No expenditure of this sort has been incurred in respect of officials. Nor has such expenditure, in respect of Ministers, been incurred since

Mr. Jack: To ask the Leader of the House if he will list for each Bill with over 150 clauses considered in this session of Parliament, how much debate each clause received at (a) Committee Stage and (b) Report Stage. [138907]

Mr. Hain: Five Bills considered in this session of Parliament have over 150 clauses. How much time was spent debating each clause of these Bills is a matter of public record, obtainable from Hansard, but could be collated only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Prime Minister how many of the sources of information used in the compilation of Government publications referring to weapons of mass destruction in Iraq have been interviewed since May of this year to verify the information they provided. [139602]

The Prime Minister: Many of the sources of information used in the compilation of the Government's publications were intelligence sources. It has been the practice of successive Government not to comment on intelligence matters.

Kyoto/ICC

Mr. Colman: To ask the Prime Minister if he will raise with the US President the decision to secede from (a) the Kyoto agreement and (b) the International Criminal Court. [139903]

The Prime Minister: I expect to cover a range of issues of common interest with President Bush. My regular discussions with him include international issues and climate change.

Mark Henderson

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Prime Minister what steps he has taken towards securing the release of Mr. Mark Henderson, kidnapped by ELN, the national liberation army in Colombia, on 12 September 2003. [139873]

The Prime Minister: The Government have been in regular touch with the Colombian Government about the kidnapping of Mark Henderson. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office, in conjunction with police experts in London and the British Embassy in Bogota, has been actively involved in this case from the outset.

We are liasing with the Colombian authorities at the highest level and with the Catholic Church in Colombia which is leading the negotiations with the ELN, also known as the National Liberation Army. We are supporting their efforts to obtain the release of Mark Henderson and the other hostages, emphasizing that the safety of the hostages is of paramount importance. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is in regular contact with the Henderson family.

Ministerial Visits

Andrew Selous: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his Oral Answer to the hon. Member for South-West Bedfordshire of 12 November 2003, Official Report, column. 284, what action he has taken to pass on the hon. Member's request to the Deputy Prime Minister to visit south Bedfordshire. [140071]

The Prime Minister: The Deputy Prime Minister has been made aware of the hon. Member's comments.

Performance Monitoring

Mr. Flight: To ask the Prime Minister what the total cost was of (a) setting, (b) monitoring and (c) measuring the performance targets for his Department in 2002–03; and how many and what grades of civil servants monitor these targets. [137950]

The Prime Minister: Performance targets for my Office form part of the Cabinet Office performance targets and were agreed as part of Spending Review 2002. The monitoring and measurement of Public Service Agreement targets forms part of performance management throughout the Office. Performance management is an integral part of the day to day running of my Office, and as such it is not possible to separate the specific costs out. The monitoring of progress towards, and performance against, the Public Service Agreement targets is undertaken by a wide variety of staff at all levels of the organisation.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the performance targets that (a) his Office is required to meet; and if he will specify for each target (i) who sets it and (ii) who monitors achievement against it. [137966]

The Prime Minister: Key performance targets for my Office form part of the Cabinet Office performance targets and are agreed as part of the Spending Review and the latest set were published in Spending Review 2002: Public Service Agreements 2003–06 (Cm 5571). We monitor progress towards the target along with HM Treasury and progress is reported regularly.

State Visit (Protests)

Mr. Colman: To ask the Prime Minister if he will take steps to ensure that peaceful protest against the visit of the President of the United States is facilitated. [139902]

The Prime Minister: The Metropolitan Police will facilitate peaceful protest during the visit of the President of the United States.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Prime Minister how many cases of work-related stress have been reported in his office in each of the last three years; how much compensation has been paid to employees; how many work days have been lost due to work-related stress, and at what cost; what procedures have been put in place to reduce work-related stress, and at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [136840]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Minister for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Alexander) gave to him today.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

BBC Governor Elections

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will put mechanisms in place for the election of a number of BBC governors by viewers and listeners. [139239]

Tessa Jowell: The Queen currently appoints the BBC Governors, on recommendation of the Prime Minister following advice from the Secretary of State for Culture Media and Sport. Candidates are identified through an open and transparent process that is regulated by the Commissioner for Public Appointments.

There are no current plans to change the appointments mechanism, although the Commissioner regularly reviews her Code. However, the forthcoming review of the BBC's Royal Charter will provide an opportunity to examine all aspects of the Corporation's role and function, including the appointment of Governors.

Childhood Obesity

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has had with sports and leisure representatives on the role of her Department in tackling obesity among children; and if she will make a statement. [139449]

Estelle Morris: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has a key role to play in addressing child obesity. The cross-Departmental Activity Co-ordination Team, which is co-chaired by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Sport and Tourism, is currently preparing a national physical activity strategy. The Team is consulting widely across the sports, leisure and fitness sectors. Representatives from these sectors will be attending a stakeholders' meeting facilitated by ACT and Sport England on 19 November. Measures for addressing obesity among children will be discussed at that meeting.

Film Locations

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action her Department is taking to promote sites in (a) the North East and (b) England as film locations. [139398]

Estelle Morris: The UK Film Council, the Government's strategic adviser for film, has established a network of nine Regional Screen Agencies (receiving £7.5 million per year), to help create a sustainable film and moving image industry throughout England and to work together to promote England as a film location. Each Regional Screen Agency provides a locations service, to promote locations and offer practical assistance for television companies and filmmakers wishing to work in their region.

Northern Film and Media (NFM) is the regional screen agency for the North East. NFM encourages both inward investment and indigenous production and promotes the use of locations, crews and facilities in the North East.

Licensing Laws

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what advice has been given to local authorities on the administration of the new licensing laws for premises selling alcohol. [139059]

Estelle Morris: The Licensing Act 2003 provides that the Secretary of State must issue guidance to licensing authorities on the discharge of their functions under the Act and she expects to present this to both Houses for approval shortly. In the meantime the Department is working with the Local Government Association and the Local Authorities Coordinating Office on Regulatory Services in advising licensing authorities on their forthcoming functions under the Act.

Lottery Funds (Orkney and Shetland)

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total value was of applications for Lottery money made by groups in (a) Orkney and (b) Shetland in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [139489]

Estelle Morris: The Department does not collect this information.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total value was of Lottery grants made to groups from (a) Orkney and (b) Shetland in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [139490]

Estelle Morris: The total value of Lottery awards made to the constituency of Orkney and Shetland in the past five years has been:

Calendar Year	£
1998	1,690,757
1999	1,647,985
2000	1,346,536
2001	1,898,912
2002	8,247,946
January 2003 to date	2,989,411

We are not able to disaggregate the Lottery funding that has gone to the islands individually without disproportionate cost.

This information is derived from the Department's Awards Database and is based on information supplied by the distributing bodies.

Olympic Games

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many of the Olympic facilities in London announced in November will be permanently available for sports use. [139754]

Tessa Jowell: In line with guidance from the International Olympic Committee (IOC), London 2012 Ltd are working with Sport England and local government to ensure that the sporting legacy of the Olympics will be sustainable. This work is ongoing and an initial assessment will be sent to the IOC on 15 January as a part of the candidature acceptance procedure.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps will be taken to improve hotel and tourist facilities outside London in the event of a successful Olympic bid for 2012. [135844]

Tessa Jowell: For tourism, as with other sectors, it is important to realise the full range of opportunities that hosting the Olympics would offer and ensure that the whole country is in a position to capture these benefits fully if the Bid is successful. We have already briefed the Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) on the Bid and the opportunities the Games would create and Visit Britain is looking further at the potential tourism benefits with the tourism industry. London 2012 will also be taking forward further work on the regional benefits in discussion with the RDAs.

Tourism Revenue

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the tourist revenue generated in 2002 from visits to (a) the Palace of Westminster, (b) Buckingham Palace, (c) the London Eye and (d) the Tower of London; and if she will set out the methodology she uses to calculate such figures. [137680]

Estelle Morris: We have not made an estimate of the tourism revenue generated by visits to these places. However, this Department is responsible for the maintenance and presentation of the Tower of London through its contract with Historic Royal Palaces, which relies on revenue generated by the palaces. Buckingham Palace is one of the Occupied Royal Palaces: the Royal Household receives Grant-in-Aid to meet property and service costs. We have obtained the following figures from the bodies responsible concerning tourist revenues:

The Tower of London: gross revenue in 2002 from admissions, retail and concessions was £23,319,000.

Buckingham Palace: the State Rooms were open during August, September and part of October 2002. Gross total revenue from visitors was £5,491,000, comprising £2,993,000 for admissions, and £2,498,000 for shop sales.

Palace of Westminster: House of Commons Officials have advised that, according to unaudited accounts, gross revenue from tickets and merchandise for tours of the Palace in 2002 was £605,000.

The London Eye: is a commercial attraction and we do not have its revenue figures.

Velodrome

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the proposed velodrome will be a permanent facility for cycling; and whether it will be built in the event of an unsuccessful bid for the 2012 Olympics. [139755]

Tessa Jowell: London 2012 Ltd, the company tasked with preparation of the Olympic bid, is in discussion with key stakeholders, including the British Cycling Federation, Lea Valley Regional Park Authority and Sport England, about possible non-Olympic use of the Velodrome, both before and after a 2012 London games. Those discussions encompass the question of whether the building of the velodrome is dependent on a successful London bid.

Women's Sport

Angela Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of the New Community Development Fund sports budget will be available to women and girls who do not participate in traditional mainstream sports. [139567]

Tessa Jowell: The £60 million Community Club Development Programme will run from 2003–04 to 2005–06, and is designed to effect improvements in facility provision at amateur sports clubs. In selecting the sports which will benefit, the Government considered participation rates and the abilities of governing bodies to deliver improvement quickly. As a result, the programme will be delivered by established sports with significant numbers of participants.

Funding is being made available to governing bodies as follows:

The Rugby Football Union, the Football Association, the England and Wales Cricket Board, and the Lawn Tennis Association have been allocated £9.4 million each. The following governing bodies have been allocated £20 million between them over these three years:

the Badminton Association of England, England Basketball,
the British Canoe Union,
British Cycling,
British Gymnastics,
the English Hockey Federation,
the British Judo Association,
the All England Netball Association, the Amateur Rowing Association,
the Rugby Football League, the Amateur Swimming Association, and the English Table Tennis Association.

This funding is not targeted at the development of facilities for women and girls, or at any particular geographical or socio-economic group. It is for the governing bodies which have joined the programme to decide what proportions of funding should be made available for facilities specifically targeted at women's and girls' participation, against their national development plans.

Angela Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps are being taken by her Department to encourage girls to participate in sport. [139569]

Tessa Jowell: The Government is committed to ensuring that everyone is given the opportunity to participate in sport. Sport England Lottery funding to governing bodies is now provided only where those bodies have acceptable equity policies in place as parts of their development plans. In addition, Sport England provides £200,000 a year to the Women's Sports Foundation to support the involvement of women and girls in sport.

World Heritage Status

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many United Kingdom sites have World Heritage Site status, broken down by government office of the region area; and what steps she is taking to gain recognition for other sites. [139396]

Estelle Morris: The UK has 25 World Heritage Sites of which 22 are located within the UK mainland. A break down of these sites by regional Government Office is in the table.

In 1999, the Government produced a Tentative List of 25 sites that might be nominated for World Heritage Site status over the next 5–10 years. To date, seven sites on this List have been inscribed onto the World Heritage List and a number of other sites are preparing for nomination. Since 2002, only one nomination may be made each year.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Palestinian Negotiation Support Unit

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much funding is given by the Government to the Palestinian Negotiation Support Unit; and what conditions are attached to the use of the funding. [139388]

Hilary Benn: DFID has committed a total of £9.2 million to support the Palestinian Negotiation Support Unit (NSU). This funding covers the period 1999 to 2006. To date £5.25 million has been disbursed.

The purpose of this project is to provide professional legal, technical, policy and communications advice to the Palestinian authorities in preparation for, and during, permanent status negotiations with Israel. Following the collapse of formal negotiations the NSU has broadened its role by seeking to encourage the resumption of permanent status negotiations by contributing to a variety of diplomatic peace initiatives. The project supports those in the Palestinian Authority who are committed to peace.

The project is managed on behalf of the Palestinian authorities by the Adam Smith Institute. There are no specific conditions attached, but it is subject to DFID's usual checks and balances to ensure funds are disbursed in accordance with the agreed objectives. In addition four other governments, Norway, Sweden, Netherlands and Denmark provide complementary funding. We are currently establishing with these partners, and with the NSU, a framework for the overall management of the project.

Afghanistan

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of United Kingdom aid to Afghanistan since 2001 has been used to combat the production of opium. [138728]

Hilary Benn: Tackling opium production in Afghanistan requires action in many areas: to improve the ability of the government to enforce the law and implement a coherent counter-narcotics strategy and to improve the conditions for legal private sector economic growth to offer people involved in poppy cultivation the chance of a licit alternative livelihood.

DFID's assistance to Afghanistan contributes to all of these areas. Since October 2001, DFID has disbursed £157 million of aid to Afghanistan. This has included humanitarian support which prevents people from sliding into the marginalised criminal economy, £35 million of financial assistance to the Afghan Government, and over £5 million in assistance to develop the capacity of the Afghan Government.

DFID has already provided £2.5 million for specific sustainable livelihoods programmes and has projects being implemented worth nearly £10 million. DFID has recently doubled its budget for sustainable livelihoods programme to £20 million over three years. This represents over 10 per cent. of total DFID assistance over the next three years and over 20 per cent. of the budget for programmes excluding financial assistance.

The Government have allocated £70 million over three years specifically to combat the production of opium in Afghanistan. This includes a £5.4 million contribution from DFID's £20 million livelihoods budget. In total, this represents some 30 per cent. of planned UK assistance to Afghanistan over the next three years.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many staff were employed in his Department on 31 December (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and (f) 2002; and how many are employed there now. [139543]

Hilary Benn: Staff numbers for DFID permanent and pensionable Home Civil Service (HCS) staff, for each year from 1997 to 2002 inclusive, published in our annual Departmental Reports from 1998, are set out as follows.

Details of the available figures are contained in the following table:

	HCS staff in UK headquarters	HCS staff overseas	Total
1997	1,007	170	1,177
1998	1,200	180	1,380
1999	1,279	195	1,474
2000	1,292	209	1,501
2001	1,374	224	1,598
2002	1,433	241	1,674

Total HCS staff numbers (headquarters and overseas) at 1 October 2003 was 1,744.

We do not hold annual staff numbers for locally appointed staff in our Overseas offices (SAIC). However, we can say that the number of SAIC in post in March 2003 was 914.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many staff were employed in his Department when the 2002 spending review was completed; and how many he expects to be in post at the end of financial year 2005–06. [139544]

Hilary Benn: Details of DFID staffing figures for 2002 are taken from our published Departmental Report for 2003.

The numbers of permanent and pensionable Home Civil Service (HCS) staff in post at that time, are as detailed in the following table:

	Number
HCS staff in UK headquarters	1,433
HCS staff overseas	241

By the end of the Financial Year 2005–06, we forecast that these numbers will have risen to 1,774.

The number of locally appointed In-Country staff (SAIC) was 914 in March 2003. At this stage, we cannot say what future impact our reduced effort in middle income countries will have on these figures.

Ethiopia

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on his plans to provide aid to Ethiopia in response to predicted food shortages next year. [139346]

Hilary Benn: Since the beginning of 2002 we have provided over £50 million in humanitarian support to Ethiopia.

The Ethiopian Government's Disaster Preparedness and Prevention Commission (DPPC) and UN agencies are currently undertaking crop assessments. Official estimates of food shortages for 2004 will therefore not be available until the DPPC/UN appeal, which should be issued on 10 December.

We will then take these estimates into account, along with nutritional information and other indicators of the humanitarian crisis, when making our decisions about the provision of humanitarian assistance during 2004.

Infant Mortality

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made against the target of reducing the number of child deaths under the fourth millennium development goal; and what assessment his Department has made of whether the target will be met. [138904]

Hilary Benn: Globally child mortality is declining, and between 1990 and 2000 the under-five mortality rate was reduced from 92 to 82 deaths per 1,000 live births. On current trends, however, the Millennium Development Goal target of reducing under-five mortality by two-thirds between 1990 and 2015 will not be met.

DFID works with international partners to monitor global trends in progress towards the Millennium Development Goals and their associated targets. Latest United Nations reports suggest considerable regional variation in the rates of progress being made towards the under-five mortality target. Latin America is expected to meet the target, but there has been much slower progress in South Asia, and virtually no progress in sub-Saharan Africa, which accounts for over half of all under-five deaths.

DFID has put the achievement of the MDGs at the heart of its work, and is working with its partners to accelerate progress towards the MDG targets. The targets for both child and maternal mortality in Africa and Asia form part of DFID's Public Service Agreement. Supporting progress in sub- Saharan Africa is a particular priority for DFID.

An assessment of progress towards all of the MDGs is provided in the UN Secretary General's 2003 report on the implementation of the Millennium Declaration: http://ods-dds- ny.un.org/doc/UNDOC/GEN/N03/481/57/PDF/N0348157. pdf?OpenElement.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) if he will list the mortality rates of children under five for (a) girls and (b) boys in Asia in each of the last 10 years; [139540]

(2) what the mortality rates of children under five for (a) girls and (b) boys were in sub-Saharan Africa in each of the last 10 years. [139542]

Hilary Benn: Estimates for under-five mortality by region are published by the UN Statistics Division on the Millennium Development Goals database. This provides information for 1990 and 2000 but not for intervening years. A gender disaggregation is not available. Details are as follows:

Under-five mortality rates (deaths per 1,000 live births)

	1990	2000
Sub-Saharan Africa	176	172
Eastern Asia	44	36
South-central Asia	125	95
South-eastern Asia	77	51
Western Asia	70	62

These figures were published in the report of the Secretary-General on the MDGs to the UN General Assembly in September 2003 and can be accessed via: http://millenniumindicators.un.org/unsd/mi/pdf/a_58_323e.pdf .

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on child mortality in developing countries in (a) 1980, (b) 1990 and (c) 200([139622]

Hilary Benn: Globally, child mortality was significantly reduced in the late twentieth century. The number of child deaths fell from over 13 million in 1980 to an estimated 10.8million in 2000. The following table gives the United Nations estimates of under-five mortality rates (the probability of a child dying before his or her fifth birthday expressed per 1,000 live births) over this period globally and in developing countries:

	Under-five mortality: the world	Under-five mortality: developing regions
(a) 1980	117	132
(b) 1990	92	102
(c) 2000	82	90

While this decline in child deaths is encouraging, current progress towards the Millennium Development Goal (MDG) target of reducing under-five mortality by two-thirds between 1990 and 2015 is too slow and uneven across regions. A significant challenge remains, particularly in sub-Saharan Africa and South Asia.

DFID has put the achievement of the MDGs at the heart of its work, and is working with its partners to accelerate progress towards the MDG targets. The targets for both child and maternal mortality in Africa and Asia form part of DFID's Public Service Agreement.

Iraq

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps coalition forces in Iraq are taking to set up a humanitarian traffic lane on the Iraqi side of the Iraqi-Jordanian border. [138619]

Hilary Benn: We are not aware that coalition forces are planning the setting up of a humanitarian traffic lane on the Iraq side of the border with Jordan.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of Iraq's demand for domestically consumed fuels was met through imports in the last month. [138877]

Hilary Benn: It is estimated that, in October 2003, between one-quarter and one-third of the national supply of gasoline, diesel and kerosene was met by imports. Imports also provided almost two-thirds of the demand for LPG. Iraq is likely to depend on imports of these fuels until the early spring.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will identify the roles and responsibilities of (a) the 18 members of staff in his Department and (b) the seconded consultants working in Iraq. [138890]

Hilary Benn: The information is as follows:

(a) The Iraq Directorate within DFID consists of a range of programme management and professional advisory staff who cover development subjects relevant to the needs of the reconstruction effort, e.g. social development, health, economics and infrastructure.

(b) Most of the seconded consultants are working for the Coalition Provisional Authority (CPA) in Baghdad and Basrah in an advisory capacity in various sectors, including economics, education, refugees/returns and infrastructure and urban development. There are eight DFID-funded contractors working as project officers and facilities managers in various Governorate Team Offices throughout Iraq. There are also three DFID members of staff seconded to CPA whose job titles are Assistant to Chief of Operations, Press Officer and Senior Engineering Adviser.

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what assessment his Department has made of the need for environmental improvements in Iraq; [139008]

(2) what support his Department is giving to the Minister for the Environment in Iraq. [139007]

Hilary Benn: DFID is exploring options for support to the environment, including work with the Minister for the Environment, in the context of other priorities for our future assistance to Iraq. DFID and Defra officials are planning to undertake an assessment visit to Iraq shortly. DFID has meanwhile agreed to part-finance a survey to be carried out in Iraq by the Post-Conflict Assessment Unit of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP).

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what advisers have been appointed by Coalition members to support the work of the Minister for the Environment in Iraq. [139009]

Hilary Benn: Coalition members have provided a number of staff for the Coalition Provisional Authority with environmental expertise who work alongside the Iraqi Environment Ministry. These include the Senior Adviser to the Ministry of Health, which previously contained Iraq's Environmental Protection and Improvement Directorate, and the Senior Adviser to the Ministry of Water Resources. As part of the UK contribution to the reconstruction effort, we have agreed to fund half of UNEP's environmental field assessment, which is likely to commence in spring 2004, and will include work on institutional and capacity building focusing particularly on the Environment Ministry.

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what resources provided by (a) Her Majesty's Government and (b) NGOs are available in Iraq for mine clearance. [125702]

Hilary Benn: The UK has made the following resources available for mine/UXO clearance in Iraq in the current financial year.

Organisation	Purpose	Amount (£)
UNMAS	Mine/UXO clearance	4,000,000
UNMAS	Plastic explosive for disposal of mines/UXO	357,378
Mines Advisory Group (MAG)	Preparedness	80,883
Mines Advisory Group (MAG)	Integrated mine action	781,639

Life Expectancy

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on life expectancy in developing countries in (a) 1980, (b) 1990 and (c) 2000. [139641]

Hilary Benn: The figures for life expectancy in developing countries are as follows:

	Number
1980	60
2001	64

Life expectancy in developing countries is therefore improving steadily, but not dramatically. However, the HIV/AIDS epidemic is dramatically reducing life expectancy in the worst affected countries. By 2010, life expectancy in many African countries will fall to around 30 years of age, levels not seen since the end of the nineteenth century. The demographic impact outside Africa will be less severe but still significant.

Maternal Health

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many mothers (a) died and (b) suffered injury or disability through childbirth in each developing country in the last year for which figures are available. [139532]

Hilary Benn: Maternal mortality is difficult to measure. As a result, WHO, UNICEF and UNFPA have developed an approach to estimating maternal mortality that generates estimates for countries with no data and corrects available data for underreporting and misclassification. They estimate that there were 527,000 maternal deaths in the year 2000 in developing countries, where 99.6 per cent. of all maternal deaths occur. The latest country estimates for the year 2000 have been placed in the Libraries of the House under the title "Maternal Mortality Estimates in 2000". The number of maternal deaths is listed in the fourth column.

Measuring and classifying the numbers of women who suffer injury or disability as a result of pregnancy and childbirth is even more challenging. Estimates from WHO, UNICEF and UNFPA for 1995 suggest that 300 million women worldwide (including 25 per cent. of the developing world's adult women) suffer from ill health and disability as a result of complications of pregnancy. WHO is currently conducting a review of published and unpublished studies in an attempt to provide a comprehensive tabulation of available data on the prevalence and incidence of global maternal morbidity.

DFID is also working with partners to develop and use improved ways of measuring the extent of maternal mortality.

A copy of the report and latest estimates of maternal mortality developed by WHO, UNICEF and UNFPA is available at: http://www.who.int/reproductive-health/publications/maternal_mortality_2000/maternal_mortality_2000.pdf

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of births were assisted by skilled births assistants in sub-Saharan Africa in each of the last 10 years. [139619]

Hilary Benn: The proportion of women in Sub-Saharan Africa who gave birth with the assistance of a skilled health worker (the internationally agreed maternal mortality indicator) increased slightly from 40 per cent. in 1990 to 42 per cent. by 2000.

Annual figures for sub-Saharan Africa as a whole are not available.

More information and individual country data can be found by accessing UNICEF's statistical database at http://www.childinfo.org/index2.htm.

Millennium Development Goals

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether his Department estimates that Tanzania will achieve the millennium development goals. [138905]

Hilary Benn: Recent reports indicate that Tanzania has the potential to meet the millennium development goals on poverty, HIV/AIDS, and environmental resources. Progress has been disappointing on the maternal and child health goals. There is insufficient data to indicate progress on access to safe water, but there are encouraging signs of progress. In the past two years, there has been significant progress towards the education target, with hugely increased numbers of children entering the first grade of Primary School. The supportive environment in Tanzania is improving.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list his estimated expenditure on pursuit of the millennium development goals in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03, (c) 2003–04, (d) 2004–05 and (e) 2005–06. [139620]

Hilary Benn: DFID's aim is to eliminate poverty and achieve the Millennium Development Goals. With the exception of funds voted to DFID to fulfil its legal commitments to provide pensions to former expatriate colonial civil and public servants, we use all of our resources for eliminating poverty in poorer countries and for preventing and reducing conflict. The information in the table updates the figures published in DFID's Annual Report 2003, where a further breakdown is available:

DFID Resource Budget

	Eliminating poverty in poorer countries	Overseas superannuation	Total resource budget
2001–02 outturn	3,174	59	3,233
2002–03 outturn	3,614	56	3,671
2003–04 plans	3,756	60	3,816
2004–05 plans	3,780	57	3,837
2005–06 plans	4,533	54	4,587

Poverty

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the countries in which some people live on $1 per day or less. [139618]

Hilary Benn: A comprehensive list of such countries has not been published as for many there is insufficient information to make robust estimates. However most if not all low and middle income countries can be expected to have some people living on less than $1 a day. Where country estimates exist the details are set out in table 1.1 of the annual publication 'Statistics on International Development' a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library.

Primary Education

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of children in each developing country receive no education. [139534]

Hilary Benn: The most recent Education For All Global Monitoring Report, published by UNESCO in November this year, estimated that 104 million children of primary school age were not enrolled in school in 2000, 96 per cent. in developing countries. Most of the out-of-school children are concentrated in the countries of sub-Saharan Africa and south and west Asia.

I have placed in the Library lists of the primary net enrolment ratio and the corresponding percentage of primary school-age children not enrolled in school in 2000. The list is called "Education Enrolment in Developing Countries, 2000", and has figures for each country where comparable data are available. The table shows that for developing countries as a whole, 17.9 per cent. of primary school-age children were not enrolled in school in 2000.

The Education For All Global Monitoring Report 2003–04, containing these data, is available at: http://www.efareport.unesco.org

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of primary age children enrolled in primary school in sub-Saharan Africa in each of the last 10 years. [139539]

Hilary Benn: Due to the difficulties of collecting reliable and comparable data consistently across the whole of sub-Saharan Africa there are not internationally agreed figures for primary school enrolment for each of the last 10 years. However the most recent Education For All Global Monitoring Report published by UNESCO in November this year has a comparison of the Net Enrolment Ratio (NER) for most countries in sub-Saharan Africa between 1990 and 2000.

These figures show that in sub-Saharan Africa enrolment has improved but only slightly. In 1990, 55 per cent. of primary school age children were enrolled; in 2000 58 per cent. were enrolled. Within these figures there is wide variation by regions from 89 per cent. in South Africa to 30 per cent. in Niger in the year 2000.

The Education For All Global Monitoring Report 2003–04, containing these data, is available at http://www.efareport.unesco.org

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the ratio of girls to boys enrolled in primary school in sub-Saharan Africa was in 2003–04; and what it is expected to be in 2005–06. [139613]

Hilary Benn: Due to the difficulties of collecting reliable and comparable data consistently across the whole of sub-Saharan Africa the most recent internationally agreed figures for gender parity are for 2000. These are in the most recent Education For All Global Monitoring Report published by UNESCO in November this year.

In 2000, there were 88 girls to every 100 boys in primary school classrooms in sub-Saharan Africa. This figure is the number of children of any age enrolled in primary school (the gross enrolment ratio).

There is no predicted ratio of boys to girls for 2005–06. However the Global Monitoring report estimates that of 128 countries for which data are available, 35 countries are not likely to meet the 2005 goal of gender parity in primary education. 19 of these are in sub-Saharan Africa.

The Education For All Global Monitoring Report 2003 04, containing this data, is available at http://www.efareport.unesco.org.

Sanitation/Water

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of families in each developing country are without access to water supplies or basic sanitation. [139533]

Hilary Benn: Information on the percentage of the population without access to an improved water supply and improved sanitation is set out in the 2003 World Development Indicators Book, published by the World Bank. I have placed a table called "Improved Water and Sanitation" in the Libraries of the Houses.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Moylinn Medical Centre (Security)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he will take to respond to attacks on medical staff at the out-of-hours GP co-operative based at Moylinn, Craigavon; and what plans he has to relocate the co-operative. [138972]

Angela Smith: The Southern Health and Social Services Board (SHSSB) and the Association of Southern Areas Doctors On Call (ASADOC), which runs the Moylinn Medical Centre, are collaborating to improve security at the centre. Fencing around the centre has already been improved and both CCTV and alarm systems have been installed. Meetings have also been held with the local police with a view to improving security and local representatives have been asked to do all they can to minimise attacks in the future.

The SHSSB and ASADOC are currently considering several options to relocate the centre and final decisions are expected in the near future.

British-Irish Interparliamentary Conference

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the (a) matters discussed and (b) decisions taken at the 27th British-Irish Interparliamentary conference; and if he will place in the Library the report on Sellafield discussed at the conference. [134410]

Mr. Spellar: The British-Irish Interparliamentary Body (BIIPB) held its 27th Plenary session between 19 21 October this year. As an Interparliamentary Body, the BIIPB is independent of Government and, as such, it would not be appropriate for me to offer a statement on the matters discussed nor on the decisions taken. The minutes and a full verbatim account of the open sessions will, I understand, be posted on the body's website in due course. A copy of the report on Sellafield has been placed in the Library.

Carpets International

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his policy is on the use of the land occupied by Carpets International (UK) Ltd. in Donaghadee, should it be unsuccessful in attracting a buyer. [132463]

Angela Smith: In considering the current use of this site, the need to provide an appropriate level of employment opportunity in Donaghadee, and the lack of readily available alternatives, the Department of the Environment proposed that the land should be retained for industrial use. This is reflected in the recently published Draft Ards and Down Area Plan 2015.

Coagulometers

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 20 October 2003, Official Report, column 420W, on anti-coagulants, what effect the results of the home use trial of coagulometers by Roche Ltd. will have on current practice. [139262]

Angela Smith: Further work is being undertaken nationally to assess the effectiveness of self-testing and to develop clinical guidelines on the appropriate selection of patients suitable to undertake self-management. The Department will not be issuing guidance about the further development of self-monitoring until this work has been completed.

Decommissioning

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent (a) meetings and (b) discussions he has had with (i) Unionist politicians and (ii) others on decommissioning of arms held by Loyalist terrorists; and if he will make a statement. [137344]

Mr. Spellar: We have talked about the issue of decommissioning by paramilitary organisations at a large number of meetings and discussions regarding the political process in Northern Ireland over recent weeks. Individual meetings and discussions are confidential, but we have consistently made clear our view that all paramilitary groups should engage with the Independent International Commission on Decommissioning with a view to putting arms beyond use in a manner which is conducive to creating public confidence.

Devolved Government

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on recent discussions with the Prime Minister of the Republic of Ireland on the restoration of devolved government in Northern Ireland. [134844]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the remarks my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland made on this subject at Northern Ireland oral questions in the House on 29 October.

Employment Tribunals

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been awarded since 1 November 2002 in Northern Ireland in costs as the result of employment tribunals; and what the average sum awarded was. [138982]

Jane Kennedy: The equivalents of Employment Tribunals in Northern Ireland are the Industrial Tribunals and the Fair Employment Tribunal. Costs may be awarded against any party if a tribunal decides that the party has acted scandalously, frivolously, vexatiously, abusively, disruptively or otherwise unreasonably.

The information requested is not readily available and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost. Costs are awarded infrequently by the tribunals and they have normally been in the range £50 to £500.

Equality Commission

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions the Equality Commission has had with the Northern Ireland Office on the legality of the exclusion of Irish nationals from reserved posts. [132213]

Mr. Pearson: There has been contact at official level between the Northern Ireland Office and the Equality Commission concerning the progress of the Crown Employment (Nationality) Bill, which was introduced on 28 January 2003.

EU Fisheries Council

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ensure that the Minister of State with responsibility for Agriculture and Rural Development will be present throughout the negotiations at the EU Fisheries Council meeting. [137526]

Mr. Pearson: I propose to attend the whole of the December Agriculture and Fisheries Council Meeting, although I should much prefer Northern Ireland's interests to be represented by a locally elected Minister.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what lines of communication will be provided between the Minister of State for Agriculture and Rural Development and representatives of the Northern Ireland fishing industry during the negotiations at the EU Fisheries Council. [137527]

Mr. Pearson: If a locally elected Minister cannot represent Northern Ireland at the December Agriculture and Fisheries Council, my senior officials and I will make every effort to keep local fishing industry representatives informed of developments throughout the proceedings.

General Practitioners

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to encourage trainee general practitioners to develop special interests. [138987]

Angela Smith: My Department has received a proposal to extend the GP Vocational Training programme by one year, to enable trainee GPs to develop special interests. The practicalities and funding implications of this proposal are currently being considered.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to encourage trainee general practitioners in Northern Ireland to develop an interest in the area of family planning. [138988]

Angela Smith: My Department has received a proposal to extend the GP Vocational Training programme by one year, to enable trainee GPs to develop special interests, including family planning. The practicalities and funding implications of this proposal are currently being considered.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to encourage experienced senior house officers in hospitals in the Province to remain in Northern Ireland to complete their GP registrar year. [138990]

Angela Smith: Vocational Training for General Practice consists of three years, made up of two years in approved Senior House Officer posts in hospitals followed by one year in a GP Registrar post.

The Department currently funds 40 GP Registrar posts per year, all of which, from this year, will be allocated to doctors participating in a three year integrated training programme. This means that there will be no new GP Registrar posts available for other Senior House Officers who are not in the three-year scheme and no arrangements are in place for such posts.

At present there is no shortage of GPs in Northern Ireland and the numbers in training meet current demands. However, the number of GP Registrar posts available will be kept under review as part of the Department's workforce planning process.

Loyalist Terrorists

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of Loyalist terrorists' capacity to carry out (a) targeting, (b) intimidation and (c) racketeering activities in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [134963]

Jane Kennedy: This information is only available from intelligence sources and it would be inappropriate for the Government to comment. We now call on all paramilitary organisations to bring a complete and permanent end to paramilitary activity in all its forms.

North/South Ministerial Council

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many times the North/South Ministerial Council has met as indicated in the 1998 Belfast Agreement (a) in Plenary format, (b) in specific sectoral formats, represented by the individual Ministers and (c) to consider cross-sectoral matters. [132091]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The North/South Ministerial Council, since its establishment in 1999, has met four times in Plenary format, once in Institutional format to consider cross-sectoral matters and 60 times in specific sectoral format.

A breakdown of specific sectoral meetings is provided as follows:

Specific sectoral area	Number of meetings
Agriculture	7
Education	4
Environment	6
Aquaculture and Marine	8
Health and Food Safety	5
Language	4
Special EU Programmes	7
Tourism	5
Trade and Business Development	7
Transport	2
Inland Waterways	5
Total	60

Prisons

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the breakdown is of prison custody visitors by (a) perceived community origin and (b) sex. [138706]

Jane Kennedy: There are currently a total of 50 Board of Visitors/Visiting Committee members in post. The breakdowns are as follows:

	Breakdown
Perceived community origin
Protestant	29
Roman Catholic	15
Not known	6
Sex
Female	24

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost of the prison custody visitors scheme was in 2002; and what proportion of this comprises (a) remuneration, (b) travel and (c) other expenses incurred by the visitors. [138707]

Jane Kennedy: The total expenditure for the Board of Visitors/Visiting Committee in Northern Ireland for the financial year 2002–03 was £51,751.00. Of this, £39,000 was for travel and subsistence. Members are volunteers and do not receive remuneration.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what administrative support is available to teams of prison custody visitors. [138708]

Jane Kennedy: Each Board/Committee is supported by a part-time Clerk at local level. There is also a small team at Prison Service Headquarters who provide administrative support for all three boards.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the procedural mechanisms are for addressing (a) general matters of prison administration and (b) expressions of concern about individual prisoners; and what mechanisms are available to monitor (i) responses and (ii) implementation. [138709]

Jane Kennedy: Concerns regarding both general matters of prison administration and concerns regarding individual prisoners can be raised with staff informally, or formally with the Governor at the monthly meeting. If possible, the Governor responds at the meeting, or the query is recorded and the response provided at the next monthly meeting, or before then if urgent. All queries are formally recorded in the minutes of the meeting.

If members are not satisfied with the response they receive, or the action taken by the Governor, they can raise the matter with Prison Service Headquarters or ultimately the Secretary of State.

The Boards submit an annual report to the Secretary of State each year. In the interests of openness and transparency, this report is now made available to the general public.

Salmon

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the impact on wild salmon stocks of salmon fish farms in Northern Ireland. [135445]

Angela Smith: The occurrence of escaped farmed salmon in Northern Ireland's commercial salmon catches is examined annually. The largest occurrence was in 2001, when 9.1 per cent. of the commercial catch was farmed fish. The 10-year average, excluding the year 2001, is 1.4 per cent.

Occurrences of escaped farmed salmon in freshwater are also monitored at the trap on the River Bush, where the 10-year average of farmed salmon as a total of trapped fish is 0.7 per cent.

The only detailed information available on the genetic impact of farmed salmon on wild salmon stocks has been undertaken in two surveys of the Glenarm River in 1990–91 and in 1997. The surveys showed that the genetic status of the wild population was significantly changed indicating that cross breeding with farmed salmon had taken place.

Further scientific studies have commenced on the River Bush catchment on the potential consequences of genetic change in the wild population caused by interbreeding with farmed salmon in terms of long-term productivity. No results are yet available and such studies are likely to be case specific.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the number of salmon spawning in each river in the Foyle system has reached the numbers recommended by P. F. Elson and A. L. W. Tuomi in their report of 1975, the Foyle Fisheries, New Basis for Rational Management. [136068]

Mr. Pearson: The target numbers of salmon spawning in each river in the Foyle System recommended by Elson and Tuomi in their 1975 report have been met. A comparison of these numbers together with the number of salmon passing through the relevant fish counters in the years 2000–02 is set out in the following table.

Foyle rivers

River system	Elson and Tuomi spawning targets	Number of salmon passing through fish counter (year) 2000	2001	2002
Faughan and tributaries upstream of fish counter	590	2,551	1,518	4,228

Mourne and tributaries upstream of fish counter	4,276	4,690	6,250	12,991

Social Housing

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many units of social housing properties were vacant in each of the last five years in each local government area. [139708]

Mr. Spellar: The following table details the number of vacant Northern Ireland Housing Executive properties by District Council Area over the five-year period 1998–99 to 2002–03.

Statistics for housing association vacant properties are not held in the form requested. However, the total number of vacant housing association properties over the same five-year period was:

31 March 1999: 917
31 March 2000: 1,157
31 March 2001: 1,002

Strategic Investment Body

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress to date of the Strategic Investment Body (SIB) in improving the profile and performance of the capital expenditure programme across the Northern Ireland Civil Service; and what assessment he has made of whether the departments are working effectively with the SIB on (a) an individual and (b) a collaborative basis. [133009]

Mr. Pearson: Since its inception in April 2003, the SIB has made considerable progress in improving the profile and performance of Northern Ireland's capital expenditure programme. By April 2004, SIB expects to have two to three times the value of PPP projects out to market than had been signed in the previous eleven years in Northern Ireland. An early priority project, a new Invest NI Headquarters, is expected to be signed by June 2004, following a fast procurement period at the top end of HM Treasury performance averages. With the assistance of SIB, the Department of Finance and Personnel has created a new and strong incentive scheme designed to encourage departments to be more active in managing their asset bases. In its first six months of operation, therefore, the SIB has already developed effective working relationships with a number of departments and I am sure that its impact will continue to grow as we work to improve Northern Ireland's infrastructure.

University Capital Expenditure

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what Government capital expenditure on buildings used for teaching and research, not including expenditure on science and business parks and incubators, was for each year since 1992 on each of the campuses of (a) the University of Ulster and (b) Queen's University Belfast. [133007]

Jane Kennedy: Bearing in mind the range of sources for government or government-derived funding not all of which are within Northern Ireland, it would not be possible to provide an answer without incurring disproportionate cost.

Urology Consultants

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many urology consultants are employed by the Northern Ireland Health Service; and what the average waiting time to see a urology consultant is in each health trust. [137665]

Angela Smith: The number of urology consultants employed by Health and Social Services Trusts are given in the following table.

Table 1: Number of urology consultants employed by Health and Social Services Trusts, as at 6 November 2003

DEFENCE

First World War (Passchendaele)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received on repatriating remains of soldiers fallen in the First World War near the trenches found at the site of the new Passchendaele motorway near Ypres. [138779]

Mr. Caplin: I am not aware of any representations.

Armed Forces

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when last questioned, how many (a) RAF, (b) Army and (c) Navy personnel said that overstretch was causing problems in their working; what question was asked; how many responded to each option; what percentage of those asked to respond this represents; and if he will make a statement. [137517]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 13 November 2003]: All three Services conduct continuous attitude surveys (CASs) of serving personnel to ascertain attitudes towards a range of Service conditions.

In the Naval Service CAS there are currently no questions specifically mentioning or using the term 'overstretch'.

The last survey of Army serving personnel was sent out in December 2002 and the RAF CASs results in July 2003.

I intend to write to the hon. Member shortly with the results and a copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect of increased rates of childhood obesity on the ability of the armed forces to recruit sufficient numbers of young people in the past 10 years. [139124]

Mr. Caplin: In Financial Year 2002–03, the total armed forces intake from civilian life exceeded the recruiting target. Consequently, the apparent increase in the rates of childhood obesity in recent years has had no marked impact to date on the armed forces ability to recruit sufficient numbers of capable young people.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what statistical information analysis of recruitment patterns for each of HM Armed Forces is based. [137503]

Mr. Caplin: Armed Forces personnel data are compiled from pay and personnel records held by the Armed Forces Pay Administration Agency (AFPAA). These records are supplemented from other sources to improve the quality of the data on, for example, the ethnic origin of new recruits.

Information on potential recruits is compiled from data collected during the application process. This is held on each Service's Training Administration and Financial Management System (TAFMIS). Records are updated with more information at each stage of the recruitment process, from enquiry through to selection.

Asbestos-related Diseases

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many ex-servicemen and women have presented with asbestos-related diseases (ARDs); how many more the Government forecasts will present with ARDs; and if he will make a statement. [117370]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 10 June 2003]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Congo

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution will be made by the UK to the multi-national rapid reaction force to the Democratic Republic of Congo. [116411]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Defence Agencies

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the location of each of the defence agencies headquarters; how many staff each employs; what the annual expenditure of each was in the last year for which figures are available; and how much was spent in Wales; [137307]

(2) what the expenditure was of each defence agency (a) in total and (b) in Scotland in the last available year; and how many staff were employed by each agency (i) in total and (ii) in Wales in that year. [137309]

Mr. Caplin: The location of defence agency headquarters, the total number of staff employed by each agency as at 1 April 2003 and agency net operating costs for financial year 2002–03 are available in a supplementary document to the Ministry of Defence's Annual Report and Accounts 2002–03. This is available at www.mod.uk/linked_files/publications/pdr2002_2003/agencies03.pdf.

Figures for civilian personnel employed by Defence agencies in Wales are provided in the table below. Information on agency expenditure in Wales and Scotland, and the number of Service personnel employed by agencies in Wales, is not held centrally and can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

The number of staff employed in Wales (full-time equivalent figures for industrial and non-industrial permanent staff, excluding Royal Fleet Auxiliaries and those on career breaks, long term sick leave, secondments etc), by executive agencies as at 1 April 2003:

Civilian Staff employed as at 1 April 2003

Defence Aviation Repair Agency	2,770

Those agencies and Trading Funds that are not referred to do not have staff employed in Wales. Data have been rounded to the nearest 10 to preserve confidentiality and those with fewer than five staff are recorded as —.

Defence Dental Agency

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the unpublished 1997–98 annual report and accounts for the Defence Dental Agency. [139691]

Mr. Caplin: The 1997–98 annual report and accounts was never published as a stand-alone document, in fact, it was included in the 1999 annual report and accounts, which covered the period from 1 April 1997 to 31 March 1999. The reason that there was this two-year report was that HM Treasury had withdrawn the Defence Dental Agency's Accounts Direction for 1997–98.

A copy of the 1997–99 annual report and accounts was placed in the Library but I am arranging for a further copy to be provided.

Defence Personnel (Scotland)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many defence-related jobs there are in each constituency in Scotland. [136188]

Mr. Ingram: United Kingdom Defence Statistics 2003 contains the numbers of service and Ministry of Defence civilian personnel in Scotland at 1 July 2000. Tri-Service Publication 10, produced by the Defence Analytical Services Agency, contains data on service personnel by local authority region. Both publications are available in the Library of the House.

The exact number of defence related jobs in each constituency in Scotland, including those related to defence expenditure by MOD on goods and services and defence export contracts in Scotland, is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 20 October 2003, Official Report, columns 373–74W, on departmental staff, what function previously performed in the Deputy Chief of Defence Staff Commitments (P&P) area was transferred to the private sector; what the procedure was (a) leading up to the decision for the transfer to be undertaken and (b) from the time of the decision for the transfer to be undertaken to the handover to the private sector; what companies participated in the process; what commitments in relation to job maintenance in Scotland were (i) sought and (ii) given as part of the transfer; and if he will make a statement. [138569]

Mr. Caplin: Personnel, Pay and Pensions Administration (PPPA) functions within the Army Personnel Centre, Kentigern House, Glasgow were transferred to Electronic Data Systems (EDS) under a partnering arrangement with the Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency (AFPAA).

PPPA functions for the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force have been undertaken by EDS since 1998, the negotiations for which included an agreement that the same functions would subsequently be provided for the Army. As such, no other commercial companies participated in the process of the Army transfer. The contract with EDS was awarded following a competitive selection in which a number of companies took part.

Ministry of Defence personnel transferred to EDS under the terms of the Transfer of Undertaking (Protection of Employment) (TUPE) Regulations 1981, and formal consultation with the MOD Trade Unions took place. Personnel affected continue to carry out the functions transferred at Kentigern House, Glasgow.

Maintenance Projects

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many equipment (a) maintenance, (b) repair and (c) refit projects were (i) planned for and (ii) undertaken in each month of the current year in each of the branches of the armed forces in (A) England, (B) Wales, (C) Northern Ireland and (D) each of the bases in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [136236]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent at each of the military bases in Scotland in each month in 2003 on equipment (a) maintenance, (b) repair and (c) refit; what percentage this represents of each base's maintenance and repair budget; and if he will make a statement. [136237]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally in the form requested and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Ex-service Personnel

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provisions he will make for the welfare of ex-service personnel after the Gulf conflict. [111873]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Iraq

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the Territorial Army strength has been mobilised for deployment in Iraq since the beginning of the conflict. [139806]

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the components were of British manufacture in the two vehicles found in Iraq and suspected of being involved in the production of weapons of mass destruction; which companies produced them; and if he will make a statement. [131485]

Mr. Ingram: [holding answer 14 October 2003]: I am withholding details of components and companies under Exemption 1 b and 1 c of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, which relate to international relations and information received in confidence from foreign Governments.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contingency plans the UK has, in conjunction with the international community, to limit Iraqi civilian casualties in the event of the use of (a) chemical and (b) biological weapons in the event of war. [97483]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the use of experimental weapons by the US forces in the war in Iraq. [125085]

Mr. Hoon: This is a matter for the US Department of Defence.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what experimental weapons systems were tested in the war in Iraq. [125087]

Mr. Hoon: United Kingdom Armed Forces did not specifically test any experimental weapons during military operations in Iraq. However, a number of weapons systems were used by UK Armed Forces for the first time including:

Storm Shadow—an air launched conventionally armed precision stand off weapon.

Maverick—an air launched anti armour precision guided weapon.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether UK personnel in Iraq have received special training on the protection and rights of women and girls in armed conflict situations in line with the commitments in United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325; and what discussions he has had with his US counterpart about their implementation of these commitments. [112159]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

KPMG

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many contracts his Department has awarded to KPMG since 1997. [113681]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Market Research

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list each item of market and opinion research commissioned since May 1997 by (a) his Department and (b) agencies and non-departmental public bodies for which his Department is responsible; what the purpose of each item was; and whether the results were published. [137010]

Mr. Caplin: I refer the hon. Member to the previous answer given on 28 April 2003, Official Report, columns 57–58W by my hon. friend the Member for Kirkcaldy (Dr Moonie).

The central corporate communications division carries out public opinion research relating to the Ministry of Defence as a whole and the main findings of the most recent research were included in the MOD's Annual Report, HC1125–Page 38; a copy of the Report is available in the Library of the House.

Married Couples' Rights

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what rights only married couples have in (a) housing on military bases, (b) pensions and other employment-related benefits, (c) notification when a spouse has died or has been injured in military action, (d) war pensions and other benefits and (e) war graves. [132414]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Medical Discharges

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many medical discharges there were from each of the three services in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [139272]

Mr. Caplin: The numbers of medical discharges from the armed forces (both trained and untrained United Kingdom regular personnel) between 1997 and 2002 are as follows:

Medical discharges in the armed forces: 1997–2002

Year	Navy	Army	RAF	Total
1997	354	1,067	223	1,644
1998	448	1,060	155	1,663
1999	456	1,100	189	1,745
2000	484	1,024	201	1,709
2001	413	1,004	195	1,612
2002[1]	391	1,008	145	1,544

[1] Figures for 2002 have not yet been finalised and may be subject to alteration.

Medical discharges in the services reflect the different fitness levels required by each service, and the employment policy of each service. Because of these factors medical discharges should not be taken as absolute indicators of the health status of service personnel. Similarly, because of the different requirements of the three services, inter-service comparisons may not be valid.

Ministerial Visits

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) foreign and (b) UK visits he has made since 1 April; what the cost was to public funds of each trip; who he met; and what gifts he has received. [126984]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

MOD Police

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the work on surge capacity referred to in the consultative document issued in response to the Ministry of Defence Police Quinquennial Review First Stage Report will be completed; and what the reasons are for the delay in completing the work. [139363]

Mr. Caplin: Work on surge capacity has been completed. Recommendations to deliver an increase in capability have been made and the additional funding needed for this enhanced capability is being considered as one of the bids in the Department's current planning and resource allocation round. The outcome of this will not be known before the end of the year.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the estimated cost is in 2003–04 to his Department, agencies and the non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible of the increase in the national minimum wage from £4.20 per hour to £4.50 per hour. [110447]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Naval Ships

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what quantities of (a) oil, (b) oily ballast water, (c) asbestos, (d) polychlorinated biphenyl, (e) biohazards, (f) ozone-depleting substances, (g) mercury, (h) cadmium and (i) chromium and lead-based paints are present on Her Majesty's ships (i) Fearless, (ii) Intrepid, (iii) Brave, (iv) Boxer, (v) Rame Head and (vi) RFA Sir Geraint; and if he will make a statement. [139161]

Mr. Ingram: Information is not held in the format requested for all of the vessels. However, the following substances have been identified on Intrepid in preparation for her sale:

(a) Residual diesel fuel in pipes and systems—estimated 4,000 litres. Residual mineral oil in sumps and pipework—estimated 2,000 litres;

(b) Oily ballast water—all tanks cleaned and flushed with water;

(c) Asbestos—up to an estimated 40 tons;

(d) Polychlorinated biphenyl/triphenyl (PCB/PCT)—trace; no liquid PCB;

(e) Biohazards—none identified;

(f) Ozone-depleting substances—all main refrigerant gases removed; balance to be removed before disposal;

(g) Mercury—none known;

(h) Cadmium—minimal (plating on fastenings);

(i) Chromium and lead-based paints—not known.

HMS Fearless is the sister-ship to HMS Intrepid and she is similar in every respect.

HMS Boxer and HMS Brave have been designated as target ships for a Cincfleet High Seas Firing and have already been stripped of much of their equipment. As part of the preparatory planning work for the firing, an Environmental Impact Assessment is being undertaken to provide the necessary environmental assurances. These rigorous preparatory steps will ensure that we are able to comply with the international conventions that regulate protection of the marine environment, and we will be required to demonstrate before the exercise takes place that those materials subject to regulation have been removed from the ships.

Ramehead and RFA Sir Geraint remain in operational service. Ramehead is used as a static training vessel. Sir Geraint is held in a reduced readiness state, has been defuelled and there is no oily ballast water on board. Both vessels have been the subject of extensive asbestos surveys and some asbestos has been removed in accordance with Health & Safety Executive directives. The surveys indicate the type of asbestos and where it is fitted, but not the quantities. Three years ago, the outer bottom of Ramehead was pressure-blasted back to bare metal and re-coated using commercial paint products. Similar products have been used throughout the life of Sir Geraint.

Prior to the disposal of Sir Geraint and Ramehead, as part of the preparations for sale, further surveys will be undertaken to identify any remaining hazardous materials and a waste statement will be produced.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) Royal Navy ships and (b) Royal Fleet Auxiliaries have been sold for scrapping overseas in each year since 1997; in which countries they were scrapped; and what toxic materials were present on these vessels. [139162]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Test Veterans

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many ex-service personnel have been awarded pensions within the last year as a result of health problems resulting from their service on (a) Christmas Island and (b) other nuclear test sites. [138235]

Mr. Caplin: From the information held within the Veterans Agency, it is only possible to distinguish two groups. The first is for service on Christmas/Maiden Island (South Pacific). The second is for other nuclear site tests.

Pensions are awarded if disablement is assessed at 20 per cent. or more; if less than 20 per cent. a single gratuity payment is awarded. Over the last year (April—March 2003) there were no cases awarded for 20 per cent. and above for Christmas Island/Maiden Island and two cases were awarded for less than 20 per cent. Over the same period for the second category, five cases were awarded 20 per cent. and above and none were awarded for under 20 per cent.

Nuclear Weapons

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what sections of the 1970 Non-Proliferation Treaty the collaborative work between AWE and weapons laboratories in the United States is being undertaken. [119075]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Operation Telic

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether morphine, and antidotes to provide post attack therapy against nerve agents, were available to all front line personnel serving on Operation Telic. [126095]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Overseas Deployments

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British troops are deployed in (a) East Timor, (b) the Democratic Republic of the Congo and (c) Kuwait. [132270]

Mr. Ingram: The UK currently has no service personnel deployed in East Timor. Five service personnel are deployed in the Democratic Republic of Congo and around 260 personnel are deployed in Kuwait.

Performance Monitoring

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost was of (a) setting, (b) monitoring and (c) measuring the performance targets for his Department in 2002–03; and how many and what grades of civil servants monitor these targets. [137972]

Mr. Caplin: Performance targets for the department were agreed as part of Spending Review 2002. The monitoring and measurement of PSA targets forms part of departmental performance management. Performance management is an integral part of the day to day running of the Department, and covers a wide range of data for internal management purposes in addition to that required for PSA monitoring. Monitoring and measuring performance is therefore undertaken by a wide variety of staff at all levels of the organisation, and it is not possible to separate out discrete costs. The Department's top level performance management system, including reports against PSA targets, is co-ordinated by a dedicated section of five civilian and military personnel within the Directorate of Performance and Analysis in the Ministry of Defence Head Office.

Personal Injuries Scheme

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received about the Personal Injuries (Civilians) Amendment Scheme. [107782]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Service Accommodation

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money has been spent upgrading and building accommodation for the junior ranks of the (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) Royal Air Force in each of the last three years; what is to be provided in the forward programme; and if he will make a statement. Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Submarines

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many SSNs would be capable of continuous deployment in cycles based on an SSN fleet of (a) four, (b) five and (c) six such boats. [139595]

Mr. Ingram: The number of Royal Navy attack submarines required to maintain a continuous deployment depends on the nature of the deployment and the operational circumstances pertaining at the time. In the future, the new Astute class will bring improved capability and increased availability for Royal Navy SSN deployments.

Surplus Arms Stores (Developing Countries)

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effects on the security of British soldiers deployed overseas of measures to reduce surplus arms stores in developing countries. [131129]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what remit relating to sustainable development is required by his Department's (a) executive agencies, (b) advisory non-departmental bodies, (c) executive non-departmental bodies, (d) tribunals, (e) public corporations and (f) other bodies. [116673]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which United Kingdom commitments arising from the World Summit on Sustainable Development (a) have been incorporated into the Department's existing delivery plan for Service Delivery Agreements and (b) will be incorporated in its delivery plan for Service Delivery Agreements in advance of the 2004 Spending Review. [113881]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Territorial Army

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Territorial Army soldiers are (a) in the Gulf and (b) overseas; and how many are preparing for deployment in the Gulf. [138952]

Mr. Caplin: As at 13 November 2003, 1,780 members of the Territorial Army (TA) are currently serving in the Gulf, with a further 295 serving elsewhere overseas. 580 members of the TA are currently preparing to deploy to the Gulf, although many of these individuals will not arrive in theatre until after the Christmas period.

Training Establishments

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate has been made by principal personnel officers of the resources needed to bring medical facilities at training establishments up to required minimum standards; and how many and what percentage of establishments fall below those standards. [112628]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Transport Aircraft

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many transport aircraft, and of what type, are used by the armed forces. [98294]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his expenditure plans are for transport aircraft in the next five years. [98295]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Voluntary Organisations

Bank Accounts (Post Offices)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of basic bank accounts available are accessible at post offices; and of those, what proportion offer balance inquiries services at post offices. [140095]

Mr. Timms: These are matters that fall within the day-to-day responsibility of Post Office Ltd. and I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Alstom Transport UK

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how often and on what dates during the last year she has met Mr. Paul Barron, Vice President of Alstom Transport UK, to discuss the future of the Alstom factory at Crashwood Heath in Birmingham; and what the outcome of these discussions was. [139301]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 18 November 2003]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry met Paul Barron on 6 May 2003 to discuss Alstom's general restructuring plans and their impact on the company's operations in the UK, including Washwood Heath. Details of discussions between Ministers and company representatives must, for commercial reasons, remain confidential under Exemption 13—Third Party's Commercial confidences, of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, but Mr. Barron stressed the need for the company to undertake global restructuring in order to address mounting debts and ensure a viable future. The Secretary of State has had discussions with Mr. Barron on a number of other occasions and these were detailed in her letter to you of 1 September 2003.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the number of experiments on animals has increased since 1997; what the average number of animals used has been in each year since 1997; and what plans she has to reduce the number of animals used in experimentation. [136143]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to my hon Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many companies in the UK provide animals for use in experimentation; whether they receive Government assistance; and what regulations control to whom they supply. [136145]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

The breeding and supply of animals for use in experimental or other scientific procedures in the United Kingdom is regulated under section 7 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. There are currently five commercial establishments licensed under the 1986 Act primarily concerned with the breeding and supply of animals for use in experimentation. In addition to these, 140 establishments designated under the 1986 Act also breed animals for use in experiments.

Breeding and supplying establishments are only licensed if the Secretary of State is satisfied that they provide appropriate standards of care and accommodation as set out in the Code of Practice for the Housing and Care of Animals in Designated Breeding and Supplying Establishments presented to Parliament in 1995 under section 21 of the 1986 Act. A supplement to the code of practice dealing with the housing and care of ferrets and gerbils was published separately in 2001.

None of the licensed breeding and supplying establishments, nor any other establishments licensed under the provisions of the 1986 Act, receive financial assistance from the Home Office nor, as far as available records show, from any other Government Department.

The 1986 Act does not regulate the sale of animals. However, unless specifically exempted by the Secretary of State, species listed in Schedule 2 of the Act, including mice, rats, cats, dogs and primates, may only be obtained from designated breeding and supplying establishments for use in programmes of work licensed under the 1986 Act.

Arms Exports

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what powers she has to enforce the conditions contained in end-user control certificates; and what action she can take in case of breach of those conditions. [138618]

Mr. MacShane: I have been asked to reply.

The Government refuses export licences where there is a clear risk that the goods will be used in contravention of the consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria.

The Government has no legal power to enforce conditions contained in end-user certificates. We would, however, take any misuse of equipment into account when assessing future export licence applications for the end-users in question. In addition, the Government has the power to revoke licences for exports to purchasers of concern, which would prevent any outstanding arms exports to that purchaser from leaving the United Kingdom. It could also cancel any open licences for exports to that destination country, obliging exporters to apply for individual licences for each export, or refuse to accept any assurances given by a country about the end-use of an export.

We may liase with the Government in the country concerned, encouraging them to control or sanction the purchasers in question. If the end-user were a Government, we would have a wide range of foreign policy tools at our disposal.

Bechtel

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel for agencies responsible to her Department in each year since 1997.

stating in each case (a) the nature of the work, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the duration of the contract; and if she will make a statement. [138063]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 12 November 2003]: I have asked each of the Chief Executives of my Department to reply.

Letter from Claire Clancy to Malcolm Bruce, dated 19 November 2003:

I am responding to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on behalf of Companies House, which is an Executive Agency of the DTI.

I can confirm from our records that Companies House has not contracted any work to Bechtel since 1999. Our records for 1997–1998 have been archived, and to check this period would incur a disproportionate cost. Due to the nature of Bechtel's work, however, I am confident they were not contracted by Companies House to carry out any work during this period.

Letter from Martin Wyn Griffith to Malcolm Bruce, dated 19 November 2003:

I am replying on behalf of the Small Business Service (SBS), to the above question addressed to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. It concerns contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel, in each year since 1977.

SBS only commenced operations as an Agency of the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) on 1 April 2000. Since that date, SBS has not engaged the services of Bechtel.

Letter from Desmond Flynn to Malcolm Bruce, dated 19 November 2003:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply to you directly on behalf of The Insolvency Service in of respect to your question (2002/4638) asking for a list of contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel for agencies responsible to the Office in each year since 1997, stating in ease case (a) the nature of the work, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the duration of the contract.

I can confirm that The Insolvency Service has had no dealings with Bechtel during this time.

Letter from Iain MacGregor to Malcolm Bruce, dated 19 November 2003:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory (NWML) to your question asking her if she will list the contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel for agencies responsible to her Department in each year since 1997, stating in each case (a) the nature of the work, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the duration of the contract; and if she will make a statement.

Bechtel has not carried out any contracts for consultancy or other work for National Weights and Measures Laboratory.

Letter from Kevin Woodrow to Malcolm Bruce, dated 19 November 2003:

In the absence of Alison Brimelow, Chief Executive, I am replying to this parliamentary question, tabled on 7 November 2003, about contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel for each year since 1997.

The Patent Office has had no contracts for consultancy or other work with Bechtel during this period.

Letter from Roger Heathcote to Malcolm Bruce, dated 19 November 2003:

You asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to list contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel for agencies responsible to her Department in each year since 1997. I have been asked to reply on behalf of the Employment Tribunals Service (ETS), which is an Agency of the DTI.

I can confirm that the ETS has had no contracts with Bechtel over the period in question.

Letter from David Smith to Malcolm Bruce, dated 19 November 2003:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the Radiocommunications Agency to your Parliamentary Question about contracts with Bechtel.

The Agency has no record of contracting with Bechtel since 1997.

Broadband

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Government is taking to ensure that broadband is available throughout the Glasgow, Pollok constituency at the earliest possible date. [139407]

Mr. Timms: BT has recently informed the Department that ADSL has been enabled to all exchanges throughout the Glasgow, Pollok constituency. They are currently reviewing areas where not everybody will be able to receive an ADSL service, as they may live too far from the exchange and these will be published on their website shortly. BT announced on 17 November 2003 that they have set trigger levels for 2,300 more exchanges, (http://www.bt.com/broadband/). Broadband services are increasingly being made available via a range of alternative technologies across Scotland, for example, cable, one-way and two-way broadband satellite, fixed wireless and local wireless networks. The Scottish Executive is committed to extension of broadband to every area in Scotland. They offer a Broadband Business Incentive grant to encourage broadband take-up and information is available from Scottish Enterprise's website: http://www.scottish-enterprise.com/sedotcom_home/services-to-business/broadband.htm

Climate Change

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the contribution of the Carbon Trust to progress on meeting climate change targets. [134948]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

The Carbon Trust was launched in 2001 as part of the Climate Change Programme. A formal review of the Climate Change Programme is planned for 2004 that will include an assessment of the contribution of the Carbon Trust towards climate change targets.

The Carbon Trust has undertaken an impact assessment of their programmes as part of their annual review which is available via their website www.thecarbontrust.co.uk.

Coal Miners' Compensation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps her Department is taking to ensure that all eligible compensation claims for those suffering from coal-related diseases are submitted before March 2004. [140046]

Nigel Griffiths: Following Lord Justice Turner's agreement to a cut-off date of 31 March 2003 for submitting respiratory disease claims under the Claims Handling Agreement, the Department implemented a comprehensive communication plan to ensure that the date was communicated as widely and expeditiously as possible.

We have written to all widows who receive pensions under the Mineworkers Pension Scheme.

Under the plan we have carried out two comprehensive newspaper advertising campaigns and will carry out a further two such campaigns before the cut-off date. The Department's advert has also been carried in a number of coal industry publications and the Department's own "Compensation for Miners" newsletter.

The budget for this is £100,583.

References to the cut-off date are also carried on both of the Department's websites—www.dti.gov.uk/coalhealth and www.coalclaims.com.

Coal Mining

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the future of the coal mining industry in the UK. [140047]

Mr. Timms: The coal mining industry continues to make an important contribution to the economy, supplying around 50 per cent. of the country's total coal needs and some 60 per cent. of its coal-fired electricity generation feedstock. The Government are working to secure a future for viable deep and opencast mines. In June 2003, they launched Coal Investment Aid, which has a budget of up to £60 million for allocation of over the next three years to provide up to 30 per cent. support for eligible mining investment projects. An announcement about awards in response to first period applications for Coal Investment Aid is expected soon.

Electricity

Mr. Beard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average balance between supply and demand of electricity was at (a) peak and (b) off-peak times last winter; what she estimates the balance is likely to be in (i) five years time and (ii) 10 years time; and what her forecasts are of (A) demand and (B) the projected investment plans of the industry over those periods. [138875]

Mr. Timms: According to figures published in the DTI Digest of UK Energy Statistics, the maximum simultaneous electricity load met during the winter of 2002–03 was 61,717 MW. This represented 87.6 per cent. of the generating capacity owned by major power producers in the UK, although this figure would fall to 85.2 per cent. if the interconnector with France were included. Average load across the whole winter period (October to March) was approximately 49,000 MW.

Provisional estimates arising from work to update the DTI energy projections in Energy Paper 68 indicate that electricity demand is likely to grow by around 1.25 per cent. per annum over the next decade. On this basis, demand in five years time would be around 6 per cent. above current levels and demand in 10 years around 13 per cent. above current levels.

Future investment by the industry, and hence the future balance between supply and demand, is a commercial matter for electricity market participants. The UK market provides strong financial incentives for electricity suppliers to contract for sufficient power to meet their customers' needs and for generators to deliver the power they have contracted to provide.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much electricity generating capacity was available in the United Kingdom in each year since 1997, listing the contribution made by (a) coal, (b) gas, (c) nuclear power, (d) oil, (e) imports and (f) others; and what projections she has made of available generating capacity from each of these in the United Kingdom in each year to 2020. [139816]

Mr. Timms: Figures for the electricity generating capacity available in the United Kingdom in each year since 1997 are published in Table 5.7, Plant Capacity, of the Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics 2002–03. Copies of this publication are available in the Library of the House.

The latest full published projections of available generating capacity in the United Kingdom up to 2020 are published in Annex G, ESI Capacity, of Energy Projections for the UK, Energy Paper 68. This publication is also available in the Library of the House. Work to update these projections is currently underway for completion around March 2004. The latest projections, representing work in progress, are available on the DTI web site (www.dti.gov.uk/energy/sepn/projections.pdf).

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment she has made of the benefits of transmitting energy underground. [134127]

Mr. Timms: None. It is recognised that compared with overhead lines, there are potential benefits of underground transmission. However, benefits must always be weighed against cost, which at 400,000 volts in particular, is significantly higher per kilometre than an overhead line.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much spare generating capacity there is in the United Kingdom; and how much spare capacity her Department deems to be a sufficient safety net to safeguard electricity supplies for winter 2003–04. [139814]

Mr. Timms: The October 2003 Update to the National Grid Company (NGC) Seven Year Statement projects a plant margin of 19.3 per cent. for England and Wales for the winter 2003–04. By way of comparison, the projected plant margin for the winter of 2002–03 in NGC's October 2002 Update was 17.4 per cent. NGC project that peak demand under average cold spell (ACS) conditions this winter would be 55,900 MW and that the registered capacity of generating stations, including interconnectors with France and Scotland, would be 66,697 MW. The figures do not include additional reserves that NGC has recently contracted for and nor do they allow for any further return of mothballed plant.

The electricity market provides electricity suppliers and generators with strong financial incentives to deliver the power they have contracted to provide. It is not the Government's role to specify how market participants should meet their contracted obligations.

The Department of Trade and Industry, together with Ofgem, monitors the security of gas and electricity supplies through the Joint Energy Security of Supply Working Group (JESS). The latest report from JESS was published on the Department's web site (www.dti.gov.uk/energy/jess/jessreport3.pdf) on 12 November and copies will be placed in the library of the House when available.

Employment Rights

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will make an announcement regarding section 23 of the Employment Relations Act 1999 in relation to employment rights for clergy. [139856]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government hopes to publish a response to the DTI Review of Employment Status in relation to statutory employment rights around the turn of the year.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she expects to announce the results of her Department's consultation on employment rights for atypical workers, with special reference to clergy. [139939]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government hope to publish a response to the DTI Review of Employment Status in relation to statutory employment rights around the turn of the year.

Estate Agents

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many claims against estate agents have been taken to the civil courts; how many have been upheld; and how much financial compensation has been awarded in each year since 1997. [139671]

Mr. Sutcliffe: This information is not collected by the Department.

Ms Hewitt: The information is as follows:

(a) The last three meetings of the EU Accounting Directives Contact Committee took place on 12–13 December 2001, 14 October 2002 and 27 March 2003. The Contact Committee discussed the Accounting Directives, including the Modernisation of the Accounting Directives, the Fair Value Directive and the interaction of national law and the European Regulation on International Accounting Standards.

(b) During the Danish presidency there was a meeting of the Advisory Committee on Public Procurement in Brussels on 9 December 2002.

The (substantive) items on the agenda were: the adoption of new rules of procedure, recent case law, public private partnerships, local public services, statistics and the related subject of indicators, forthcoming negotiations on coverage under the WTO GPA review and the establishment of a Working Group on e-procurement.

During the Greek presidency there were two meetings of the Advisory Committee on Public Procurement in Brussels on 11 March and 18 June 2003.

On 11 March the (substantive) agenda items were: public private partnerships, exchange of views on the review of the remedies directives, recent case law, presentation of and discussion of SOLVIT and the Public Procurement Network (PPN), qualification of construction firms, statistics and indicators, WTO procurement developments, the Community Procurement Vocabulary (CPV) and standard forms.

On 18 June the (substantive) agenda items were: information on the Internal Market Strategy, discussion on the replies to a questionnaire on the review of the remedies directives, progress on the legislative package, information on the PPN, presentation and discussion of an ongoing Commission study on SME access to public procurement contracts, public procurement in the field of defence, WTO procurement developments, proposal for a CPV amending regulation, standard forms and statistics.

(c) No meeting of the EU Committee on Directives relating to Textile Names and labelling took place during the Danish and Greek presidencies.

There was no representative from the Scottish Executive at these meetings. The UK is represented by officials from the Department of Trade and Industry who represent all of the UK.

With regard to preparatory meetings, under "Exemption 2: Internal discussion and advice, of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information", the Government do not release details of such meetings.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the (a) EU Committee for the harmonisation of credit insurance provisions for transactions with medium and long-term cover, (b) EU Advisory Committee on standardisation in the field of information technology, (c) EU Committee on general authorisations and individual licences in the field of telecommunications services and (d) the EU Advisory Committee on restrictive practices and dominant positions in the transport industry met during the Danish and Greek presidencies; and if she will make a statement. [132768]

Ms Hewitt: The information is as follows:

(a) There were no meetings of the EU Committee for the harmonisation of credit insurance provisions for transactions with medium and long terms cover in 2002–03, during the period corresponding to the Danish and Greek presidencies of the council.

This Committee would only be involved in the case of an unresolved disagreement as to the status of a debtor.

There were no such disagreements in 2002–03 so the committee was not convened.

(b) I believe that the hon. Member is referring to the Senior Officials Group on Information Technology Standardisation, which has not met since 1999.

(c) The EU Committee on general authorisations and individual licences in the field of telecommunications services (Licensing Committee) did not meet during the period in question. Its work was taken over in October 2002 by the Communications Committee (COCOM), which met seven times during the period in question. Agenda items included progress towards implementation of the new regulatory package; measures to encourage new market entrants, to promote the deployment of broadband and to discourage unsolicited commercial e-mail; adoption of common technical standards; the appointment of a registry to run the new "EU" top level domain internet address.

(d) The Advisory Committee on restrictive practices and dominant positions in the transport industry is the body through which the European Commission carries out its duty to consult member states on decisions and amendments to EC competition law in the field of transport which it proposes to adopt. The Committee met once in Brussels in the period in question: in September 2002, it discussed a revision to the Trans-Atlantic Conference Agreement on liner shipping conferences.

When appropriate UK officials consult widely and ensure that the views of the devolved administrations, including the Scottish Parliament are fully reflected at Committee meetings.

With regard to preparatory meetings, under "Exemption 2: Internal discussion and advice, of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information", the Government does not release details of such meetings.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the (a) EU Committee for the adaptation to technical progress of directives on the removal of technical barriers to trade in the sector of electric materials used in an explosive atmosphere, (b) EU Committee on the directives on names and labelling of textile products, (c) EU Committee for the adaptation to technical progress of directives on the removal of technical barriers to trade in the sector of measuring instruments and methods of metrological control, (d) EU Advisory Committee on telecommunications procurement and (e) EU Committee on the implementation of open network provision met during the Danish and Greek presidencies; and if she will make a statement. [132770]

Ms Hewitt: The information is as follows:

(a) I believe that the hon. Member is referring to Committees set up under "Old Approach" Directives 79/196/EEC, and 82/130/EEC.Adaptation to technical progress could only be made to these directives by amending directives incorporating updated harmonised standards. Directives 94/26/EC and 97/53/EC amended Directive 79/196/EEC and Directive 98/9/EC amended Directive 82/130 EEC.

All these Directives were repealed on 30 June 2003 and superseded by "New Approach" Directive, 94/9/EC on the approximation of laws of the member states concerning Equipment and Protective Systems Intended for Use in Potentially Explosive Atmospheres, (ATEX). This Directive is concerned with a wider range of ignition risks arising from electrical and mechanical equipment and dusts. It is my belief that there have been no meetings in respect of adapting to technical progress directives , since 1998.

(b) No meeting of the EU Committee on Directives relating to Textile Names and labelling took place during the Danish and Greek presidencies.

(c) No such EU Committee is currently active (which was also the position during both the Danish and Greek presidencies).

(d) This Committee did not meet under the Danish or Greek presidencies.

(e) The EU Committee on the implementation of open network provision (ONP) met once during the period in question, on 10 July 2002. Its work was taken over in October 2002 by the Communications Committee (COCOM), which met seven times during the period in question. Agenda items included progress towards implementation of the new regulatory package; measures to encourage new market entrants, to promote the deployment of broadband and to discourage unsolicited commercial e-mail; adoption of common technical standards; the appointment of a registry to run the new ".eu" top level domain internet address.

UK officials consult widely and ensure that the views of the devolved Administrations, including the Scottish Executive are fully reflected at Committee meetings.

With regard to preparatory meetings, under "Exemption 2: Internal discussion and advice, of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information", the Government do not release details of such meetings

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the dates of meetings of (a) the EU Committee on the specific programme for research, technological development and demonstration on promotion of innovation and participation of SMEs and (b) the EU Coordination Group to promote uniformity of application of the general system for the recognition of higher education diplomas (first general system) during the Danish and Greek presidencies; what items were on each agenda; which representative of the Scottish Executive was present on each occasion; what preparatory meetings were held for each meeting; which officials were present at each preparatory meeting; and if she will make a statement. [132797]

Ms Hewitt: The information is as follows:

(a) With the advent of the Sixth Framework Programme (FP6), which was launched in December 2002, the committee system was restructured to reflect the format of the new programme. Innovation issues are now considered by the Research and Innovation committee and SME issues are covered by the horizontal committees on structuring the European Research Area and integrating and strengthening the European Research Area.

The FP5 Innovation & SMEs committee met on two occasions during the Danish Presidency, on 10 July and 17 October 2002.

During these meetings, the opinion of the committee was sought on the first batch of innovation projects accepted for funding and on the second batch of proposals for supporting the setting up and development of innovative firms. There was also discussion on a range of other issues including:

tender for the CORDIS database contract and the future of the service; the results of an analysis of Technology Transfer and Validation projects under Framework Programmes four;

the Innovation Trend chart;

2001 Innovation and SME Monitoring report; and the contracts for two Innovation Relay Centres.

The FP6 Research and Innovation Committee met on three occasions during the Danish Presidency: on 29 October, 19 November and 4 December 2002.

During these meetings, there was discussion on:

introduction to the Work Programmes of the Specific Programme 'Structuring the European Research Area'; common criteria for evaluating proposals and common rules of procedure for the sub-programme committees; and the draft Work Programme for the Research and Innovation sub-programme.

There were no meetings of this committee under the Greek Presidency. Each member state is permitted to send no more than one delegate to the committee. However, UK officials consult widely to ensure that the views of the Devolved Administrations, including the Scottish Executive, are fully reflected at committee meetings.

The horizontal committees on structuring the European Research Area and integrating and strengthening the European Research Area met on three occasions during the Greek Presidency: on 4 March, 21 May and 9 July 2003. These covered the following SME issues:

information on the first call for collective research proposals;

information on SME participation in first calls of thematic priorities; information on the results of the first deadline for co-operative research; and information and discussion on the planning of co-operative research calls in 2004.

The European Commission's meetings of the SME and Innovation Programme Committee were attended by DTI officials. The agendas and minutes of these meetings are circulated to the Devolved Administrations, including the Scottish Executive, and any views expressed by them are reflected at committee meetings.

With regard to preparatory meetings, under Exemption2: internal discussion and advice, of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, the Government do not release details of such meetings.

(b) This Committee falls within the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the dates of meetings of (a) the EU Telematics between Administrations Committee (TAC), (b) the EU Advisory Committee on State Aid for the application of Articles 92 and 93 of the EC Treaty to certain categories of horizontal State Aid (exemption) and (c) the EU Advisory Committee on State Aid on the arrangements for applying Article 93 of the EC Treaty (procedure) during the Danish and Greek presidencies; what items were on each agenda; what representative of the Scottish Executive was present on each occasion; what preparatory meetings were held for each meeting; which officials were present at each preparatory meeting; and if she will make a statement. [132822]

Ms Hewitt: The information is as follows:

(a) There were three TAC meetings under the Danish presidency. Agenda items included included discussion on the IDA 2002 Work Programme; the future of IDA and eEurope; and IDA II mid-term evaluation, and the IDA Work Programmes for 2002 and 2003.

There were five TAC meetings under the Greek presidency. Agenda items included the strategy for implementing the portal of the EU administration, the IDA Work Programme and eEurope, the 2003 IDA Work Programme, a Communication on Interoperability and Global Implementation Plans and Preparatory Reports for a number of projects.

(b) The EU Advisory Committee on State Aid for the application of Article 92 and 93 of the EC Treaty to certain categories of horizontal State Aid (exemption) met once during the Danish and Greek presidencies. The meeting was held on 24 July 2002 and the sole item on the agenda was discussion of Commission proposals for a Block Exemption for State aid for employment.

The EU Advisory Committee on State Aid on the arrangements for applying Article 93 of the EC Treaty (procedure) met twice during the Danish and Greek presidencies. The meetings were held on 17 December 2002 when the sole item on the agenda was discussion of informal Commission proposals on reform of State aid procedures and on 18 December 2002 when the sole item on the agenda was discussion of Commission proposals on Services of General Economic Interest.

The Department consults widely on the topics for discussion at these meetings and the views of the devolved Administrations, including the Scottish Executive are fully reflected at Committee meetings.

With regard to preparatory meetings, under "Exemption 2: Internal advice and discussion, of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information", the Government do not release details of such meetings.

Export Controls

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will discuss with (a) the Foreign Secretary, (b) the Secretary of State for International Development, (c) the Secretary of State for Defence and (d) the European Commission the allegations made by the hon. Member for Newcastle-under-Lyme in the (i) debate on Export Controls on 6 November and (ii) debate on the Export Control Bill on 8 November 2001 in relation to arms supplies to Zimbabwe and the Democratic Republic of Congo; and if she will take steps to investigate the allegations. [138668]

Nigel Griffiths: Investigations into alleged breaches of arms embargoes and Sanctions regimes is a matter for HM Customs and Excise.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) pursuant to the answer of 28 April 2003, Official Report, columns 104–05W, on the Export Control Act 2002, what (a) controls and (b) sanctions would apply under (A) orders made under the Export Control Act 2002 coming into force on 1 May 2004 and (B) European Union measures to an individual with United Kingdom residence rights and business interests but joint Zimbabwean and Dutch nationality who supplied arms or military supplies to Zimbabwe through (i) United Kingdom incorporated companies and (ii) Zimbabwe incorporated companies, which are associated with or controlled by her; [138696]

(2) in what circumstances an individual dealing in arms who has United Kingdom residence rights but who does not hold a United Kingdom passport would be subject to the controls and sanctions of the orders due to come into force on 1 May 2004 under the Export Control Act 2002; [138697]

(3) in what circumstances United Kingdom companies (a) controlled by and (b) associated with an individual with United Kingdom residence rights but joint Zimbabwean and Dutch nationality which are dealing in arms to Zimbabwe would be subject to restrictions and sanctions contained in the orders coming into force on 1st May 2004 under the Export Control Act 2002; [138698]

(4) in what circumstances an individual dealing in arms to Zimbabwe who has United Kingdom residence rights but holds joint Zimbabwean and Dutch nationality would be subject to the controls contained in the orders which will come into force on 1 May 2004 under the Export Control Act 2002; [138699]

(5) whether the Export Control Act 2002 and the orders due to come into force on 1 May 2004 will apply to the activities of UK-based arms dealers who have UK residence rights but are not UK passport holders and who supply arms to Zimbabwe through companies incorporated and based overseas. [138700]

Nigel Griffiths: The Trade in Goods (Control) Order prohibits trade in specified military equipment between countries outside the UK unless the Secretary of State grants a licence. In the case of long-range missiles, specially designed components and equipment used in torture, the controls will apply to any trading activities done in the UK and also to the activities of UK persons anywhere in the world. For trade in any other equipment on the UK Military List to non-embargoed destinations, the controls will apply where any part of the trading activity takes place in the UK. The maximum penalty under this Order, for trading without a licence, is a fine for any amount or imprisonment for a term not exceeding 10 years, or both.

A "UK person" is defined as a UK national, a Scottish Partnership, or a body incorporated under the law of any part of the UK. Controls on trade from a country outside the UK to an embargoed destination will be introduced by a separate Order to be made under Section 4 of the Export Control Act 2002. Trade activities carried out in the UK or by a UK person anywhere in the world are prohibited without a licence. The relevant embargoed destinations will be those subject to non-binding United Nations Sanctions, and European Union, Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE), and UK national, embargoes. The maximum penalty under these Orders, for promoting the supply or delivery of any relevant goods to the embargoed destination without a licence, will be a fine for any amount or imprisonment for a term not exceeding 10 years, or both.

Zimbabwe is subject to both EU and national embargoes. On 18 February 2002 the Council of the European Union agreed a range of targeted sanctions against Zimbabwe (Council Common Position 2002/145/CFSP), including an embargo on the sale or supply of arms by nationals of member states and from the territory of member states, a ban on the supply of training or assistance related to the provision, manufacture, maintenance or use of arms, and a ban on the sale or supply of certain equipment which might be used for internal repression. The European Council subsequently adopted Council Regulation (EC) 310/2002 implementing certain measures of the Common Position, including the ban on the sale or supply of equipment for internal repression and technical assistance related to arms.

The Zimbabwe (Sale, Supply, Export and Shipment of Equipment) (Penalties and Licences) Regulation 2002 (SI 2002/868) gives effect to EU Regulation 310/2002. The maximum penalty under the UK Regulation, for promoting the sale, supply or shipment of equipment which might be used for internal repression or the provision of relevant technical assistance to Zimbabwe without a licence, is a fine, imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or both. Presently, under the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, the maximum penalty for the export of controlled goods from the UK to Zimbabwe without a valid export licence is a fine or imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years, or both. This is to be increased to 10 years imprisonment from 1 May 2004 under the Trade in Good (Control) Order.

A licence would be required under the new trade controls by a UK person anywhere in the world or any person acting in the UK who negotiated or arranged a contract with an overseas partner which he or she knew or had reason to believe would result in the movement of controlled goods from an overseas country to an embargoed destination. This would include trade to a third country where he or she knew or had reason to suppose that the goods were ultimately destined for an embargoed destination. The controls would apply to trading activity done from the UK regardless of whether it was undertaken through UK or foreign registered companies.

Fair Trade

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action her Department is taking to promote fair trade accreditation at UK universities. [138387]

Nigel Griffiths: I refer to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on 18 November 2003, Official Report, columns 544–45W.

Fireworks

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action she is taking to prevent misuse of fireworks. [117395]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

I apologise for the delay in replying.

The Police and Criminal Justice Act 2001 introduced fixed penalty notices for disorder—letting-off of fireworks in a public place is one of the offences covered by the scheme. In addition the Department for Trade and Industry introduced a voluntary agreement with the firework industry from January 2003 preventing the supply of airbombs. The Government also supported the Private Member's Bill introduced by my hon. Friend the Member for Hamilton, South (Mr. Tynan), which received royal assent on the 18 September and which will allow more effective controls on fireworks.

Insolvency

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) company insolvencies and (b) individual insolvencies there were in each quarter since 1997. [139815]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The figures requested are supplied in the following table.

Figures on individual and company insolvencies are available from the DTI's quarterly insolvency press release. This can also be found on the website at www.dti.gov.uk/sd/insolv

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much revenue has been generated from fees charged by the Insolvency Service in respect of (a) company winding-up petitions, (b) creditors' petitions and (c) debtor's petitions in each year since 1997. [139819]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Due to the nature of the current Insolvency Fees structure it is not possible to disaggregate the amount of fees recovered between (a) company winding-up petitions, (b) creditors' petitions and (c) debtor's petitions.

Total fees recovered for each year since 1997 for Insolvency fee earning activities were:

	Amount (£000)
1997–98	35,155
1998–99	37,892
1999–2000	38,197
2000–01	41,777
2001–02	44,859

Manufacturing Advisory Service

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many inquiries about the Manufacturing Advisory Service have been made by firms in (a) York unitary authority and (b) Yorkshire; [135939]

(2) how many firms in (a) York unitary authority and (b) Yorkshire have taken up services offered by the Manufacturing Advisory Service; [135940]

(3) how many training events have been held by the Manufacturing Advisory Service in Yorkshire. [135941]

Jacqui Smith: The Manufacturing Advisory Service (Yorkshire and Humber) has, since its launch in May 2002 to 17 November 2003, dealt with (a) 110 inquiries from firms in the York unitary authority area; and, (b) 2,563 inquiries from firms in Yorkshire and The Humber.

In total, services offered by Manufacturing Advisory Service (Yorkshire and Humber) have been taken up by (a) 23 firms from the York unitary authority area; and (b) 547 firms in Yorkshire and The Humber.

The Manufacturing Advisory Service (Yorkshire and Humber) has held 16 training events.

Overall, the Manufacturing Advisory Service (Yorkshire and Humber) has so far delivered a total added value of 4.5 £million to firms in the region.

Market Research

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much her Department spent on (a) opinion polling and (b) market research in the last financial year; and if she will make a statement. [139983]

Ms Hewitt: The department does not centrally collect the information sought at the required level of detail and to provide it would entail disproportionate cost.

Statistical surveys to businesses and local authorities conducted by the Department and its agencies are monitored centrally to facilitate control of compliance costs to business and departmental expenditure on survey activity. It is not possible, however, to determine with any degree of accuracy which surveys fall into the categories of market and opinion research, or which contain an element of these. The answer would incur disproportionate cost because of the need to ask all Directorates in DTI to attempt to provide details of each survey and piece of research commissioned.

Mobile Phone Masts

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the number of third generation mobile telephone masts that will be required in Surrey. [136281]

Mr. Timms: It is not possible to give a reliable estimate of the number of new masts that will be needed to fulfil the obligations of the 3G licensees, whether in total or by area. The number of masts required in an area will be affected by the level of consumer demand for 3G services, by commercial decisions related to the design of the networks, by the physical topography and by the requirements of planning authorities.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will issue guidance to mobile phone companies urging them to cancel mobile phone SIM cards when customers cancel contracts. [138609]

Mr. Timms: This is a matter for the mobile phone operating companies and should involve no liability for customers.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has received regarding (a) fraud and (b) market abuse in the pre-paid mobile telephone card market; and what action she is taking. [140019]

Mr. Timms: No representations have been received regarding either fraud or market abuse in the pre-paid mobile phone card market.

There are no plans to take any action with regard to the pre-paid mobile telephone card market.

NTL Complaints

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints Oftel received about NTL in the last 12 months; what action Oftel has taken in response to complaints; and when she next plans to meet the Chief Executive of NTL. [139805]

Mr. Timms: Between 1 November 2002 and 17 November 2003 Oftel received 5,202 complaints about NTL. In line with Oftel's policy of allowing telecommunications companies the opportunity to resolve complaints in the first instance, about 80 per cent. of the complaints were devolved to NTL to resolve. The remainder were handled by Oftel. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has no immediate plans to meet the Chief Executive of NTL.

Oil and Gas Industry

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the impact on the control of the UK's oil and gas industries of the draft European Constitution; and if she will make a statement. [139420]

Mr. Timms: My Department has made an assessment of the potential impact of the draft Constitution on the Department's powers to regulate recovery of hydrocarbons from the UK Continental Shelf. This assessment notes that Article III-157 of the draft EU Constitutional Treaty would give the EU competence in energy matters, including natural resources, with voting by qualified majority. Also that Article III-130(2)(c) provides for unanimity on "measures significantly affecting a Member State's choice between different energy sources and the general structure of its energy supply". Under the Treaty establishing the European Community, there is already Union activity in energy matters and we believe there is a strong case for making the legal base for policy in this area more transparent. However, the UK Government would not agree to any proposal that was inconsistent with UK energy interests.

Post Office Closures

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many urban post offices in Scotland have been (a) proposed and (b) approved for closure since the inception of the Network Reinvention Scheme. [139024]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 17 November 2003]: I understand that since March 2000 the company has recorded details of post office closures, including those under the urban reinvention programme, which commenced in late 2002, on the basis of Government Region and country. It does not record details of proposals on this basis. In Scotland, there have been 28 closures under the urban reinvention programme to the end of September 2003, the latest quarter for which figures are currently available.

Post Offices (Benefit Payments)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the volume of transactions across post office counters was (a) in total, (b) for child benefit payments, (c) for pensions payments, (d) for Veterans Agency pensions and (e) for Jobcentre Plus in the last year for which figures are available. [139672]

Mr. Timms: These are matters that fall within the day-to-day responsibility of Post Office Ltd. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Printer Cartridges

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will place in the Library copies of correspondence between her Department and the European Commission concerning the status of printer cartridges within the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) Directive. [139197]

Mr. Timms: There has been no written correspondence on this subject between the Government and the Commission.

Radio Frequency Identifier Devices

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with retailers about the use of radio frequency identifier devices. [140030]

Mr. Timms: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has not met with retailers specifically to discuss the use of radio frequency identification (RFID) devices.

DTI supports wider and innovative use of RFID as a business technology that can bring significant productivity improvements, reduce the opportunity for crime and enhance customer service. Demonstrator projects have been funded under the Basic Technologies and Next Wave programmes investigating RFID applications in retail, supply chain, construction and transport sectors.

DTI also seeks to identify and spread best practice, and better inform consideration of, RFID technologies by working with the Auto-Identification Manufacturers trade association (AIM UK) and sector specific fora such as the British Retail Consortium, the Buildings Research Establishment and the Institute of Logistics and Transport.

Red Tape

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures she is taking to reduce the administrative burden on small businesses. [139901]

Nigel Griffiths: I can confirm today that the small company audit exemption threshold will be raised to the EU maximum of £5.6 million. This will mean 69,000 companies will be added to the 822,000 already able to make their own decision about whether to have their accounts audited. This is expected to save companies at least £94 million a year.

The recent OECD review of EU countries shows the UK has almost the lowest administration cost and few regulations for entrepreneurs than any other EU country.

We are seeking further improvements through Regulatory Impact Assessments, 'Think Small First' and 'Small business Europe', which promotes better regulation.

Royal Mail Group

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list foreign acquisitions by the Royal Mail Group since May 1997; what the cost of the acquisition was in each case; what their contribution to the Royal Mail Group's profit and loss account was in the most recent period for which figures are available; which acquisitions have since been divested from Royal Mail; and what the net contribution to the Royal Mail Group was in such cases. [139854]

Mr. Timms: Royal Mail's overseas investments are the responsibility of the Royal Mail Board. I have therefore asked the Deputy Chairman to reply direct to my hon. Friend.

Small Business Council

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the (a) cost and (b) remit of the Small Business Council was in 2002–03; what use has been made of the council by businesses in Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland; and if she will make a statement. [139570]

Nigel Griffiths: The cost of the Service in 2002–03 in millions was £349 million, which includes programme budgets.

Information about the use of the service in the Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East constituency is not collected separately. In the Middlesbrough area the Tees Valley Business Link has helped 465 businesses to start up and has provided advice and guidance to 1,151 businesses during 2002–03. Further information is available from Tees Valley Business Link.

The remit of the Small Business Service is to help build an enterprise society in which small firms of all kinds thrive and achieve their potential, with an increase in the number of people considering going into business, an improvement in the overall productivity of small firms, and more enterprise in disadvantaged communities.

The SBS Annual Report (HC 807) placed in the Libraries of the House on 14 July 2003 gives an overview of national progress, costs and impact.

Small Loans Guarantee Fund

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) applications have been received and (b) awards have been granted by the Small Loans Guarantee Fund in the last six years for which figures are available within (i) the Scottish Borders, (ii) Scotland and (iii) the UK. [139484]

Nigel Griffiths: Since 1997, 29,205 UK businesses have received loan guarantees through this scheme.

The total number of loans guaranteed for the Scottish Borders, Scotland and the UK over the last six years are shown in the following table.

	Borders	Scotland	UK
2003–04 (April to September) Guaranteed	4	401	2,866
2002–03 Guaranteed	10	558	3,916
2001–02 Guaranteed	16	698	4,269
2000–01 Guaranteed	19	621	4,312
1999–2000 Guaranteed	23	526	4,279
1998–99 Guaranteed	16	408	4,482
1997–98 Guaranteed	16	440	5,081
Total	104	3,652	29,205

There is no figure for the number of loan applications made to banks and other lenders.

Training

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions she has had with (a) the Department for Education and Skills, (b) the Learning Skills Council, (c) voluntary sector train[illegible] providers and (d) other interested parties regarding training and re-training in manufacturing and industry; and if she will make a statement. [139426]

Jacqui Smith: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, works closely with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, meeting regularly to discuss areas of joint interest. They jointly lead and chair the Skills Alliance, which brings Government together with key Social and Economic partners, and delivery agencies, including the LSC and SSDA, to drive the implementation of the Government's Skills Strategy.

The Skills Strategy, published in July 2003, aims to ensure that employers have the right skills to support the success of their businesses and organisations, and individuals have the skills they need to be both employable and personally fulfilled.

Through the Government's Manufacturing Strategy we are working closely with industry and other stakeholders to ensure that UK manufacturing has the skills it needs as it increasingly moves to high value, knowledge intensive operations.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Higher Education White Paper

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what his estimate is of the additional cost of implementing the proposals in the higher education White Paper in the first three years that they come into effect] [139752]

Alan Johnson: We plan to publish a Regulatory Impact Assessment before the end of the year which will set out the impact of this change alongside the financial implications of the other policies announced in the Higher Education White Paper.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to his Answer of 12 November, Official Report, columns. 354–5W, on the Higher Education White Paper, how many responses to the consultation on the White Paper on Higher Education were received from honourable Members; how many were included in the total in the Government's response to the consultation; and how many other responses received by (a) his Department and (b) other Government Departments and agencies within the time limit for the consultation were not included in the total in the Government's response. [139453]

Alan Johnson: Seven hon. Members responded to the invitation to comment on the White Paper and were included in the total in the Government's commentary of responses.

All other responses similarly were included in the total in the commentary of responses which was published on 28 July 2003.

Non-EU Students

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the 50 (a) universities and (b) further education colleges with the highest numbers of non-European Union students registered for courses, giving the number of non-European Union students registered at each institution for the last year for which figures are available. [131724]

Alan Johnson: The latest available figures are given in the table.

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what percentage of non-European Union students at (a) further education colleges and (b) universities successfully completed their courses for each of the last five years for which figures are available; [131725]

(2) if he will list the 50 universities with the lowest percentage of non-European Union students successfully completing their courses, giving the percentage for each institution in the last year for which figures are available. [131726]

Alan Johnson: The information requested is not held centrally.

For universities and other HE sector institutions, the available information on non-completion rates is published by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) in "Performance Indicators in Higher Education in the UK", but this information covers UK domiciled students only.

For the FE sector, the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) only publish success, retention and achievement rates for those learners funded by the council in further education colleges and external institutions in England. However, the majority of learners from countries outside of the European Union are not funded by the LSC—so figures are not available. Furthermore, the LSC do not publish further education institution success, retention and achievement rates based on less than 500 learners as they can be misleading. In 2001/02, less than 15 further education institutions in England had more than 500 LSC funded non-European Union students.

Bechtel

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel for agencies responsible to his Department and its predecessor in each year since 1997, stating in each case (a) the nature of the work, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the duration of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [137880]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: My Department has not awarded any contracts to Bechtel during this period.

Capital Projects

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the Government guidelines are for bids in relation to capital projects for schools; and how counties will apply for funds; [138874]

(2) when the bids for capital projects to build new schools were sent out to counties. [138873]

Mr. Miliband: There are currently two main bidding rounds through which local education authorities (LEAs) are able to apply for capital funding for their school estates, Building Schools for the Future (BSF) and Targeted Capital Fund (TCF).

The guidelines for the BSF programme were set out in guidance sent to all LEAs on 17 July 2003. The TCF guidance was issued to LEAs on 21 July. Both sets of guidance have been deposited in the House of Commons Library.

In both cases authorities were invited to prepare proposals based on the guidance, and to submit their proposals by 31 October 2003. We hope to announce successful projects for the first phase of BSF (due to start in 2005–06) in early January 2004, and successful TCF projects (due to start in 2004–05) will be announced at the end of January.

Expressions of interest for later years BSF funding are due to be submitted by LEAs by 19 December 2003. A further phase of successful BSF projects will subsequently be announced at the end of March.

Childhood Obesity

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how he intends to measure the impact of the Travelling to School action plan on childhood obesity. [138745]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: "Travelling to School: an action plan" describes how we are encouraging every school to draw up a School Travel Plan in consultation with parents, pupils, local authorities and other partners. School Travel Plans will help schools, local education and transport authorities identify what needs to be done to make it safe and practical for more children to walk, cycle and take the bus to school. The School Travel Planning process includes regular checks on the way pupils travel from home to school, indicating how many children are taking regular exercise which will improve their health and reduce the risk of obesity.

Official Residences

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much the Department spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [134688]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: My Department has not had any costs relating to Government owned official residences since 1997.

Education Villages

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what discussions and consultations education authorities were required to carry out on education villages; [138879]

(2) how many schools have bid for capital funding for education villages in the South West; [138953]

(3) what the estimated total cost for education village bids is for the next two financial years; [138954]

(4) how many bids have been received for village education centres; [139043]

(5) whether the bids for (a) capital projects, (b) education improvements and (c) education villages are publicly available. [138872]

Mr. Miliband: Although we are unfamiliar with the term education village, we understand that this expression has been used at some local meetings in Somerset when discussing the local education authority's (LEA) proposal for Building Schools for the Future (BSF).

My written statements of 26 February and 26 June 2003 explain the aims of BSF, which is a programme of rebuilding and renewal to ensure that secondary education in every part of England has facilities of 21st century standard within 10 to 15 years (subject to future spending decisions), from 2005–06, when over £2 billion will be made available for investment.

We asked LEAs to consult widely on their proposals for BSF, as set out in guidance for LEAs, a copy of which I have placed in the House of Commons Library. The closing date for submission of proposals for the first wave was 31 October.

The Department does not make capital bids publicly available, because the bidding processes involve an exchange of information which is given in confidence. Whilst we are not aware of a bidding programme specifically aimed at education improvements, all capital investment is designed to raise educational standards in schools.

Although Somerset is the only LEA to be using the term education village in this context, we have received 53 BSF proposals (including the one for Somerset) for consideration for the first wave of investment. Three of these are from the South West.

Foundation Degrees

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of students who will be studying foundation degrees in 2010; and how many he expects to study locally. [139085]

Alan Johnson: The estimated number of full-time equivalent places on foundation degree courses in English universities from 2002–03 to 2005–06 are given below. Projections by whether the student is living at home while studying are not available.

Full-time equivalent student places on foundation degree courses (academic year)

2003/04	12,000
2004/05	30,000
2005/06	50,000

Note:
These numbers include HND places being replaced by foundation degrees.

It should be noted that the total number of students in 2010 would depend on a number of factors, including demographic trends and rate of growth in participation towards the end of the decade. It is not possible therefore to make an estimate for 2010.

GCSEs

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of fifth-form pupils in (a) England, (b) comprehensive schools, (c) grammar schools, (d) secondary modern schools and (e) grammar and secondary modern schools taken together have achieved (i) five or more A* GCSEs, (ii) five or more A* or A GCSEs and (iii) five or more A*-C GCSEs in each year since 1997. Graduate Tax

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will publish side-by-side comparative analyses of the cashflow profiles, showing projected expenditure and receipts of (a) the graduate payback scheme proposed in the White Paper on Higher Education and (b) the principal variants of a graduate tax which his Department has considered. [139342]

Alan Johnson: I refer my hon. Friend to the two letters to my hon. Friend from my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, dated 1 April 2003 and 3 June 2003. Copies of both letters are in the House Library. I also refer my hon. Friend to the Government response to the Education and Skills Select Committee's report on the Higher Education White paper, published on 28 July, and to a letter to my hon. Friend from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, dated 12 November 2003.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will place in the Library copies of focus group research which his Department has carried out into (a) higher education funding and (b) possible graduate contribution schemes. [139364]

Alan Johnson: Copies of "Student funding: findings from a two-stage programme of qualitative research on the funding of higher education" were placed in the Library and posted on the Department's Internet site on 28 March 2003.

Graduates

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent reports he has received from Barclays Bank in respect of changes to the time it is taking for graduates to find a permanent employed position after leaving university. [139628]

Alan Johnson: The Department has not received any recent reports from Barclays Bank on the changing patterns of graduate employment.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent reports he has received from Barclays Bank regarding recent levels of average graduate salaries. [139639]

Alan Johnson: The Department has not received any recent reports from Barclays Bank on average graduate salaries.

Higher Education

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much has been spent on widening participation in higher education in each year since 1997; on what schemes; and how much will be spent in each of the next five years. [137203]

Alan Johnson: Excluding student support, the relevant schemes and initiatives are as follows:

Aimhigher (previously called Excellence Challenge) provides grants mainly to schools and colleges to raise the aspirations and attainment levels of young people. The Higher Education Funding Council for England's (HEFCE) Partnerships for Progression provides funds to universities for outreach. The White Paper The future of higher education announced that these two initiatives would be merged to form a new Aimhigher programme. Between 1998 and 2003, HEFCE established regionally based widening participation projects. Expenditure on these schemes and initiatives to 2005–06 are given in the following tables.

In addition, HEFCE uses part of its teaching grant to provide a widening participation premium to universities to assist them with the additional costs of recruiting and retaining students from non-traditional backgrounds. The amount for this is £255 million in 2003–04, which includes £10 million from the Department's Aimhigher/Excellence challenge budget. HEFCE's disability allocation (£10 million in 2003–04) provides additional funding to universities to support recruitment and retention of disabled students.

Plans for expenditure after 2005–06 will be determined during the next spending review.

Household Incomes

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will publish the latest research he has commissioned on average household incomes by (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) local education authority in (i) England and Wales, (ii) Scotland and (iii) Northern Ireland. [139634]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Farrelly dated 19 November 2003:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question relating to research commissioned on average household incomes by (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) local education authority in (i) England and Wales, (ii) Scotland and (iii) Northern Ireland.

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) has not commissioned any research on average household incomes by parliamentary constituencies or by local education authorities. However, estimates of average household income and household disposable income are available at regional, sub-regional and local area levels (NUTS levels 1, 2 and 3 respectively), and were published in a news release on 26 March 2002, available on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/pdfdir/reg0302.pdf.

In most cases, NUTS level 3 areas are groups of administrative areas that are also local education authorities, but this is not the case throughout the UK.

ONS has also conducted work to develop estimates of average incomes at the ward level, and the results should be published within the next three months. However, these estimates cannot simply be aggregated to parliamentary constituencies or local education authorities. These results will be the best estimates at the ward level, and to produce the best estimates for parliamentary constituencies or local education authorities, different methodologies are likely to be more appropriate.

I understand that there is work carried out by the devolved administrations in Scotland and Northern Ireland on household incomes at various geographic levels.

Key Stage 3

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of children in (a) Wiltshire, (b) Dorset and (c) Devon gained level 5 or above in the Key Stage 3 tests in (i) English and (ii) mathematics in each year since 1997. [138963]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 17 November 2003]: The percentage of pupils achieving Level 5 or above at Key Stage 3 in (a) Wiltshire (b) Dorset and (c) Devon in (i) English and (ii) mathematics from 1997 onwards are:

Percentages

	(a) Wiltshire LEA		(b) Dorset LEA		(c) Devon LEA [1]		England

[1] For 1997, Devon LEA included schools in Torbay and Plymouth. Following the local government reorganisation in 1998, Torbay and Plymouth schools are excluded from the Devon figures.

[2] The 2003 information is based on provisional data.

Licensed Qualifications

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to introduce a licensed qualification for (a) bricklayers and (b) hairdressers; and if he will make a statement. [138960]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We have no plans to introduce licensed qualifications for either bricklayers or hairdressers. While a statutory approach, such as a licence to practice or operate, may suit some industries, we believe that collaborative voluntary action will be the appropriate route for most sectors.

We have an excellent example of such an employer led initiative in the Construction Skills Certification Scheme (CSCS). Major contractors have made a commitment to improve performance by requiring members of their workforce to hold an industry record card—normally the CSCS.

In the skills strategy we stated our determination to put employers' needs centre stage; it is for employers, not Government, to determine through their Sector Skills Council, whether this kind of agreement for collaborative action should be pursued.

Local Education Authorities

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total targeted transitional grant is that he expects to give to local education authorities; and whether this sum is additional to the total DFES support grant available for local education authorities. [139093]

Mr. Miliband: Indicative allocations of targeted transitional grant for 2004–05 were published on 29 October: these totalled £120 million. Allocations for 2004–05 will be confirmed later this month. I expect to make around half the 2004–05 level of grant available nationally in 2005–06: details will be confirmed in due course. The transitional grant is additional to the funding for local education authorities which was announced following the Spending Review 2002.

In addition, if any local education authority is able to put forward a compelling case that additional, transitional funds are needed in the short term—above and beyond those already available to the LEA—my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be prepared to consider bringing forward grant payments from my department, so that the LEA will have funds available in 2004–05 for this purpose, with the expectation of a consequential reduction to what they will receive in future years. The maximum amount that might be made available to each LEA in this way would be 300,000 per authority, or 0.2 per cent. of the authority's total education resources in 2004–05, if that is higher.

Modern Apprenticeships

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent discussions he has had on modern apprenticeships; what plans he has to expand Government aided apprenticeships; and if he will make a statement. [139444]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and his ministerial colleagues have regular meetings with numerous organisations and agencies to discuss modern apprenticeship developments. The Secretary of State has agreed to take part in a panel discussion at the Confederation of British Industry conference to address skills issues including modern apprenticeships. There are plans for Sir Roy Gardner, Chair of the Modern Apprenticeship Task Force, to feed back the task force's interim findings to the Secretary of State and myself.

The Government are wholly behind modern apprenticeships as a high quality work-based learning option for young people. We are fully committed to implementing the reforms recommended by the Modern Apprenticeships Advisory Committee under Sir John Cassels, and more recent skills strategy announcements. We have adopted a PSA target for 2004 of 28 per cent. of young people entering a modern apprenticeship before the age of 22. We have made sufficient resources available to ensure that we meet this target and are on course to achieve it.

Office of Fair Access

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the (a) capital expenditure and (b) running costs likely to arise as a result of the establishing of the Office of Fair Access. [137474]

Alan Johnson: This matter will be addressed in the explanatory notes which will be published when legislative proposals are presented to the House. We have proposed, in "Widening Participation in Higher Education" that OFFA will be separate from but supported by HEFCE. We do not expect any significant capital expenditure.

Primary Schools (Essex)

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the vacancy figure for primary school teachers in Essex was on 1 September 2003. [139523]

Mr. Miliband: Vacancy information is collected in January of each year. Information for January 2003 is shown in table 17 of the Schools Workforce in England statistical first release (SFR) of 9 September 2003. A copy of this SFR has been placed in the Library. The table is also available on the statistics section of the DfES website at: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgatewav/DB/SFR/s000411/index.shtml

School Performance Tables

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total cost of publishing stand-alone school performance tables for Key Stage 3 was. [139087]

Mr. Miliband: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 4 July 2003, Official Report, column. 680W. The Key Stage 3, GCSE/GNVQ and post-16 performance tables are managed as one exercise so there are no separate costings.

Schwarz Review

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what process he followed in appointing Mr. Steven Schwarz to lead a review into admissions to higher education; what (a) exchanges and (b) representations took place between himself and Mr. Schwarz regarding the independence of such a review; and what guidelines there are regarding independence of reviews carried out at his request. [139123]

Alan Johnson: The Secretary of State for Education and Skills appointed Professor Steven Schwartz following discussion with organisations in the higher education sector. This included contact with the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE), and Universities UK (UUK).

The Secretary of State for Education and Skills has drawn up clear terms of reference for the Admissions to Higher Education Steering Group which are set out in its recent consultation paper, "Consultation On Key Issues Relating To Fair Admissions To Higher Education", available from www.admissions-review.org.uk.

The Admissions to Higher Education Review adheres to good practice in preserving the independence of such reviews. This is demonstrated by the following:

Professor Schwartz, vice-chancellor of Brunel University, has been chosen as an independent chair from the HE sector.

Professor Schwartz has a Steering Group whose members represent a wide range of interests and views.

The secretariat support to the Steering Group is led by consultants seconded from universities, rather than permanent civil servants.

Any services commissioned by the Steering Group where resources or facilities are provided by the DfES have been subject to service level agreements.

An independent press agency has been used for all matters relating to the review.

Statistical Bulletin

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will place in the Library statistics for the most recent available year consistent with those on which DFES statistical bulletin 13–84 was based. [139028]

Mr. Miliband: The Department does not produce figures in the form of bulletin 13–84 and to produce an update in that form would involve disproportionate cost.

Student Drop-outs

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what evidence he has collated on the differences in student drop-out rates between institutions, correlated with the socio-economic class of those dropping out. [135780]

Alan Johnson: The available information on non-completion rates by institution is contained in the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) publication 'Performance indicators in higher education in the UK ', a copy of which is in the house Library. The figures cover full-time first degree courses only and show the proportion of entrants who failed to complete their course for each individual HE institution in the UK. This data is not disaggregated by social class. However, the publication does show the proportion of young full time first degree entrants from the 'lower' social class categories for each institution.

However, a number of research studies have explored the factors associated with students dropping out of higher education. The evidence shows that non-completion is a complex process that cannot normally be explained by a single factor. Other important factors (many of which are inter-related) include:

Incompatibility between the student and their course or institution; lack of preparation for higher education;

lack of commitment to the course;

level of prior attainment;

financial hardship;

poor academic progress;

health and other personal reason;

age;

gender; and whether or not the individual applied through clearing.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research his Department has (a) conducted or (b) received into the relationship between a student's financial position and their propensity to drop out of higher education; and what conclusions he has drawn. [139626]

Alan Johnson: A number of research studies have explored the factors associated with dropping out of higher education. These include:

Improving student achievement in the English higher education sector HC 486, Parliamentary Session 2001/2002;

"Dropping Out: A study of early leavers from Higher Education" (2003) Rhys Davies and Peter Elias, DfES Research Report 386; and

Yorke, M (1997) "Undergraduate Non-completion in Higher Education in England" Bristol HEFCE;

Arulampalam, W., Naylor, R. A. and Smith, J., "Effects of in-class variation and student rank on the probability of withdrawal: cross-section and time-series analysis for UK university students," presented at the Royal Economic Society Conference, University of Warwick, March, 2002;

"Right Choice? A follow-up to 'Making the Right Choice'", Connor H. Pearson R. Pollard E. Tyers C. Willison R. Universities UK 2001;

"Losing out: socio-economic disadvantage and experience in further and higher education" May 2003 Joseph Rowntree Foundation Smith J. and R. A. Naylor, "Dropping out of University: a statistical analysis of the probability of withdrawal for UK university students," Journal of the Royal Statistical Society, 2001, vol. 164, pp. 389–405;

The evidence shows that non-completion is a complex process that cannot normally be explained by any single factor. Incompatibility between the student and their course or institution and a lack of preparation for higher education are the most commonly cited reasons for dropping out of higher education. Other reasons, which are often inter-related, include:

lack of commitment to the course;

financial hardship;

poor academic progress; and health or other personal reasons.

Research also shows that students with lower prior attainment and those who apply through clearing are more likely to drop-out of higher education other things being equal.

Student Loans

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the effect on costs to his Department of raising the repayment thresholds on student loans to £15,000 a year. [137574]

Alan Johnson: We plan to publish a Regulatory Impact Assessment before the end of the year which will set out the impact of this change alongside the financial implications of the other policies announced in the Higher Education White Paper.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of (a) the total outstanding size of student loan debt with the Government and its agencies in each year since 2001 and (b) the total Government payment for full or partial remission of tuition fees since 2001; and if he will list the planning assumptions for the size of each for the next three years. [139022]

Alan Johnson: On (a) the outstanding size of student loan debt for England and Wales at the end of financial year 2001–02, i.e. at 31 March 2002 was £7,203,199,000. A figure for student loan debt as at 31 March 2003 will be available when the DfES Resource Accounts for 2002–03 are published which is planned for December 2003. Planning assumptions are based around an increase of approximately £2 billion per annum in student loan debt for England and Wales. The Department does not hold figures for Scotland and Northern Ireland.

On (b) the cost to the Government of the public contribution to existing tuition fee remission arrangements for English and Welsh domiciled students studying in the United Kingdom is £382 million for 2001/02 academic year. Projections of fee income to English HEIs from home and EU domiciled students will be available at the end of November.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent research his Department has undertaken to establish whether students differentiate between debt and income-contingent loans. [139636]

Alan Johnson: The Department has not undertaken research to establish whether students differentiate between debt and income-contingent loans.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average level of debt for a student leaving university was in each academic year since 1993–94. [139642]

Alan Johnson: The table shows the average student loan debt at the point at which they entered repayment status for borrowers who became liable to repay their loans in financial years 1999–2000 to 2002–03. Data for earlier years are not available.

	Average student loan debt on entering repayment status[1]

1999–2000	3,530	[6]—	[6]—
2000–01	4,090	2,300	[6]—
2001–02	4,490	3,410	450
2002–03	5,150	5,980	520

[1] Data rounded to nearest 10. Includes interest accrued up to the point of entering repayment status. Excludes any early voluntary repayments which may have been made before borrowers enter repayment status. Debt of borrowers with more than one loan type has been split between types.

[2] Borrowers enter repayment status in the April following their graduation or otherwise leaving their course. Borrowers may have accounts in more than one cohort year of entering repayment.

[3] Loans made to students who entered higher education up to 1997/98 or who entered in 1998/99 under existing arrangements. Includes loans repayable to the private sector following the sale of two tranches of student loans.

[4] Loans, repayable on an income contingent basis, available to students who entered higher education from academic year 1998/99. These loans were subject to a repayment holiday until April 2000. Includes hardship loans.

[5] Fixed-rate loans made to eligible part-time students, introduced in September 2000.

Student Loans Company.

The first cohort of students on a three-year degree course who entered higher education under the new student support arrangements became liable for repayment in April 2002. That, and earlier, cohorts includes a disproportionate number of students on shorter courses as well as those who have left higher education before completing their courses. Therefore the average level of debt will not be representative of the average debt experienced by those who complete their courses.

Borrowers are liable to repay their loans from the April following graduation or otherwise leaving their course. Most borrowers who started their course from the 1998/99 academic year will repay income contingent loans. Loans for those who started their course before 1998/99 are repayable on a mortgage style basis.

The Department does not have annual data for HE students' total debt on graduation (including bank loans, overdrafts, credit cards, and informal debts to family and friends). The Student Income and Expenditure Survey (SIES), which collects this information is undertaken every three to four years. Findings from the last survey in 1998/99 showed that the average total anticipated debt of all full-time students graduating in 1998/99 was £3,462. The Department has conducted a SIES for the 2002/3 academic year which will be published shortly.

Students

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent reports he has received on the percentage of students attending university whose parents were graduates; and what trends they demonstrate. [139638]

Alan Johnson: In 2002 36 per cent. of 18 year olds in higher education had at least one parent with a degree (Youth Cohort Study Cohort 10 sweep three). The table shows that the trend over time appears to be reasonably flat.

Teacher Training

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to improve teacher training for further education college staff; and if he will make a statement. [138957]

Alan Johnson: In "Success for All" the Government set out its aim to enable six million learners to reach their potential. This depends on quality of teaching, which in turn depends on quality of teacher training. On 11 November we launched a consultation "The Future of Initial Teacher Education for the Learning and Skills Sector—An Agenda for Reform": http://www.dfes.gov.uk/consultations2/30 .

We want all our partners in the learning and skills sector including the Inspectorates, funding bodies, employers and unions to join us in developing this agenda for change. This will support our ambition for more successful and satisfying careers for current and future generations of teachers, to the lasting benefit of learners.

Top-up Fees

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations he has received on top-up fees for university students; what assessment he has made of the effect of top-up fees on decisions by students from low-income families to pursue further and higher education; what steps he will take to encourage students from low-income families to enter further and higher education; and if he will make a statement. [139439]

Alan Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 11 September 2003, Official Report, column 464W, in which I described the numerous representations which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received regarding variable fees. With respect to the impact of variable fees on students from low income backgrounds, I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Newcastle-Under-Lyme (Paul Farrelly) of 12 November 2003, Official Report, column 354W, in which I set out the Government's proposed measures for safeguarding access to higher education for those from low income backgrounds.

Our AimHigher campaign provides a focus for the many and varied widening participation activities going on at an institutional, local and regional level. To date, it has reached 1,223 schools and sixth form colleges and a total of 129,130 pupils, and the evidence shows that it is working: applications for entry into higher education in 2003 are up 4.2 per cent. in AimHigher areas compared to 1.6 per cent. in non-AimHigher areas.

The introduction of variable fees will not impact directly on those in further education. However, we aim to increase participation in further education through a range of actions set out in our 14–19 Skills for Life, Skills and Success for All strategies which will ensure that students from low income families have access to high quality opportunities which meet their individual needs and that they are encouraged to fulfil their potential.

Tuition Fees

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment he has made of the possible impact of tuition fees at universities in England on salaries for teaching and research staff at universities in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland; [139002]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure, under the proposals in the White Paper on Higher Education, equality of opportunity for English students seeking to go to universities in (a) Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) Northern Ireland; [139164]

(3) what assessment has been made of the impact so far of the different systems of student funding in the UK on cross-border flows of students from (a) England and Wales to Scotland and (b) Scotland to England and Wales; [139128]

(4) what assessment he has made of the possible impact of tuition fees at universities in England on (a) research and (b) teaching at universities in (i) Wales, (ii) Scotland and (iii) Northern Ireland; [139003]

(5) what assessment he has made of the possible impact of tuition fees in England on cross-border flows of students from (a) Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) Northern Ireland to universities in England; [139004]

(6) what assessment he has made of the possible impact of tuition fees at English universities on the overall competitiveness of universities in (a) Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) Northern Ireland; [139129]

(7) what assessment he has made of the possible impact of tuition fees at universities in England on cross-border flows of academic staff to England from universities in (a) Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) Northern Ireland. [139130]

(8) what assessment he has made of the possible impact of tuition fees in England on cross-border flows of English students to universities in (a) Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) Northern Ireland. [139005]

(9) how, under the proposals in the White Paper on higher education, he will ensure equality of opportunity for (a) Welsh, (b) Scottish and (c) Northern Irish students to go to universities in (i) Wales, (ii) England, (iii) Scotland and (iv) Northern Ireland; [139105]

(10) what assessment has been made of the overall impact of the implementation in England of the proposals in the White Paper on Higher Education on universities in (a) Wales, (b) Scotland and (c) Northern Ireland. [139175]

Alan Johnson: We are involved in regular discussion with the devolved administrations on these issues.

Funding decisions on higher education relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are a matter for the devolved administrations. Matters relating to student support are also devolved in Scotland and Northern Ireland. The Government propose, subject to Parliamentary approval, to transfer student support to the National Assembly for Wales.

After legislation to give effect to the transfer is in place, Professor Teresa Rees will start an independent review of student support and tuition fees in Wales. This will include the key question of future policy on variable fees and will advise the Assembly on what it might do with its new student support powers. The Third Stage Higher Education Review in Scotland is currently assessing the impact of the proposals emanating from the White Paper The Future of Higher Education (Cm 5735).

Subject to any provisions in their access agreements, it will be for individual institutions to determine how they spend income raised from variable tuition fees.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the residual income requirements are for full or partial remission of university tuition fees; and what the proposed residual income levels will be above which student grants will not be (a) fully and (b) partly paid from 2004. [139097]

Alan Johnson: For the present residual income requirements for full or partial fee remission, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 20 October, Official Report, column 438W.

The income thresholds for 2004–05 have not yet been finalised. From 2004 academic year, new students from a household with an income of £15,200 or less will qualify for a full HE Grant of 1,000. Those from a household with income between £15, 201 and £21,185 will qualify for a partial grant of between £50 and £1,000. We expect to announce the rates for the remaining thresholds within the next few weeks.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what fee remissions he proposes for (a) students from more modest backgrounds and (b) students taking up (i) medicine or (ii) teaching; [139627]

(2) what further measures in respect of (a) maintenance grants and (b) student loans he intends to bring forward; and if he will make a statement. [139629]

Alan Johnson: The Government's policy on maintenance grants, student loans and tuition fee remission grant is set out in the White Paper "The future of higher education" (Cm 5735) published on 22 January 2003. I also refer to my written statement of 16 July 2003 to the House of Commons on raising the income threshold, for receipt of the full £1,000 Higher Education Grant, to £15,200.

Universities

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations he has sought from businesses on their preferred methods of contributing to more funding for (a) teaching and (b) research in universities in the United Kingdom. [139174]

Alan Johnson: I have not specifically invited representations from business in relation to the funding of teaching in universities. As to research, a consultation on funding for research in Higher Education Institutions, The sustainability of University Research', was published by the Office for Science and Technology at the end of May. It closed for consultation on 30 September. Over 162 formal responses were received, including 11 from industry. These responses, and contributions from meetings with a range of organisations, are receiving careful consideration. The government anticipates an announcement on the outcomes of the consultation early in 2004.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Animal Welfare

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the feasibility of implementing the recommendations in the report of July 2002 by the House of Lords Select Committee on the use of animals in scientific procedures; and if he will make a statement. [140045]

Caroline Flint: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what plans there are to establish national research on the replacement of animals in basic medical research. [133349]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 22 October 2003]: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action his Department is taking to enhance the status of alternative research to replace animal experiments. [133350]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 22 October 2003]: The use of alternatives is widely encouraged and the use of animals in regulated procedures is prohibited by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 in cases where a scientifically valid non-animal alternative is available.

Much importance is already attached to alternatives research, both by Government (including public service research funding bodies) and the scientific research community. The latter has considerable incentive to develop replacements for the use of animals, and has an impressive track record in doing so. Responsibility for further progress continues to rest primarily with the researchers themselves, as they try to overcome the technical limitations of those systems and methodologies still dependent upon animal use. The Government will continue their efforts to support that, with the added focus and impetus provided by the various related recommendations of the House of Lords Select Committee on Animals in Scientific Procedures, the Government response to which has been well reported.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has commissioned into the levels of financial support other EU member states have given to alternatives to animal research; and what conclusions he has drawn. [133351]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 22 October 2003]: The Government have not commissioned any research into the levels of financial support other EU member states have given to alternatives to animal research and has no current plans to do so. However, we have not ruled out such research, should it become relevant to our consideration of the need for a United Kingdom centre for research into the alternatives.

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to encourage alternatives to animal testing for medical research. [133541]

Caroline Flint: The use of alternatives is widely encouraged and the use of animals in regulated procedures is prohibited by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 in cases where a scientifically valid non-animal alternative is available. Every year the Home Office makes available to the Animal Procedures Committee (APC) a budget aimed at developing or promoting the use of alternatives which replace animal use, reduce the number of animals used, or refine the procedures involved to minimise suffering (the 3Rs). Work aimed at improving the environmental conditions in which laboratory animals are kept and transported has also been sponsored. The amount made available to the Committee for 2003–04 for this specific purpose is £280,000.

This is not the only money spent by the Government on alternatives, other Departments also fund such work. It is estimated that the total spent by the United Kingdom Government is between £2 million and £10 million each year. Industry also spends many millions of pounds each year on the search for and development of alternatives.

We also support international initiatives, including the work of the European Centre for the Validation of Alternative Methods (ECVAM). The Chief Inspector of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate is now the United Kingdom representative on the ECVAM Scientific Advisory Committee and is contributing to discussions about the future direction of ECVAM's work. The Chief Inspector and other members of the Inspectorate also participated last year in the Fourth World Congress on alternatives and Animal Use in the Life Sciences, in New Orleans, which the Home Office co-sponsored.

Alcohol (Public Places)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in what circumstances he would advise a local authority to introduce a city-wide drinking ban using the model Home Office bye-law rather than a designated public places order; [136603]

(2) if he will make a statement on the circumstances under which a designated public places order for a city-wide drinking ban may be used to address aggressive begging; [136599]

(3) what the average length of time taken to implement a designated public places order has been from the day on which the local authority made a decision. [137239]

Ms Blears: Section 12–16 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 (CJPA) came into force on 1 September 2001. The provisions in the Act allow local authorities to designate areas to restrict public drinking where there is evidence that nuisance is alcohol related. In such designated areas the police may use their discretionary powers to confiscate all alcohol where they reasonably believe that continued drinking in that place will lead to further disorder or nuisance. The CJPA provides the police with a more consistent set of powers including the power of arrest, which was not available in the previous bye-laws. Any relevant local authority drinking bye-law will lapse after five years commencing on 1 September 2001.

The powers contained in the CJPA were never intended to be used to introduce a blanket restriction on public drinking. The powers were intended to be used to stop the immediate problems caused by anti-social drinking in designated areas and to allow the police to confiscate alcohol in those areas. Section 13 of the CJPA could permit the designation of an entire local authority area should that area be experiencing problems with nuisance that is alcohol related.

The time it takes for a local authority to introduce an order will vary from the size of the area to be designated and also with regard to the time it takes to carry out the procedures required under the Local Authorities (Alcohol Consumption in Designated Places) Regulations 2001.

The objective of the CJPA powers is to tackle anti-social street drinking, rather than begging. Begging is an offence under Section 3 of the Vagrancy Act 1824. It will be made a recordable offence from 1 December 2003.

Anonymity

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what informed and strengthened guidance has been given to the police and media on anonymity for those accused of historical child abuse; and where and to whom it is available; [138279]

(2) which Ministers are discussing with media representatives how intrusive and unhelpful reporting in cases with suspects of historical child abuse can be avoided. [138282]

Ms Blears: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Child Abuse

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will remove the right to buy from a council tenant any of whose family resident in the family home are subject of an antisocial behaviour order for neighbour nuisance. [138798]

Ms Blears: Under the Anti-Social Behaviour Bill we have made a number of improvements to anti-social behaviour orders. However, we are also aware that anti-social tenants can sometimes evade eviction by buying their homes under the right to buy. We are actively considering what steps we can take to prevent this and thus to protect communities.

Asylum Seekers

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his provision of taxis for asylum seekers for visiting friends and family; out of which budget they are paid for; what criteria are used to assess whether or not an asylum seeker might be able to make use of such arrangements; and whether provision of taxis is a temporary measure. [134130]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers in each of the last six years have received (a) a criminal record and (b) been sentenced to prison. [135872]

Beverley Hughes: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Enforced migration deriving from human rights abuse and inequality starts with discrimination and marginalisation. Both the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and the Department for International Development (DFID) address these root causes in their work to promote human rights abroad. This year the FCO will fund over £12 million worth of grass roots human rights projects in more than 60 countries. Full details of the FCO's work to promote human rights can be found in the Annual Report on Human Rights, a copy of which was sent to all Members of the House. An electronic version is available at: www.fco.gov.uk/humanrightsreport2003DFID is dedicated to the elimination of poverty through realisation of the human rights of the poorest people of the world. In 2002–03, spending related to human rights and empowerment totalled £112 million. DFID seeks to ensure that poor people are consulted on policies and decisions that affect them and are aware of their rights. This approach aims to promote social justice, including tackling human rights abuse. In October 2000, DFID published its strategy for achieving this goal, entitled "Realising Human Rights for Poor People". A copy was placed in the Library of the House.

Paul Goggins: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Young Offenders

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many young offenders found guilty of criminal damage have undertaken reparation under the (a) Reparation Order, (b) Action Plan, (c) Referral Order and (d) Supervision Order since their introduction; [138273]

(2) how many young offenders he estimates will undertake reparation under the (a) Reparation Order, (b) Action Plan, (c) Referral Order and (d) Supervision Order over the next two years; [138274]

(3) if he will make a statement on the forms of reparative activities that have been undertaken through the (a) Reparation Order, (b) Action Plan, (c) Referral Order and (d) Supervision Order; [138275]

(4) if he will make a statement on the re-offending rate of young offenders found guilty of criminal damage who took part in reparation schemes in 2002–03. [138276]

Ms Blears: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the results of the ISSP schemes; what the completion rate of young offenders guilty of criminal damage on the ISSP schemes has been; and what the re-offending rate of the young people responsible for criminal damage on the ISSP scheme has been. [138277]

Ms Blears: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, how many juveniles failed to make contact with the youth offending team on release from prison in the last year for which figures are available. [139000]

Paul Goggins: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, how many girls aged (a) 16, (b) 17 and (c) 18 years are serving sentences in women's prisons. [139135]

Paul Goggins: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Youth Violence

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures the Government are taking to reduce youth violence. [138[illegible]]

Ms Blears: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Zahid Mubarek

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if he will set up a public inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the death of Zahid Mubarek following the judgment of the House of Lords on 16 October in the case of Regina v Secretary of State for the Home Department ex parte Amin. [137141]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 10 November 2003]: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Georgia

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government is taking to ensure that (a) proper democratic processes are being followed and (b) that fair elections are taking place in the Republic of Georgia. [139049]

Mr. Rammell: The United Kingdom has taken every opportunity, both in our bi-lateral contacts and through our membership of international fora, to impress upon the Georgians the importance of the parliamentary elections being free and fair. Our Embassy in Tbilisi has maintained close and regular contact with government, opposition leaders and the Central Electoral Commission in the run up to, and the aftermath of the elections. We contributed a large number of observers to the OSCE monitoring mission. The UK also helped fund a Georgian NGO, the International Society for Fair Elections, to conduct a media campaign raising awareness of the democratic process.

The UK has endorsed the findings of the International Election Observation Mission on the conduct of the electoral process and encouraged all sides to come to a peaceful, negotiated settlement. The international community, including the UK, has impressed upon the Georgian authorities the need for perceived weaknesses in the electoral system to be resolved before the Presidential elections in 2005. Together with our EU partners, we made a statement on 13 November to this effect. The UK Special Representative to the South Caucasus also raised the matter with government and opposition politicians during his visit to Tbilisi last week.

We will consider how we can best help the Georgian Electoral Commission to bring about the required improvements in the electoral system.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Georgia. [139281]

Mr. Rammell: I refer the hon. Lady to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Romford (Andrew Rosindell) today (UIN139049).

Afghanistan

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent progress has been made in improving Afghanistan's drug law enforcement capacity. [138430]

Mr. Rammell: As lead nation for counter narcotics activity in Afghanistan, the UK supports the Afghan National Drug Control Strategy which was adopted by President Karzai in May 2003. The strategy proposes activities in four key areas: improved drugs law enforcement; alternative livelihoods for poppy farmers; capacity building for Afghan drugs institutions; and public awareness campaigns/treatment programmes to help reduce demand. The UK is committing £70 million over the next three years and additional British Embassy drugs personnel to drive forward implementation of the strategy.

In the area of improved drugs law enforcement, the UK is working with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime on a basic law enforcement training programme to develop the investigation, detection, interdiction and intelligence capabilities of Afghanistan's principal drug enforcement agency, the Counter Narcotics Police. The UK has trained over 100 officers of the Counter Narcotics Police to date, including two female officers, and has involved trainers from Pakistan, Turkey and Iran in the counter-narcotics training package.

The UK plans to build upon this training by seconding international experts to mentor officers in Kabul and the regions. Progress in reforming Afghanistan's drug enforcement capacity, as in other areas of the drugs strategy, is dependent upon wider improvements in security and governance.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent estimate he has made of the percentage of the UK's heroin supply coming from Afghanistan. [138431]

Mr. Rammell: On the basis of forensic analysis of heroin seizures, it is estimated that at least 95 per cent. of the heroin used in the UK is produced from opium grown in Afghanistan.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the size of the poppy harvest was in Afghanistan in each year since 2000. [138476]

Mr. Rammell: The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) conducts an annual survey into the level of opium cultivation and production in Afghanistan. Their figures since 2000 are as follows:

	Hectares	Tonnes
2000	82,000	3,300
2001	8,000	185
2002	74,000	3,400
2003	80,000	3,600

The low level of cultivation and low production figure in 2001 reflect the Taliban ban on opium cultivation; the ban did not however address the underlying causes of poppy cultivation in Afghanistan and was enforced with mix of threat and bribery.

Azerbaijan

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on bilateral relations with Azerbaijan. [139127]

Mr. Rammell: The UK has a good bilateral relationship with Azerbaijan. The most recent ministerial visit was by my right hon. Friend the then Minister for Energy in May this year, to attend the Caspian Oil and Gas Show in Baku. Ilham Aliev, now President, visited the UK in June when he called on the Minister of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for North Warwickshire (Mike O'Brien), and the then Secretary of State for International Development my noble Friend Baroness Amos.

In January 2003, we extended the mandate of Sir Brian Fall the UK Special Representative to cover the whole of the South Caucasus underlining the commitment of the Government to play an active part in the efforts of the international community to help resolve the Nagorno Karabakh conflict.

UK investment in Azerbaijan totals $US 2 billion. The vast majority of this is BP's investment in the oil and gas sector, which has contributed much to the development of the oil and gas industry in Azerbaijan. BP is the largest foreign investor, operating four offshore oil and gas exploration and development contracts. BP is leading the Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan (ETC) pipeline project. The BTC pipeline will provide an export route for oil (and subsequently gas) from Azerbaijan's Caspian oil fields to Europe.

Burma

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on British American Tobacco's decision to stop its cigarette making operation in Burma. [138824]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I welcome that BAT, the largest remaining UK investor in Burma, has responded to the Government's request that they leave the country. BAT's decision reinforces our long held policy of not encouraging trade, investment or tourism in Burma. As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister stated in June, trade and investment with Burma is not appropriate while the military regime continues to suppress the basic rights of its people. This will remain our policy until we see concrete evidence of genuine political will by the regime to work towards national reconciliation, democracy, and respect for human rights in Burma.

Colombia

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to ensure compliance by the Colombian Government with recommendations by the UN on human rights. [138944]

Mr. Rammell: The issue of the implementation of UN recommendations was discussed at the London Meeting on International Support for Colombia which the UK hosted on 10 July this year. The Colombian Government pledged to implement these recommendations promptly and take effective action against impunity and collusion especially with the paramilitary groups. In my meeting with the Colombian Foreign Minister in New York in September, I underlined the importance we attached to this commitment. A working group of representatives of the governments who attended the London Meeting has been set up in Bogota to monitor and evaluate progress on implementation.

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his officials have held with the Colombian Government on rates of voter abstention in (a) the Colombian referendum and (b) the municipal and departmental elections of 25 and 26 October. [138946]

Mr. Rammell: We hold regular discussions with the Colombian authorities and others on a wide range of topics, including the outcomes of the recent referendum and the municipal and departmental elections.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when he will reply to the letter to him dated 7 October from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mrs. R. F. Nayeem; [138455]

(2) when he will reply to the letter to him dated 6 October from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mrs. F. Begum; [138457]

(3) when he will reply to the letter to him dated 2 October from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Tufail Choudhary. [138458]

Mr. Mullin: I can confirm that as a result of an administrative error, no replies were sent to my right hon. Friend's letters of 2, 6, 7 October to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary about Mr. Tufail Choudhary, Mrs. F. Begum and Mrs. Ruzi Farzana Nayeem.

It would appear that a package containing a number of my right hon. Friend's letters was lost while in transit between my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's office and UKvisas, the department responsible for entry clearance matters arising overseas. The letters that were lost have now been identified and copies have been sent to UKvisas. I can assure my right hon. Friend that my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will write to him in the next few days on this case.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the levels of (a) United Kingdom and (b) UN troops in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [137618]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 18 November 2003]: I refer the right hon. and learned Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) on 12 November 2003, Official Report, column 314W.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost was to his Department for (a) ministerial cars and drivers, (b) taxis, (c) train travel, (d) the use of helicopters, (e) airline tickets and (f) chartered aeroplanes in each year since 1997. [123075]

Mr. Rammell: Under the terms of the Framework Document, the responsibility for the provision of ministerial cars and drivers is delegated to the Government Care Despatch Agency. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office and Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 13 November 2003, Official Report, column 397W.

Expenditure in the UK under the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) taxi contracts for each year since 1997 was as follows:

Year	Expenditure
1997–98	152, 442.64
1998–99	226,736.15
1999–2000	329,903.63
2000–01	380,830.36
2001–02	525,026.69
2002–03	499,164.22

These figures do not include details of any taxi journeys undertaken by staff outside the scope of the FCO's taxi contracts and for which reimbursement is made through the Department's travel claim system. Expenditure on taxis will also have been incurred by our Missions overseas. Neither of these costs are recorded separately, and it would involve disproportionate cost to identify them.

The FCO purchases tickets for rail and air travel through a contract with American Express. Figures for this expenditure are immediately available for the 2001–02 and 2002–03 financial years only, and are as follows:

Year	Rail	Air
2001–02	752,364	15,730,892
2002–03	699,569	15,269,677

I will write to the hon. Member with the figures for 1997–98 to 2000–01 as soon as they are provided by American Express. However, this data do not include the cost of rail or air journeys booked direct by members of staff and reimbursed through the Department's travel claim system. Direct expenditure on air travel will also have been incurred by our Missions overseas. These costs are not recorded separately, and again it would involve disproportionate cost to identify them.

Details of the types of aircraft used by FCO travellers, (i.e. helicopters), are not recorded. Neither does the Department or its contractor centrally maintain information on whether FCO personnel travel by scheduled or chartered flights.

European Court of Human Rights

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy (a) to oppose the introduction of new admissibility criteria for individual petitioners to the European Court of Human Rights and (b) to urge all member states to consult on the matter with (i) the legal community and (ii) civil society; and if he will make a statement. [138795]

Mr. MacShane: The Government supports the introduction of the new admissibility criteria for individual petitioners to the European Court of Human Rights. The new admissibility criteria are not designed to restrict the right of individual application. But if the Court is not given discretion to apply the new criteria, that right could be put at risk by the ever-increasing volume of applications which prevents the Court from dealing with any applications in a reasonable time.

The Government endorses paragraph 14 of the Council of Europe's Committee of Ministers' Declaration of 15 May, which encourages the Governments of member states to share information on this matter with civil society. Civil society representatives and independent experts will have the opportunity to raise questions at a Symposium at the Council of Europe on 17 November, with a further symposium proposed for early 2004.

European Constitution

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what shared competence exists on energy policy within the EU; and what impact he estimates the proposed Energy Chapter will have on the United Kingdom. [137739]

Mr. MacShane: I refer my right hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 11 November 2003, Official Report, column 204W.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the areas of policy, legislation, administration and decision on objectives to be attained which (a) are and (b) will be the exclusive responsibility of the European Union, and the Articles of the proposed Constitution in which these are set out. [137941]

Mr. MacShane: Article 12 (1) of Part I of the Convention on the Future of Europe's draft Constitutional Treaty states that the EU would have exclusive competence in the following areas: competition rules necessary for the functioning of the internal market: monetary policy for member states who have adopted the Euro; common commercial policy: customs union: and the conservation of marine biological resources under the common fisheries policy.

Gibraltar

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Gibraltar Government in negotiations with the Spanish Government on the future of Gibraltar. [133529]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no recent discussions with the Government of Gibraltar on this subject. When I visited Gibraltar on 4 July, my discussions with the Chief Minister covered, among many other issues, the subject of negotiations with Spain.

Guantanamo Bay

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the decision by the United States Supreme Court to reassess the legality of holding prisoners in Guantanamo military base as it affects British prisoners held there. [139032]

Mr. Mullin: On 10 November, the Supreme Court granted certiorari in the case Al Odah v. United States, which concerns detainees held in Guantanamo Bay. The question that the Court has agreed to hear is "Whether United States courts lack jurisdiction to consider challenges to the legality of the detention of foreign nationals captured abroad in connection with hostilities and incarcerated at the Guantanamo Bay Naval Base, Cuba."

The Government will of course consider the Supreme Court's judgement on this question once it has been issued.

Indonesia

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had with the Government of Indonesia on (a) suppressing the rebels' uprising and (b) humanitarian assistance in Aceh. [138825]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government has regularly urged the Indonesian Government and the Free Aceh Movement (GAM) to return to negotiations for a peaceful solution to the conflict in Aceh.

Together with other members of the Tokyo Group (the EU, US, Japan and World Bank) we have recently called for improved access to Aceh for international agencies and NGOs, and for the impact on the people of Aceh to be minimised. The UK continues to work through NGOs and the UN to provide assistance to the people of Aceh. We continue to discuss Aceh with political contacts in Indonesia and the Indonesian Ambassador to the UK.

International Atomic Energy Agency

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to make additional resources available to the International Atomic Energy Agency to support its increased safeguards burden in Iran following the agreement concluded in Tehran on 21 October. [134572]

Mr. MacShane: The United Kingdom supported a successful call for additional resources for the IAEA's activities at the board of Governors' meeting earlier this year. We believe that, with these additional resources, the IAEA will be able to undertake all of the safeguards tasks with which they are mandated, including work in Iran.

Iran

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government is taking to prevent the Islamic Republic of Iran from obtaining and developing the capabilities to (a) produce and (b) employ nuclear weapons. [136765]

Mr. Rammell: Together with our partners from France and German, we have been engaged in intensive discussion with the Iranian Government to persuade them to suspend activities associated with the development of a nuclear weapons capability.

Iran has announced that it will suspend the enrichment of uranium and activities associated with the reprocessing of nuclear fuels. We will continue to monitor closely Iran's implementation of this course of action.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is on Iran's enrichment of uranium. [137999]

Mr. MacShane: Together with our French and German partners, we have made clear to Iran that it must suspend all uranium enrichment activities.

Iraq

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the evidential basis is for the statements made on page 34 and 35 of the Iraq dossier of 24 September on inspections by UNSCOM of the presidential sites. [135348]

Mr. Rammell: Only one team of inspectors (UNSCOM 243) was allowed to visit Presidential Sites under a special arrangement facilitated by the UN Secretary-General. Their report of their visit to the sites makes clear that they were not able to carry out full inspections at any of the sites. They were never allowed to return.

The full report of UNSCOM 243 can be found on the UNSCOM internet website at: www.un.org/Depts/unscom/s98-326.htm.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's contribution to the provision of a civil police service in Iraq. [137777]

Mr. Rammell: There are currently a total of 10 UK police officers in Iraq; three in Basra and seven in Baghdad. Our focus is on recruiting, training and deploying more Iraqi police officers. We plan to deploy a further 24 UK officers to Basra in the near future and up to a further 75 UK police officers towards a multinational effort to train new Iraqi recruits at a training facility in Jordan. The first nine of these 75 police officers are already in Jordan and another 27 are planning to depart on 23 November.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Iraqi (a) civilians, (b) police officers and (c) military police he estimates have been killed in terrorist attacks in Iraq since 1 May. [137995]

Mr. Rammell: There are no reliable statistics available for the number of civilian casualties. I expect to have further information shortly on the Iraqi police killed, and I will write to my hon. Friend.

Although the first battalion of the Iraqi Army completed training on 4 October, there are no Iraqi military police at present.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what efforts are being made in Iraq to re-employ the Iraqis who are unemployed; what discussions he has on assisting these people while unemployed; and if he will make a statement. [138702]

Mr. Rammell: The Coalition and Iraqi ministries have placed very significant emphasis on the need to sustain and stimulate employment in Iraq. The payment in full of public sector wages has returned rewards for work to many crucial employees. A micro-finance programme has been created for small businesses and rules on foreign direct investment and tariff holidays have also been introduced to promote the Iraqi private sector, protecting existing jobs and creating new ones.

As a result of the publication of the Iraqi Budgets for 2003 and 2004, for the first time in decades the revenue from Iraqi oil sales is being spent on meeting the needs of the Iraqi people. In combination with the many billions of dollars of international reconstruction funding being channelled into Iraq this public expenditure is stimulating demand for labour.

With the exception of senior Ba'athists, former members of the military who lost their job as a result of disbanding the Iraqi army have been paid a stipend. Many are also undergoing retraining to join the new Iraqi security forces.

Islamabad High Commission

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current status of the high commission in Islamabad; and when he expects it to be fully operational. [137832]

Mr. Mullin: As a result of the security situation in Pakistan our high commission in Islamabad operated for a substantial period with severely reduced staff. This reduced our visa section's capacity to provide a full service. In recent months service levels have increased significantly. Islamabad has handled over 81,000 entry clearance applications so far this year.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is committed to restoring a full visa operation in Pakistan as soon as is practical. The high commission in Islamabad announced on 17 November that it would be expanding the service it offers to include visitors who have travelled to the UK, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the United States of America within the last ten years. fiancé(e)s applying to settle in the UK, EU dependants and those applying for family reunion.

The Foreign Secretary will be writing to all members shortly to set out these changes and the way forward in more detail.

Israel/Palestine

Dr. Jenny Tonge To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons the UK representative on the UN Security Council abstained in the vote on 14 October on the resolution declaring illegal the Israeli construction of a security wall in the occupied territories of Palestine. [138664]

Mr. Rammell: We did not consider the resolution put to the Security Council on Israel's construction of a fence or wall in the West Bank reflected accurately the situation on the ground. It did not condemn suicide bombings and therefore did not acknowledge Israel's real security concerns. As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary said in the House on 14 October 2003, Official Report, column 3–4, we regard the building of the wall on Palestinian land as unlawful and we have serious concerns about its impact. But we judged that the text before the Security Council would not help implementation of the roadmap, and so we abstained.

The resolution subsequently put to an Emergency Special Session of the UN General Assembly realistically focused on the fence's negative impact on the peace process and local population. European Union proposals for a more balanced text were accepted in General Assembly negotiations and the UK, with our EU Partners, voted for that resolution.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Israeli Government concerning the status of Palestinians living between the Green Line and the new security fence in the Occupied Territories. [138673]

Mr. Rammell: My noble Friend the Baroness Symons of Vernham Dean raised our concerns about the "Closed Zone" between the fence and the Green Line on 22 October with the Israeli Ambassador, and on 29 October with the Israeli Minister for National Infrastructure.

The implementation of this order will have grave consequences for Palestinians who live between the fence and the 1967 border, and those who farm land in this area. We are in close touch with the US and other allies to ensure that Israel understands the opposition of the wider international community to the route of the fence.

Japan

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has made to the Government of Japan about its refusal to subscribe to the Hague Convention on International Child Abduction; and if he will make a statement. [137846]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 18 November 2003]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office encourages all countries with whom the UK has comity of law to join the Hague Convention on International Child Abduction (1980). We believe this comity of law exists between Japan and the UK and are committed to working with the Hague Secretariat to provide the Japanese Government with the information it needs to come to a decision on membership.

We are working with our partners in the EU to put the case for joining the Hague Convention to Japan. In recent exchanges between the EU and Japan on human right and consular issues, the EU has raised Japanese accession to the Hague Convention on International Child Abduction.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to make representations on behalf of individual citizens of the United Kingdom to the Government of Japan when allegations of child abduction from the United Kingdom to Japan arise; and if he will make a statement. [137847]

Mr Straw [holding answer 18 November 2003]: In cases of child abduction to countries that are not states party to the Hague Convention on International Child Abduction 1980. such as Japan, we advise parents to resolve custody and access issues through the domestic courts in the country concerned, or through mediation.

We would not make representations on behalf of British nationals to the foreign governments concerned as a matter of course, but would consider doing so in exceptional circumstances, for example once the court process has finished, in order properly to enforce the outcome.

Legislative Council of St. Helena

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will arrange to meet the members of the Legislative Council of St. Helena when he is on Ascension Island at the beginning of December. [139119]

Mr. Rammell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 17 November 2003 (UIN:139102).

Middle East

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Israeli Government on the destruction of (a) wells and (b) other infrastructure in Gaza by the Israeli army. [137431]

Mr. Rammell: We deplore the destruction of Palestinian infrastructure and we have asked Israel to cease such activity. We have not recently raised the destruction of wells in Gaza. Nonetheless, my noble Friend the Baroness Symons of Vernham Dean called in Israel's ambassador, Mr. Zvi Shtauber, on 22 October to raise our serious concerns about recent Israeli actions in Gaza. Our embassy in Tel Aviv has also raised our concerns with its Israeli interlocutors.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is on the exchange of Israeli and Palestinian/Lebanese prisoners. [139052]

Mr. Rammell: We are pleased to hear that the Israeli Cabinet has approved a deal on the exchange of Israeli, Palestinian and Lebanese prisoners. We hope that Hizbollah will follow suit, and that this matter is resolved soon.

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent initiatives have been taken by the United Kingdom to strengthen the provisions of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty; and what actions have been taken by the United Kingdom pursuant to obligations under Article 6 of the NPT. [133308]

Mr. MacShane: The United Kingdom believes that the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) is the cornerstone of the nuclear non-proliferation regime. We welcome the increased emphasis on the crucial non-proliferation aspects of the NPT that was in evidence at the Second Session of the Preparatory Committee (PrepCom) earlier this year and intend to work with other NPT members to strengthen the effectiveness of measures against nuclear proliferation.

We continue to stress the utmost importance of compliance with the Treaty. For example, we urge the DPRK to dismantle its nuclear weapons programme and return to compliance with the NPT. We strongly believe in the need for the universalisation of the treaty, and we regularly call on those states that have not yet acceded to do so whenever we have the opportunity.

The UK also continues to play a full part in the NPT Review process, including most recently in the PrepCom in April and May this year. The UK issued a working paper at the PrepCom on its research into verification of nuclear disarmament and presented the conclusions of this interim study at a seminar during the PrepCom. We anticipate publishing a further paper for the 2004 session of the PrepCom and a consolidated paper at the Review Conference in 2005.

Pakistan

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if (a) he and (b) officials from his Department will meet Christian groups in the UK to discuss rights for Christians in Pakistan. [138568]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials have regular contact with a range of UK-based NGOs, including those who campaign for the rights of Christians and other religious minorities in Pakistan. Officials will be meeting representatives of groups interested in the position of Christians in Pakistan within the next month.

Science and Technology Network

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the (a) funding, (b) remit and (c) functions of the science and technology network. [137535]

Mr. Rammell: Following a review in 2000 the FCO has established a new network of S & T (science and technology) attachés to help capitalise on and enhance the UK science base, to help companies access overseas innovation and technology, to facilitate high-tech trade and attract foreign investment and to use S & T as a vehicle to maximise the UK's impact abroad.

£3 million of funding was provided through SR2000. A further £750,000 of programme and staffing resource was made available through SR2002. By 2005 there will be a dedicated FCO S & T officer in 34 of our overseas posts in 22 countries. Several other posts have also joined the network and make use of S & T to further bilateral relations. The network reports to a wide customer base and works with a number of UK organisations with an interest in S & T overseas. These include Government Departments, parliamentary and devolved institutions, public sector bodies, universities, research and trade organisations and industry.

The FCO works in close partnership on international S & T issues, with the Office of Science and Technology (OST), the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) (especially its team of International Technology Promoters), UK Trade & Investment, the British Council and the Research Councils (RCUK). The FCO's S & T network adds value to the UK by addressing the following objectives:

To inform UK science policy development, benchmarking UK S & T performance against other nations and using S & T to secure UK influence in international negotiations.

To promote the UK as the international partner of choice in S & T collaboration, and attract overseas expertise, in areas which match or complement existing or potential UK strengths.

To enhance wealth creation by using S & T to facilitate trade and inward investment, with development of the UK knowledge economy through commercially edged high technology collaboration.

To use S & T for public diplomacy to project the UK as a creative, dynamic, technologically advanced nation.

The network is co-ordinated by the S & T unit within the Global Issues Directorate of the FCO. The work of the network and profiles of the new generation of S & T officers are presented in the FCO's S & T annual report, available on the FCO website: www.fco.gov.uk/policy/global-issues/science-and-technology.

The new network provides informed insight into S & T activity in the host country and an assessment of opportunities and risks for the UK. Through developing networks of opinion formers and key contacts the attachés are well placed to stimulate bilateral interactions. The integrated approach of the S & T attachés with their commercial and public diplomacy colleagues means projection of the UK as a world leading science base and development of a technologically innovative, knowledge based, economy.

Secondment

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people from science and technology backgrounds have been seconded into the Civil Service in his Department in each of the last five years for which data are available. [138623]

Mr. Rammell: In line with the 2001 Government Cross Cutting Review of Science and Research and the 2000 Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) review of science and technology (S&T) work, the FCO has increased the use of S&T expertise in its work. The FCO has established a new S&T network and recruited a new and diverse generation of high calibre S&T officers, both UK appointed and locally engaged. As well as scientific and technical expertise, many have experience in business, management consultancy and policymaking, as well as skills in diplomacy and international relations. For UK appointees, in each of the last five years the following numbers of people with a science and technology background have been recruited into the S&T network either on Fixed Term contract, loan from Other Government Departments or on secondment from outside the Civil Service:

Turkey

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of developments in the human rights situation in Turkey; what representations have been made to him; and if he will make a statement. [131444]

Mr. MacShane: We welcome Turkey's progress in the protection of human rights and the constitutional and legislative changes that it has made since October 2001. The recent 6th and 7th EU-related reform packages were particularly far reaching. Consistent and effective implementation of these is now crucial, so we are encouraged by the Turkish Government's increasing emphasis on the practical application of new laws, and its creation of a committee, under Foreign Minister Abdullah Gul, to monitor progress.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office monitor the human rights situation in Turkey closely. We maintain a strong network of contacts in both our missions in Ankara and Istanbul, and in London. We regularly meet local and multinational NGOs, European and International bodies which monitor Turkey's human rights performance and members of the government. We also attend human rights trials wherever possible and liaise with EU partners to maintain an EU presence at key events throughout the country. We conduct an on-going bilateral dialogue with Turkey on human rights, the most recent round of which took place in Ankara on 23 October.

For a full assessment of the human rights situation in Turkey I refer the hon. Member to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Annual Human Rights Report 2003, which is available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website: www.fco.gov.uk/policy/global-issues/humanrights/reports.

Website

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the content and design of his Department's website. [139367]

Mr Mullin: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) website (www.fco.gov.uk) is kept under constant review. The site was significantly re-designed and re-structured when it was re-launched in May 2002. A leading web design agency developed the new site, after consulting widely with FCO stakeholders. Usability testing on the new site was conducted in August 2002 by a specialist company using members of the public. The recommendations of their report were implemented and the findings informed a further re-design of the homepage which went live in January 2003. In July, a specialist IT consultancy, assessed the website as part of an overall review of FCO electronic information. Their recommendations are in the process of being implemented. Customer feedback is constantly monitored and assessed.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Bechtel

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will list the contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel for agencies responsible to his Department and its predecessor in each year since 1997, stating in each case (a) the nature of the work, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the duration of the contract; and if he will make a statement; [137889]

(2) if he will list the contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel in each year after 1997 by the Department of Social Security, stating in each case (a) the nature of the work, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the duration of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [137735]

Maria Eagle: Neither the Department for Work and Pensions (formed in June 2001) nor its predecessors has had any contracts with Bechtel in each year since 1997.

Benefits

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he will take to help (a) housebound and (b) disabled people access new systems for receiving benefits and tax credits. [139150]

Mr. Pond: The Department is committed to ensure that all people have access to their benefits and pensions; indeed, many housebound and disabled customers have been paid by Direct Payment for some time.

All customers, including housebound and disabled people, are being provided with information on all of the account options suitable for Direct Payment. It is for customers themselves to decide which type of account they wish to have their money paid into. Once customers contact the Department they are able to talk to an advisor who can help them understand the options open to them.

Third party access will continue to be available under Direct Payment for those customers who may need someone to collect their benefit or pension for them.

However, we have always recognised that there will be a small group of people who we cannot pay directly into an account. We are developing an exceptions method of payment to pay this group.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he intends to reply to the letter to him dated 4 June from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mrs. Howarth (Fallows). [127746]

Mr. Blunkett: I have been asked to reply.

A response was sent to my right hon. Friend on 16 July 2003.

Disability Discrimination

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) representations and (b) discussions he has had in the last 12 months on the viability of extending the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 to protect people who have progressive illnesses with particular reference to cancer, multiple sclerosis and HIV/AIDS; and if he will make a statement. [139447]

Maria Eagle: In their legislative review published in April 2003 The Disability Rights Commission (DRC) reiterated our proposals in "Towards Inclusion" to extend the definition of disability to cover more people with HIV and cancer and recommended a further change that would benefit more people with multiple sclerosis. Since then officials have been involved in a number of discussions with the DRC about the proposals.

Officials have received a range of other representations regarding the definition of disability from disabled people, civil rights groups and organisations that represent disabled people, urging change and supportive of the proposals in "Towards Inclusion". The majority of these have come from people concerned about HIV infection. This included a letter campaign earlier this year supporting the case for extending the DDA to cover HIV from point of diagnosis.

Disabled People

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures have been taken by the Government since 1997 to advance civil rights legislation for disabled people. [139291]

Housing Benefit

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment he has made of the effects of the Local Housing Allowance Pathfinder scheme in Blackpool; [139583]

(2) if he will make a statement on the Housing Benefit Pathfinder schemes; [139584]

(3) what estimate he has made of the number of housing benefit recipients who will be affected by the introduction of the Local Housing Allowance Pathfinder scheme in Blackpool; [139585]

(4) what guidance his Department has given to local authorities on consultation with local landlords during the operation of the Housing Benefit Pathfinder schemes. [139586]

Mr. Pond: The Local Housing Allowance (LHA) was launched in Blackpool on 17 November. Blackpool is the first of nine local authority Pathfinders that will operate the Local Housing Allowance over the next two years; the remaining eight authorities will go live between December and February.

For de-regulated private rented sector tenants in Pathfinder areas, benefit will no longer depend on individual rents but will be based on a standard amount for the area and size of household. This will allow tenants to trade between the quality and price of their accommodation.

The LHA will also provide a more transparent, efficient and fairer system. Most tenants will take responsibility for receiving their benefit and paying an appropriate amount of it as rent to their landlord. No claimant will be worse off when the LHA is introduced, and we estimate that in Blackpool around one in three Housing Benefit claimants in the de-regulated private rented sector will benefit financially.

Pathfinder authorities have been encouraged to work closely with landlords and they have all held meetings with local landlords to explain how the LHA will work and the safeguards that have been put in place; however, we have not issued any specific guidance on consultation.

There will be a comprehensive evaluation of LHA Pathfinders, which will include interviews with claimants, landlords, local authority staff and stakeholder organisations, as well as an analysis of administrative data. This is already under way.

Local Reference Rents

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what instructions he has issued to the Chief Rent Officer in London on the localities used in the determination of housing benefit local reference rents since the Rent Officers (Housing Benefit Functions) (Amendment) Order 2001. [139107]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The post of "Chief Rent Officer" no longer exists, and both localities and local reference rents are a matter for the Rent Service, which is an Executive Agency of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. No instructions have been issued to the Rent Service on localities used in the determination of local reference rents since the laying of the 2001 Order.

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many localities were being used in the determination of housing benefit local reference rents in London in November (a) 2001, (b) 2002 and (c) 2003. [139108]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

There is no record of the numbers of localities used in the determination of local reference rents in these years. Localities are decided by the Rent Officer using definitions in the Rent Officers (Housing Benefit Functions) Order. Localities are influenced by residential property markets, which are fluid. Therefore, any statistical publication will only ever be able to provide a 'snap shot' at any given time.

The Rent Service intends to begin publishing information about local reference rents for England in the late spring of 2004.

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent reports he has received on housing benefit shortfalls experienced by claimants arising from local reference rent restrictions in London. [139111]

Mr. Pond: The principle of rent restrictions in Housing Benefit is now well established. It ensures that claimants are able to afford reasonably priced rental accommodation in the locality that they choose to live in, whilst ensuring that the cost to the taxpayer is kept at a reasonable level.

We have not received recently any formal reports on this matter.

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many localities are currently being used by the Rent Service in England to determine local reference rents. [139112]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

There is no on-going record of the numbers of local reference rent localities in England. Localities are influenced by residential properties markets that are fluid. Any statistical publication will only ever be able to give a 'snap shot' at any given time.

However, the Rent Service intends to publish information about local reference rents for England in the late spring of 2004.

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 15 May 2003, Official Report, column 373W, to the hon. Member for Waveney (Mr. Blizzard), when the Rent Service will begin to publish information about local reference rents for different parts of the country. [139113]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Rent Service intends to publish information about local reference rents for England in the late spring of 2004.

Occupational Pension Schemes

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimates his Department has made of (a) the number of occupational pension schemes which have failed to meet their full obligations to employees since May 1997 and (b) the number of employees and pensioners who have been affected. [137580]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is not available.

Pension Credit

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on uptake of the pension credit in Wirral South. [139722]

Malcolm Wicks: As at 17 October, 2003 the number of people receiving Pension Credit in the Wirral, South constituency was 2,110. 1.97 million households in Great Britain (around 2.3 million individuals) are already receiving Pension Credit with 1.2 million households, (around 1.4 million individuals) receiving more money than they did before. The average award is £47.10 per week.

Pension Funds

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to protect the assets in the pension funds of former nationalised industries. [138373]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. member to the written answer I gave him on 17 November 2003, Official Report, Vol. 413, column 48W.

Pensions

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) representations and (b) discussions he has had in the last 12 months on encouraging (i) employers and (ii) employees to contribute to stakeholder pensions; and if he will make a statement. [139442]

Malcolm Wicks: Ministers have received correspondence from, or had meetings with, a variety of interests including hon. Members, employer, employee and pension industry representatives about encouraging employers and employees to contribute to stakeholder pensions.

The Employer Task Force, set up as a result of the Government's Green Paper on Pensions has recently discussed this important issue. The Task Force will be considering it further as part of its ongoing work to increase and extend occupational and private pension provision.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) representations and (b) discussions he has had in the last 12 months on the take-up of occupational pensions by part-time workers; and if he will make a statement. [139443]

Malcolm Wicks: The issue of lower occupational pension coverage by part-time compared to full-time workers was brought up for discussion during the Green Paper Consultation events by various different employers, women's lobby groups and other organisations with an interest in the Women and Pensions Agenda.

The Government is seeking to address this inequality through the Informed Choice Programme. One example is the employer-based pilots we propose to introduce in spring next year. These pilots are aimed at those employers who do not contribute at least 3 per cent to a private pension for their employees and will require the employer to offer information or advice within the workplace to help employees make their own private pension arrangements.

Making sure that all employees, including part-time workers, fully appreciate the value of employer contributions if these are offered, will also be an integral part of the Informed Choice programme.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment he has made of the effect on low income households of delaying commencement of paying state retirement pension until the beginning of the week following the birthday that brings entitlement to that pension; [139485]

(2) to commence entitlement to state pension from the actual date of the (a) 65th birthday for men and (b) 60th birthday, for women. [139486]

Malcolm Wicks: There are no plans to change the date from which entitlement to State Pension commences.

The rule that entitlement begins on the payday on or following the day on which a man reaches his 65th birthday, or a woman her 60th birthday, derives from the fact that State Pension is paid in advance. In practice any effect upon low income households is beneficial as the following chart shows. In the case of bereavement benefits, which are also paid in advance, there is no change upon reaching pension age, since the same payday is maintained.

Date	Payment in Advance	Payment in Arrears
Thursday 4 December 2003	Man becomes 65 years/woman becomes 60 years.
Monday 8 December 2003	Entitled to standard rate State Pension. Receives £77.45 full week's payment for the coming week	Would receive £44.28 (4/7ths of £77.45) for the period 4.12.03 to 7.12.03

Notes:
In respect of the period up to Wednesday 3 December 2003 the individual from a low income household would typically receive one or more of the following, paid around this time:
final earnings, monthly or weekly in arrears, with holiday pay, week in hand etc.
incapacity benefit/jobseeker's allowance—paid fortnightly in arrears income support—paid weekly or at another period, in arrears

Performance Monitoring

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total cost was of (a) setting, (b) monitoring and (c) measuring the performance targets for his Department in 2002–03; and how many and what grades of civil servants monitor these targets. [137944]

Maria Eagle: Performance targets for the department were agreed as part of Spending Review 2002. The monitoring and measurement of PSA targets forms part of departmental performance management. Performance management is an integral part of the day to day running of the department, and as such it is not possible to separate the specific costs out. The monitoring of progress towards, and performance against, the department's PSA targets is undertaken by a wide variety of staff at all levels of the organisation.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the performance targets that (a) his Department and (b) its agencies and non-departmental public bodies are required to meet; and if he will specify for each target (i) who sets it and (ii) who monitors achievement against it. [137960]

Maria Eagle: Key performance targets for the Department for Work and Pensions are agreed as part of the Spending Review and the latest set were published in Spending Review 2002: Public Service Agreements 2003–2006 (Cm 5571). The department monitors progress towards the targets along with HM Treasury and progress is reported regularly.

The department has four agencies:

Jobcentre Plus

The Pension Service

The Child Support Agency

The Appeals Service.

The department also sponsors twelve non-departmental public bodies:

Executive bodies:

Health and Safety Commission

Health and Safety Executive

Disability Rights Commission

Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority

Pensions Compensation Board

Remploy Ltd

Tribunal body:

Office of the Pensions Ombudsman

Advisory bodies:

Disability Living Allowance Advisory Board

Industrial Injuries Advisory Council

Social Security Advisory Committee

National Employment Panel

Disability Employment Advisory Committee.

Agency performance targets are set by the Secretary of State and are set out in the Business Plans of our Agencies and, where appropriate, in the Business Plans and Annual Performance Agreements of the Non Departmental Public Bodies. They are available in the Library.

Achievement against the targets is monitored as part of the department's performance management, which is an integral part of the day to day running of the department. Monitoring of progress towards, and performance against, the targets is undertaken by a wide variety of staff at all levels of the organisation, and includes meetings between Ministers and Chief Executives or equivalent.

Post Office Card Accounts

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners receive their state pension by means of (a) direct payment into a bank or building society account, (b) direct payment into a Post Office card account and (c) a pension book. [114677]

Mr. Pond: The information has been complied form data available on 6 September 2003.

The number of live accounts in payment of State Pension (RP) at 6 September 2003 paid by:

(a) Direct Payment into a Bank or Building Society Account:	4,860,832
(b) Direct Payment into a Post Office card account:	10,476
(c) a pension Book:	4,327,440
(d) Other (Payable Order, GIRO):	49,630

The above table does not include Retirement Pension paid with another benefit, for which an analysis of the method of payment is not available.

The numbers being paid by direct payment are expected to grow rapidly in the coming months as 20 week order books begin to expire and customers begin to receive payment into their chosen bank, building society and post office card accounts.

Public Employees (Essex)

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many full-time workers were employed by the Pensions Agency in Essex on 1 September. [139516]

Maria Eagle: At 1 September, 224 full time staff (permanent and temporary staff) were employed by The Pension Service in Essex.

Social Exclusion

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what research his Department has conducted into the effect of benefit sanctions on claimants with reference to social exclusion; and if he will make a statement. [138754]

Mr. Pond: No research has been conducted by the Department into the effect of benefit sanctions on claimants with specific reference to social exclusion. Research on the effect of sanctions, though not specifically related to social exclusion, was carried out and published in 2001 under the title "The Impact of the 26 Sanctioning Regime" (Report number ESR100). A copy of this is available in the Library. Basic quarterly statistical reports on sanctions are available in the Library.

Work-related Stress

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases of work-related stress have been reported in his Department in each of the last three years; how much compensation has been paid to employees; how many work days have been lost due to work-related stress, and at what cost; what procedures have been put in place to reduce work-related stress, and at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [136846]

Maria Eagle: Information is available only for 2002–03. In addition, where individuals indicate on their medical certificate that 'stress' is the reason for sickness absence, generally this will not differentiate between workplace stress and stress that might have been caused by other factors, for example domestic issues.

For 2002–03, there were 7,576 reported cases of stress. (This will include individuals who might have had several periods of stress-related sickness absence.) That led to 162,814 working days being lost at a cost of around £8.5 million. We do not collect information on the amount of compensation (if appropriate) that might have been paid to individuals. This could only be provided at a disproportionate cost.

The DWP takes seriously its obligation to provide a supportive working environment for its staff. One way in which this is discharged is through our Employee Assistance provider, a confidential service which staff can call on 24 hours a day where the need arises. In addition, we will do all we reasonably can to address any workplace issues that might contribute to a person's stress levels. The Department is a key stakeholder in the Government's 'Revitalising Health and Safety' initiative and has signed up to the principle of the 'Government Setting an Example' agenda. The DWP is also participating in the HSE Management Standards pilot in five areas. The pilot is designed to combat workplace stress. If successful, we will look to introduce the Management Standards across the organisation.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Permitted Development Rights

7. Mrs. Calton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on progress with the review of permitted development rights. [139313]

Keith Hill: As part of the planning reform agenda the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister undertook to review the permitted development rights granted by the Town and Country Planning (Permitted Development Rights) Order 1995. As a first step, a research report commissioned from Nathaniel Lichfield & Partners Ltd was published on 10 September.

No decisions have been made about any changes to permitted development rights. Full public consultation will take place before any changes are made.

Allotments

8. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps his Department is taking to promote the wider (a) use and (b) provision of allotments. [139314]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister supports the development of green spaces, including allotments, parks, city farms and playgrounds. We have introduced higher restrictions on the disposal of allotments and distributed guidance on allotment management.

Coalfield Regeneration Trust

9. Jeff Ennis: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact of the Coalfield Regeneration Trust on the former coalfield areas. [139315]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, has been pleased with the positive response of the coalfield communities to the work carried out by Coalfields Regeneration Trust since its launch in 1999. I am aware that the Trust is currently undertaking an independent evaluation of its work and I look forward to seeing the results of this shortly.

Local Government Finance (Cheshire)

10. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent representations he has received about the impact on local councils in Cheshire of the formula funding arrangements. [139316]

Mr. Raynsford: Since the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister published proposals for formula grant in 2003–04, we have received 75 representations from the public, local MPs, councillors and local authorities, mostly about the impact on the education formula.

Planning Policy/Pollution

12. Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent representations he has received about local planning policies and light pollution. [139318]

Keith Hill: In the last few months the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has received approximately one letter per week from hon. Members and members of the public on the subject of light pollution and nuisance lighting. None has specifically addressed local planning policies and light pollution. The Campaign to Protect Rural England has also submitted its Night Blight report.

Prefabricated Housing

13. Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his policy is under his Department's Decent Homes guidance with regard to local authority decisions on whether to keep prefabricated housing. [139319]

Keith Hill: There are no types of building that are automatically considered to fail the decent homes standard just because of their construction. Prefabricated homes are as acceptable as other types of dwelling if they meet the requirements set out in the decent homes standard.

The guidance on implementing the standard makes it clear that investment decisions should be made in the context of the local housing market and on the future demand for the stock.

Neighbourhood Wardens

14. Rob Marris: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to ensure that achievements of Neighbourhood Warden schemes are recognised by means of awards. [139320]

Yvette Cooper: An award scheme is already in operation. I presented the 2003 achievement awards at the wardens' annual conference held in Harrogate, last Friday, which included an award for Community Safety for Wolverhampton. Details of the award winners are available in the Library of the House.

Arm's Length Management

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 3 November 2003, Official Report, column 496W, on arm's length management, what percentage of the additional £2 billion announced in the Sustainable Communities Plan will be invested directly in local authority arm's length management organisation managed housing stock. [139141]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects at least 95 per cent. of the £2 billion funding for arms length management organisations (ALMOs) announced in the Sustainable Communities Plan in February for the years 2003–04 to 2005–06 to be invested directly in bringing local authority housing stock up to the Decent Homes standard. ALMOs may devote up to 5 per cent. of their allocations to environmental or other works designed to enhance the sustainability of their investment in Decent Homes.

Asbestos

Dr. Cable: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been spent by his Department and its agencies on (a) asbestos surveys and (b) the management and removal of asbestos since 1 January 2001; and what budget is available to (i) commission asbestos surveys and (ii) manage and remove asbestos from buildings in (A) 2003 and (B) 2004. [130915]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister came into existence in May 2002. The spend to date within those properties now under control of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is as follows:

a. Asbestos surveys : £53,916.88

b. Management and Removal of Asbestos : £149,496.72

The budget available:

(i) For commissioning asbestos surveys in 2003 is included in the figure at (a) above. Budgets for asbestos surveys in 2004 are being developed.

(ii) For management and removal of asbestos in 2003 is £130,000 and in 2004 is £800,000.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 15 July 2003, Official Report, column 287W, on asbestos, if he will list the buildings identified as containing asbestos. [130940]

Yvette Cooper: Asbestos surveys undertaken in accordance with the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 2002 have revealed that the following Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's buildings contain asbestos-based materials:

Fire Service College—Moreton-in-Marsh, Gloucestershire;

Government Office for London—Riverwalk House, Westminster;

HQ Building—Ashdown House—Victoria Street, Westminster; and Government Office for the North East—Wellbar House, Newcastle.

Borrowing Guidelines

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will make a statement on the new prudential borrowing guidelines for local government; [139700]

(2) what the estimated cost of repayments would be per million pounds borrowed and invested in capital schemes within the framework of the new prudential borrowing scheme. [139701]

Mr. Raynsford: The new capital finance system will start on 1 April 2004. The legislative framework is in the Local Government Act 2003. This is supplemented by a code of practice on prudential borrowing, published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy, to which authorities are required by the Act to have regard.

It is not possible to estimate future borrowing costs, which will reflect prevailing interest rates and the terms of loan agreements. However, authorities can currently obtain loans repayable after thirty years at a fixed annual interest rate of about 5 per cent.

Council Reserves

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the financial value was of the reserves for (a) Shropshire County Council and (b) Shrewsbury and Atcham Borough Council in each year since 1997. [138884]

Mr. Raynsford: The reserves of Shropshire County Council and Shrewsbury and Atcham Borough Council at the beginning of each financial year since 1997–98 are tabled as follows:

1997–98	5,969	8,852
1998–99	6,516	4,745
1999–2000	6,936	7,944
2000–01	6,367	8,490
2001–02	5,042	4,562
2002–03	5,509	n/a

Source:
1997–98 to 2002–03 Revenue Summary Returns.

Figures include schools' reserves, other earmarked reserves and unallocated reserves. The 2002–03 figure for Shropshire is not yet available.

Council Tax

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate the Government has made of the average level of council tax for the next financial year; and if he will make a statement. [138150]

Mr. Raynsford: Decisions on council tax levels are for local authorities to take after consulting with their local electorates and taxpayers. The Government does make projections of the council tax yield in future years for the purposes of managing the public finances. These projections are based on a number of assumptions about changes in council tax levels, the tax base, the collection rate and council tax benefit payments. The level is assumed to rise in line with past trend, and does not represent a value judgment about what local authorities may choose to do in the future. These figures are not a Government view as to what constitutes an acceptable rise in council tax, and simply represent an assumption for public expenditure planning purposes. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister also makes a technical assumption in relation to the assumed national council tax which is used for the purposes of the formula which we use to make the annual grant distribution to all local authorities.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, what the (a) band D council tax and (b) average council tax paid in (i) Plymouth, (ii) Torbay, (iii) Torridge, (iv) West Devon, (v) south Hams, (vi) Exeter, (vii) Teignbridge, (viii) mid Devon, (ix) east Devon and (x) north Devon were in financial year 2003–04, including all precepts. [139914]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is published on the website of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister at http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/ctax/ctax034.htm. The requested figures can be found there at columns 1 and 5 of Table 2, "2003–04 council taxes (average per dwelling and Band D for two adults): individual local authorities". The information is also available in the Library, in Table 2 that accompanied the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister "News Release 2003/0050: 25 March 2003".

Departmental Energy Use

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much (a) electricity and (b) other energy his Department has used in each year since 1997 (i) in total and (ii) per square metre; what the projected use is for each of the following years for which forecasts are made; what plans he has to reduce usage; and if he will make a statement. [135045]

Yvette Cooper: For parts (a) and (b) of the answer I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on 3 November 2003, Official Report, column 404W.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created in May 2002 and published its Greening Operations Policy Statement in October 2002. In this it states an objective to meet the cross-Government target of an on-going 1 per cent. per annum reduction in greenhouse gas emissions against 1999–2000 levels (expressed in terms of carbon equivalent emissions).

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Greening Operations Policy Statement also identifies plans to reduce energy usage that include best practice advice to managers and staff, purchase of energy efficient equipment, introduction of more energy-efficient technologies and where possible increasing the proportion of energy obtained from embedded sources.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) staff expressed as a full-time equivalent and (b) press and public affairs staff were employed (i) in his Ministerial office, (ii) in other ministerial offices within his Department, (iii) by non-departmental bodies, (iv) by executive agencies and (v) by his Department in (A) 1996–97, (B) 1997–98 and (C) on the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [138127]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created on 29 May 2002.

Data on staffing levels in the Civil Service is collected from departments and agencies twice yearly, in April and October. The latest figures, for 1 April 2003, were published on 16 October 2003. These are available on the World Wide Web at www.civil-service.gov.uk/statistics. Copies of these documents are also available in the Libraries of the House.

Cabinet Office publishes information on non-departmental public bodies in its annual publication 'Public Bodies'. The information includes details of the number of staff employed by each Non Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs) at 31 March each year. "Public Bodies 2003" is available on the Cabinet Office website at www.cabinet-office.gov.uk/agencies-publicbodies

At 1 April 2003, six full-time equivalent staff were employed in the ministerial office of the Deputy Prime Minister. A further 22 staff were employed in other Office of the Deputy Prime Minister ministerial offices. The press office provides a centralised media service on behalf of the Office as a whole. As at 1 April there were 21.8 full-time equivalent press officers. Information requested on the number of press office staff employed in the NDPBs and executive agencies is not held centrally, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Disabled Children (Play Areas)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, what steps his Department is taking to promote good practice on making play areas more accessible for disabled children. [139674]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister published Developing "Accessible Play Space"—"A Good Practice Guide" on 12 November 2003. Copies of these are available in the Libraries of the House. "Developing Accessible Play Space"—"A Good Practice Guide" gives practical advice to play space providers on how to make outdoor play areas more accessible for disabled children. It will help play space providers to understand the issues that disabled children and their families face when using play spaces, and provides good practice examples of how to improve existing space as well as issues to consider when creating new ones.

Copies of the guide have been sent to all local authorities in England, as well as to housing associations and other play space providers. The guide is also available on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website www.odpm.gov.uk

Emergency Night Shelters

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, how many people in each local authority were turned away from emergency night shelter accommodation in each year since 1997. [138885]

Yvette Cooper: This information is not collected centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Energy Performance

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement in respect of his policy on the labelling of buildings open to the public in terms of their energy performance. [139147]

Phil Hope: By January 2006, the Energy Performance of Buildings Directive requires the United Kingdom to oblige owners of larger buildings occupied by certain types of public authorities and institutions, to openly display energy performance labels. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is considering how best to implement these requirements in the next major revision of the Building Regulations.

Energy Policy

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, if he will make a statement, in relation to his Office, on (a) the amount of energy consumed, (b) spending on (i) energy and (ii) energy efficiency measures, (c) the amount saved through energy efficiency measures and (d) energy policy in each of the last five years. [108855]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created in May 2002 and as such there have been no specific annual energy returns published to date. Energy figures for 2002–03 are being collected and will be published in due course.

The energy policy of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister includes compliance with cross-government targets and is as contained within the departmental Greening Operations Policy Statement as published in October 2002.

Fire and Rescue Service

Mr. Francois: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many support staff were employed by the Essex Fire and Rescue Service on 1 September 2003. [139663]

Mr. Raynsford: As at 31 March 2003 (the latest figures available), there were 179 (full-time equivalent) support staff employed by Essex Fire and Rescue Service. The actual headcount number of support staff employed was 197.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, how many community education vans were retained by the Essex Fire and Rescue Service on 1 September. [139665]

Mr. Raynsford: There are four dedicated community education vans retained by Essex Fire and Rescue Service as at 1 September 2003.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what impact he proposes regional assemblies will have on the structure of the Fire Service in North Yorkshire. [140168]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government made it clear in the White Paper "Our Fire and Rescue Service" (Cm 5808 June 2003) that in those parts of the country that choose to have an elected regional assembly one of its functions will be to oversee a regional fire and rescue service. This will mean fewer individual fire authorities. Day-to-day operational response, fire prevention and community fire safety work, however, will continue as now to be delivered at a local level.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the reasons for introducing integrated personal development systems for the fire services in the South West Region. [140186]

Mr. Raynsford: Integrated Personal Development System (IPDS) is a national system which is being rolled out across the whole country. The reasons for introducing it are set out in the White Paper "Our Fire and Rescue Service" (June 2003).

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with individual fire authorities on integrated personal development systems. [140187]

Mr. Raynsford: I have had no such discussions. But fire and rescue authorities are represented by the Local Government Association on the project board taking forward the integrated personal development system (IDPS) within the Fire and Rescue Service Modernisation Programme.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the estimated cost is of introducing integrated personal development systems for the fire service in the South West Region. [140188]

Mr. Raynsford: This is a matter for fire authorities in the South West.

Green Belt (Development)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, how many applications have been received for development on green belt land since 1997; how many applications he approved for the development to proceed; and what the total size of the green belt area was on which he approved development. [138130]

Keith Hill: The information requested is not held centrally by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Homelessness (Older People)

Linda Perham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, what plans he has to tackle homelessness among older people. [136656]

Yvette Cooper: The Government are determined to tackle all forms of homelessness including amongst older people and wants to prevent it occurring wherever possible. This was set out in the March 2002 report, "More than a roof, which focused on the problems homeless people face as much as on places where they live.

Under current legislation vulnerability due to old age is a priority need category. This ensures that vulnerable older people who become unintentionally homeless, or threatened with homelessness, must be provided with suitable accommodation by the local authority.

In addition, the Homelessness Act 2002 required each local authority in England to undertake a review of homelessness in their area and put a strategy in place by the end of July 2003 to ensure that accommodation and support is available within their districts for homeless people and those at risk of homelessness. The Homelessness Directorate within the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has also issued good practice guidance to assist local authorities in the development of their strategies including information on addressing the needs of older people who are homeless or vulnerable to homelessness.

Houses in Multiple Occupation

Mr Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many houses are in multiple occupation; how many of them are registered; and how many local authorities have registration schemes. [136902]

Keith Hill: According to the English House Condition Survey 2001, there are 638,000 houses in multiple occupation (HMOs) in England, of which 338,140 are in the private rented sector (excluding those with resident landlords). According to the Housing Investment Programme Return 2003, 202 local authorities in England operate registration schemes and 14,902 HMOs are registered under them.

Housing

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been spent by each local authority on (a) arm's length management organisations, (b) private finance initiative and (c) stock retention in relation to ownership of housing. [138681]

Keith Hill: A table showing figures for 2002–03 the capital spend by each local authority, management and maintenance expenditure and the amount that is Arms Length Management Organisation (ALMO) funding is available in the Library of the House. The first ALMOs qualified to start spending in the final quarter of 2002–03, with actual expenditure for 2002–03 recorded at £55.9million.

It is not possible to provide information on spend for PFI schemes as the commercial position of schemes still in procurement must be protected. However, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has allocated a total of £760 million credits to 16 schemes. Two of those schemes are signed: Islington (£75million) and Manchester (£39 million). The other Pathfinders are Newham, Camden, NE Derbyshire, Sandwell, Leeds and Reading. The Round 2 schemes are Islington, Newham, Lewisham, NE Derbyshire, Manchester, Leeds, Oldham and Ashford.

11. James Purnell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on investment in social housing. [139317]

Keith Hill: Under this Government, total housing investment has more than trebled, rising from £1.4 billion in 1997–98 to £4.9 billion in 2004–05. Amongst other positive developments, this investment has served to improve nearly one million social homes to the decent homes standard already, and we expect to bring another 500,000 social homes up to the standard by spring of next year. Meanwhile, we are investing £5 billion in more affordable housing over the next three years—that is double the level of investment we inherited in 1997.

15. Andrew Selous: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his policy is regarding owners of ex-local authority homes who wish to sell them back to the local authority. [139321]

Keith Hill: It is up to landlords to decide whether they wish to repurchase homes that they have previously sold, having regard to local housing needs. But we know that some people who have bought council homes, particularly flats, have subsequently found themselves in financial difficulties. So since April 1999 we have helped authorities to buy back such homes, by covering 35 per cent of the costs they incur if they spend £50,000 per year or more. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are ensuring that similar provisions continue to operate under the new local government capital finance system that starts on 1 April 2004.

IT Projects

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much he spent on IT (a) licences, (b) maintenance, (c) software and (d) hardware in the last financial year. [125774]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created on 29 May 2002. The information held by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and its agencies differs in detail due to the different vote and trading account practices and different IT service supply arrangements. Some of the information requested is subsumed in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's strategic investment in IT. To provide accurate figures for the period and with the degree of breakdown requested is not possible without incurring disproportionate cost.

Such information as is available indicates that in 2002–03 ODPM HQ, with DFT HQ, spent

£2,100,000 on hardware

£1,540,000 on software

£1,018,000 on maintenance and consumables

Large Scale Voluntary Transfers

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister on how many occasions the Audit Commission has raised with him issues relating to individual ballots for large scale voluntary transfer in the last three years. [140122]

Keith Hill: None.

Meeting Costs

Norman Lamb: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many times the (a) Urban Sounding Board, (b) Core Cities Working Group and (c) Arson Control Forum have met since they were established; how much each meeting cost; what the (i) annual budget since inception, (ii) projected budget for the next two years and (iii) current work programme of each body is; and if he will make a statement. [139783]

Keith Hill: (a) The Urban Sounding Board met 9 times between April 2001 and September 2002.

Members were invited to join the Board in a voluntary capacity and received no remuneration. The estimated average costs of refreshments and travel and subsistence claims for each meeting were £900.

(i) and (ii) There was no specific annual budget for the Urban Sounding Board. Meeting costs were paid for out of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister Urban Policy Directorate's general running costs budget.

(iii) The Sounding Board is to be replaced with smaller ad hoc working groups of external advisors and officials with specific time-limited remits focusing on key issues of concern to the Department, such as obstacles to physical regeneration and skills. Membership of these groups will be voluntary and non-remunerative.

(b) The Core Cities Working Group has met 14 times since its inception in April 2002. Members of the Working Group, including officials from central government and the Regional Development Agencies and local government officers from the Core Cities, attend meetings as part of their normal duties. The estimated average cost of refreshments for each meeting has been around £70. No other meeting costs have been incurred.

(i) and ii) No annual budgets have been set for the Working Group as running costs are minimal. Organisations participating all bear their own costs.

(iii) The Working Group is currently contributing to the evidence base supporting the government's Public Service Agreement target for regional economic performance. It is seeking to understand how competitive cities can contribute to improvements in regional economic growth through four sub groups focusing on: skills, innovation, better connectivity between cities and regions, and Strategic leadership, with a particular focus on key issues likely to make a difference. The group's work will feed into policy measures to be agreed as part of the Spending Review 2004.

(c) Since it was set up in April 2001 the Arson Control Forum has met 5 times. The estimated average cost of the room, refreshments and travel and substance claims for each meeting was £650.

(i) and (ii) The annual Arson Control Forum budget since its formal launch is:

	£ million
2001–02	1.20
2002–03	1.36
2003–04	4.02 (projected)
2004–05	4.47 (projected)
2005–06	4.80 (projected)

(iii) The Arson Control Forum's main activities in its current work programme are the partial funding of local arson reduction projects in England & Wales, supported by a research programme into various aspects of the arson problem (e.g. the relationship between car arson and other car crimes), and the publication of best practice guides on arson prevention.

Pathfinders Programme

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what evaluation of the Pathfinders programme has taken place. [139675]

Keith Hill: Individual schemes will be assessed by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and scrutinised independently by the Audit Commission before resources from the Housing Market Renewal Fund are allocated.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister shall be establishing monitoring systems that will enable us to see the effects of Pathfinder projects on both their own and neighbouring areas. In addition, we shall be evaluating the overall effectiveness of individual Pathfinders' approaches and the programme as a whole.

An evaluation of the Housing PFI Pathfinder programme has begun. The first part identified a framework for the evaluation programme. This is now completed. Following on from this, work is now underway on a baseline evaluation—the first phase of which has been completed. The findings can be found on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website http://www.odpm.gov.uk/stellent/groups/odpm_housing/documents/page/odpm_house_609810.pdf.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister in what ways (a) the West Midlands and (b) Coventry have benefited from Pathfinders. [139676]

Keith Hill: Both the North Staffordshire and the Birmingham and Sandwell Market Renewal Pathfinders are situated in the West Midlands region. Both have currently received funding of £6.66 million. This money is being used to prepare the Pathfinder's scheme and to fund some early interventions. The two Pathfinders are now currently in the process of preparing their strategic schemes to bid for resources from the Housing Market Renewal fund.

Coventry does not benefit from Housing Market Renewal activity because it lies outside of any of the nine Housing Market Renewal intervention areas.

Performance Monitoring

Mr. Flight: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total cost was of (a) setting, (b) monitoring and (c) measuring the performance targets for his Department in 2002–03; and how many and what grades of civil servants monitor these targets. [137949]

Yvette Cooper: Performance targets for the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister were agreed as part of Spending Review 2002. The monitoring and measurement of PSA targets forms part of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's performance management systems. Performance management is an integral part of the day to day running of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and as such it is not possible to separate the specific costs out. The monitoring of progress towards and performance against the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's PSA targets is undertaken by a wide variety of staff at all levels of the organisation.

Regional Assembly Elections

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, whether he plans to offer advice and guidance to local authorities in areas subject to regional assembly referendums on the extent to which they can publicise their own views on the recommendations of the Boundary Committee on the proposed new local government structure in their area. [139033]

Mr. Raynsford: No—the rules on such matters are clearly laid out in the Code of Practice on Local Authority Publicity.

The Boundary Committee will be giving its recommendations wide publicity. Its reports will explain the views of those that made submissions or representations, including those of the local authorities affected.

Local authorities may, within reason, make known their views on a preferred outcome in a referendum. These are matters for the judgement of the local authorities affected but the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not believe that it is either necessary or appropriate for them to spend council tax payers' money on further publicity.

Registered Social Housing

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what (a) guidance and (b) advice his Department published for tenants of registered social landlords, concerning (i) their rights in respect of consultation over demolition programmes and (ii) major policy changes; [139889]

(2) what (a) guidance and (b) advice his Department has published for registered social landlords concerning their responsibilities towards tenants, with particular reference to their responsibilities to inform tenants of their rights when properties become earmarked for demolition; [139890]

(3) what statutory procedures should be carried out by registered social housing landlords prior to determining demolition programmes. [139891]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not published guidance and advice to registered social landlords (RSLs) or their tenants in respect of consultation about demolition programmes and major policy changes. Section 105 of the Housing Act 1985 requires landlords to "maintain such arrangements" as they consider appropriate for informing secure tenants about any proposals for changes in housing management which will affect them "substantially". These "matters" should include maintenance, improvement and demolition. The Housing Corporation is regulator of RSLs and its regulatory code and guidance (published in "The Way Forward: Our approach to regulation" in January 2002) include requirements that RSLs must seek and be responsive to residents' views and priorities. RSLs are required, amongst other things, to enable residents to be involved in decision making and to provide information about its activities to residents. The regulatory code and guidance apply to all types of legal occupier, including occupants with assured and secure tenancies.

RSLs do not require consent to demolish property. However, they do require the consent of the Housing Corporation under section 9 of the Housing Act 1996 if property is to be demolished and the land is to be disposed of. RSLs are required to consult the field offices of the Housing Corporation about the need for any grant payment or re-payment in these circumstances.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what resources in terms of (a) funding and (b) support are made available by the Government to registered social housing landlords to rectify housing stock in need of a major structural repair. [139892]

Keith Hill: The Housing Corporation has allocated £38.9 million in 2003–04 for works to Registered Social Landlords stock. This includes major repairs. The corporation, with the National Housing Federation, has issued guidance to associations covering all aspects of asset management, including how to deal with stock in need of major repair. They have also supported a number of seminars and other training events on this topic. Corporation regulators work with associations at risk of failing to meet the Decent Homes Standard on any of the criteria, including structural soundness, to ensure that all homes will meet the standard by 2010.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the optimum size is of housing stock for stock transfers of local authority housing to a single trust or association. [139893]

Keith Hill: The Housing Transfer Manual 2003 makes clear that decisions on the number of dwellings transferring from a local authority to a new landlord will depend on local circumstances. A material consideration in deciding the number of dwellings transferring to a single landlord would be the number of dwellings remaining after any proposed demolitions. This supersedes the 12,000 dwelling guideline that existed previously.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his policy is regarding housing trusts or associations created as a result of stock transfer ballots by tenants, in cases where they propose demolishing occupied properties without the consent of tenants. [139895]

Keith Hill: Tenants should be fully involved in all the stages of deciding how to deliver the decent home objective. This includes the option appraisal process, and, where transfer is the preferred option, the detailed development of the transfer proposal including the likely need for demolitions.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his policy is regarding housing trusts or associations created as a result of stock transfer ballots, in cases where tenants demonstrate a desire to establish a new or alternative body to (a) manage, (b) own and (c) manage and own part of the trust's or association's housing stock. [139896]

Keith Hill: Increasing tenant participation is a priority for all housing transfers. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister would expect any new landlord to be willing to consider any approach from its tenants to manage, own or own and manage their stock. However, in considering any request we would expect the landlord to consider the impact on other tenants, delivery of the transfer promises and the effect on the business plan.

Rural Housing

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the exception site planning principle for the provision of housing in villages. [140280]

Keith Hill: Current policy on providing for rural exception housing is set out in Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: Housing, Annex B. The policy allows local planning authorities to consider including a "rural exception policy" in their plans where there remains a lack of affordable housing to meet local needs. An exception policy enables a local planning authority to grant planning permission for small sites for affordable housing to meet local needs in perpetuity, within or adjoining existing villages, which may be subject to policies of restraint. The current policy advises that it is inappropriate for local planning authorities to allocate particular sites for affordable housing.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's consultation document "Influencing the size, type and affordability of housing" proposes that the current policy on providing for rural exception housing is replaced by a policy that enables local planning authorities to identify sites solely for affordable housing, on land within or adjoining existing villages, which would not otherwise be released for housing. The consultation period officially closed on 31 October 2003, but responses after that date have been considered because of the postal dispute.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister for what reasons the use of exception sites in rural areas is being replaced by a requirement for local authorities to provide a specified number of affordable units through application of planning gains. [140281]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's consultation document "Influencing the size, type and affordability of housing" proposes that the current policy on providing for rural exception housing set out in Annex B of Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: "Housing" is replaced by a policy that enables local planning authorities to identify sites solely for affordable housing, on land within or adjoining existing villages, which would not otherwise be released for housing.

The proposal seeks to address concerns that the securing of affordable housing through the current rural exception policy takes too long. The proposed policy will provide affordable housing in a more considered way through the plan-making process. It is anticipated that it will deliver affordable housing where it is needed more effectively and more quickly than the current policy.

Supermarkets (Planning)

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what investigations the Government have carried out into the extent to which existing planning applications for supermarkets have a condition stating the maximum retail floor space; and how many applications have had such conditions attached. [138746]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not collect information on the amount of floor space granted in planning permissions or what conditions were attached, because to do so would be an excessive burden on local authorities. Our policy is to minimise the data demands we place on local planning authorities.

From the cases that my officials have seen, which are mainly the largest retail cases, and from advice they have sought, their assessment agreed with that of the hon. Member in Standing Committee that the vast majority of consents since 1996 have maximum floor space stipulated in conditions, whereas for those prior to 1996 it may have been less frequent.

Tenancy Deposit Scheme

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what evaluation his Department has made of the pilot Tenancy Deposit Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [140043]

Keith Hill: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 10 November in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gower (Mr. Caton), Official Report, column 164W.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the case for a statutory Tenancy Deposit Scheme; what plans he has to introduce legislation; and if he will make a statement. [140044]

Keith Hill: On the first part of the question I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Gower (Mr. Caton) on 10 November 2003, Official Report, column 164W.

On the second part, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are currently considering the case for legislation in the context of the Law Commission's proposals for tenure reform.

Traffic Noise (PPG 24)

Mr. Heald: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will reduce the maximum noise thresholds in PPG 24 for aircraft noise to below those for other traffic noise sources; [139710]

(2) if he will set lower maximum traffic noise thresholds for rural areas than for urban areas in PPG 24 when assessing new development areas; [139711]

(3) if he will remove the two to three decibel allowance included in PPG 24 for aircraft noise; [139712]

(4) if he will amend PPG 24 to bring the maximum recommended traffic noise levels for assessing new development areas into line with the recommendations of the World Health Organisation. [139713]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently undertaking a comprehensive review of Planning Policy Guidance Note 24: "Planning and Noise". The review will include a re-assessment of the Noise Exposure Categories (NECs) in the light of the World Health Organisation's guidelines and other recommendations and research.

With regards to traffic noise thresholds for rural areas as compared with urban areas, the existing guidance already contains provision for local authorities, where appropriate, to vary the recommended levels contained in the NEC tables by up to three dB(A) (decibels of average weighted sound.

Urban Landscapes Project

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on UK participation in the EU Sustainable and Accessible Urban Landscapes Project. [139424]

Yvette Cooper: SAUL(2) is a transnational project funded under the European INTERREG III initiative involving partners from the UK, Germany, Netherlands and Luxembourg.

It is led by the UK partner 'Groundwork UK'. Its aim is to improve the public realm and public open space through a collaborative planning and design approach. It involves a range of urban landscape demonstration projects; development of regional strategies; a transnational programme to promote learning, knowledge and experience transfer and planning for new urban landscapes.

Warrington Borough Council

Helen Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the rate of local income tax which would be necessary to fund services provided by Warrington Borough Council (a) if such a tax were levied on all those employed in Warrington and (b) if such a tax were levied on residents of Warrington. [140035]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has made no estimate of these matters. The Steering Group of the Balance of Funding Review, chaired by my rt. hon. Friend the member for Greenwich and Woolwich, has asked external organisations to give evidence on a number of issues put to it by consultees, which include the case for introducing some form of local income tax. We have made clear that the fact that the group is looking at the issues put to it does not mean that the Government endorses them.

Website

John Barrett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent assessment he has made of the content and design of his Department's website. [139370]

Yvette Cooper: The current Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's web site went on line in July this year. It's design and content is consistent with Cabinet Office guidelines and the development process included usability testing, online user research and extensive content evaluation.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will be reviewing the content and design of the site on a regular basis.

Wilson Marriage Centre, Colchester

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 6 October 2003, if he will call in public inquiry Application CC/COL/03/1437 by Essex County Council in respect of land it owns at the Wilson Marriage Centre, Barrack Streeet, Colchester. [138142]

Keith Hill: The planning application in question represents a departure from the local development plan. Essex County Council have confirmed that the application, should they be minded to approve it, will be submitted to my rt. hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister in due course, so that he can consider whether the proposals raise any issues which would warrant his intervention.

In considering whether his intervention may be justified, all representations received will be given very careful consideration.

TREASURY

Suicide

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many suicides there were in each month in (a) England and (b) each region in each of the last six years. [139867]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 19 November 2003:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning how many suicides there were in each month in a) England and b) each region in each of the last six years. (139867)

The most recent available mortality data are for the calendar year 2002. I will arrange for figures for each year from 1997 to 2002, by month and Government Office Region, to be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Teenage Pregnancy

John Mann: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many teenage pregnancies there were in (a) the UK, (b) coalfield communities and (c) Bassetlaw in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [140052]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to John Mann, dated 19 November 2003:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many teenage pregnancies there were in a) UK, b) Coalfield communities and c) Bassetlaw, for the last 12 months for which figures are available. (140052) Figures for the United Kingdom are not available because conception statistics are not calculated for Northern Ireland, and those for Scotland are not produced on a comparable basis to England and Wales. The information available for England and Wales is shown in the table below.

The number of teenage pregnancies in England and Wales are compiled routinely by calendar years. The latest year for which figures are available is 2001*.

England and Wales	40,966
Coalfield communities	5,534
Bassetlaw	80

Unemployment Rates

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the level of (a) unemployment, (b) seasonally adjusted unemployment and (c) long-term unemployment for the Isle of Wight was for each month since 2000. [139977]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Andrew Turner, dated 19 November 2003:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking for the level of (a) unemployment (b) seasonally adjusted unemployment and (c) long-term unemployment for the Isle of Wight each month since 2000. (139977)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics of unemployment from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) following the internationally standard International Labour Organisation definition.

However, the LFS sample size is too small to give reliable estimates of long-term unemployment for the Isle of Wight, or Parliamentary Constituency estimates on a monthly basis.

ONS also compiles statistics of those claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) for local areas including Parliamentary Constituencies. The attached table gives the number of JSA claimants and long-term claimants, those who have been claiming for at least 12 months, in the Isle of Wight Parliamentary Constituency for the period January 2000 to October 2003. Claimant count figures are not seasonally adjusted at Parliamentary Constituency level.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the cost of advertising by (a) HM Treasury, (b) the Inland Revenue, (c) Customs and Excise, (d) the Office of National Statistics, (e) National Savings and (f) the Royal Mint in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [138802]

Ruth Kelly: For the years 1997 to 2002 in respect of HM Treasury, Inland Revenue, HM Customs and Excise and the Royal Mint, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 7 May 2002, Official Report, column 36W.

The information relating to subsequent years is as follows:

Child Tax Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of pensioners with dependent children who are receiving Child Tax Credit. [135213]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that the Minister for Pensions gave him on 3 November 2003, Official Report, column 467W. Most of those who were not already receiving Child Tax Credit (CTC), who were expected to still have dependent children at the introduction of Pension Credit (PC) and who were expected to qualify for PC at that date, were automatically transferred to tax credits. They are now receiving the CTC, if still entitled.

Council Tax

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of general government revenue was accounted for by council tax in each tax year between 1992–93 and 2001–02. [132563]

Dawn Primarolo: The figures requested are given in the table:

Employment Statistics

Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of jobs in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales were in the (i) public sector and (ii) voluntary sector in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [139943]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Denzil Davies, dated 19 November 2003:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about jobs in the public and voluntary sectors. (139943)

Information about jobs in the public sector in the United Kingdom is compiled by ONS from returns made by public bodies. From this source, the latest estimate of jobs in the public sector in the UK is 5,298,000 in June 2002, representing 18.3 per cent. of all jobs in the UK. Comparable information is not available for England, Wales and Scotland, nor for the voluntary sector.

However, information about people in employment is collected in the Labour Force Survey (LFS), and is classified by sector according to the details of their work supplied by respondents to the survey. Employment data covers only the main job of those employed and therefore omits second and subsequent jobs. The LFS definition of the voluntary sector includes all institutions holding charitable status, which would include, for example, employees in many private schools.

The attached table shows the percentages of all people in employment that worked in the public and voluntary sectors in England, Scotland and Wales for the year to August 2003.

Gold

Mr. Page: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tonnes of gold from UK gold holdings were sold in each year since 1997; at what price per ounce they were sold; and what the value of the sales per ounce was at the afternoon fix on 3 November. [139862]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given to the right hon. Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood) on 27 October 2003, Official Report, column 39W and to the hon. Members for Reigate (Mr. Blunt) on 3 November 2003, Official Report, column 457W, and for Rochford and Southend, East (Sir Teddy Taylor) on 20 May 2002, Official Report, column 87W; and to the table in the Treasury document "Review of the sale of part of the UK Gold Reserves", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

At the afternoon fix on 3 November 2003, the total proceeds from the sales of gold was US$4,867 million.

Household Wealth

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the stock of household wealth, net of debt, in (a) 1990, (b) 1997 and (c) the latest period for which figures are available; and what the shares of (i) housing and (ii) securities in the stock were in each case. [139344]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Identity Cards

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the savings that his Department will make through the introduction of a compulsory identity card. [138968]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury has been involved in discussions on the benefits and costs of a national identity card scheme. The introduction of such a scheme is a long term undertaking, and my department will be involved with ongoing analysis of the benefits and costs. It is too early at present to attribute the scale of any savings to Treasury departments.

Income Tax

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what increase in income tax he estimates would be required to be levied on English taxpayers in order to generate an additional (a) £19 billion and (b) £22 billion. [139094]

Dawn Primarolo: There are a number of ways income tax could be increased to generate revenue. I refer my hon. Friend to table 1.6 "Direct effects of illustrative tax changes" on the Inland Revenue website www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/tax_expenditures/g_t06_1.htm, which provides a ready reckoner of the effects of changing the rates of income tax in the UK.

Ministerial Statements

Mr Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his statement of 9 June 2003, Official Report, column 420, what evidential basis he used to support his statement that 3 million jobs in the UK were dependent on the European Union. [129218]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury estimates that 3 million jobs in the UK are linked, directly and indirectly, to the export of goods and services to the European Union. This figure is based on the assumption that the share of total UK employment associated with UK exports to the EU is equal to the share of total UK value added (GVA) generated by UK exports to the EU.

Mobile Phone Contracts

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the central mobile telecommunications contract managed by the Office of Government Commerce cost in each year since the scheme started, broken down by government department; how many mobile phone contracts are managed for each department under the contract; and if he will make a statement. [139553]

Mr. Boateng: The information is as follows:

Year	Aggregated central civil government expenditure through the framework contract	Aggregated number of mobile phone contracts agreed through the framework
2000–01	3,168,282	39,501
2001–02	5,504,891	62,614
2002–03	10,852,269	99,907

The GTM framework provides a vehicle for Central Civil Government departments and the wider public sector to purchase mobile telephony, data and wide area paging services.

The table shows the aggregated central civil government expenditure through the GTM framework contracts since the frameworks were available. A breakdown of expenditure by government department is not held centrally in the form requested and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

The table also shows the aggregated number of mobile phone contracts agreed through the framework, this equates to the number of individual handsets obtained.

National Insurance Fund

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in which years the rate of Treasury supplement to the National Insurance Fund was 18 per cent.; and if he will estimate the amount of the supplement in the current year if it were paid at that rate. [139451]

Dawn Primarolo: The Treasury supplement was 18 per cent. for the years 1975–76 to 1980–81. It was abolished in 1988–89. If it still applied, and the rate was 18 per cent. it would amount to £12.4 billion for 2003–04.

Official Residences

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the Department spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [134700]

Ruth Kelly: The details requested are set out as follows.

	Maintenance	Renovation	Council tax	Running costs[1]
1997–98	0	0	304	62,306
1998–99	0	0	325	149,598
1999–2000	0	0	350	166,841
2000–01	0	0	375	124,456
2001–02	0	0	410	139,814
2002–03	0	0	445	156,570

[1] These costs include the proportion of capital charge (rent), rates, service charges and utilities in respect of the No.10 flat.

The increase in rent/rates from 1997–98 to 1998–99 is due to the introduction of capital charging to replace Property Repayment Service assessed rents as the method of accounting for Crown Freehold properties.

Payroll Services

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures of performance and customer satisfaction were included in the framework agreement between Her Majesty's Treasury and CMG for the implementation and provision of payroll services; what assessment he has made of the outcomes against target in relation to this agreement to date; and if he will make a statement. [139562]

Ruth Kelly: The Principal Framework for the provision of payroll services was set up to enable HM Treasury or any other Department or Agency to enter into an individual service contract with the Supplier for payroll provision. The Framework Agreement lays down approved warranties, undertakings and representations for the Supplier.

The Framework Agreement also provides for the termination of the Agreement.

The Framework Agreement did not confer upon the Supplier any right to service the payroll requirements of HM Treasury or any Department or Agency other than as provided in any service contracts.

Personal Tax/Benefits

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) pursuant to his statement of 13 November 2003, Official Report, column 403, on personal tax and benefit changes since 1997, if he will (a) list the personal tax and benefit changes since 1997 that have benefited householders and (b) state the net change in Government revenue resulting from each personal tax and benefit change for each applicable year since 1997; [140033]

(2) pursuant to his statement of 13 November 2003, Official Report, column 403, on personal tax and benefit changes since 1997, what definition he used of householders; and how many householders there were in each year since 1997; [140034]

(3) pursuant to his statement of 13 November 2003, Official Report, column 403, if he will (a) list the assumptions made and (b) set out the calculations used in coming to the conclusion on benefits to householders of personal tax and benefit changes since 1997. [140065]

John Healey: The Government have introduced a number of personal tax and benefit measures since 1997 that have benefited households. As I said in my answer of 13 November 2003, Official Report, column 403, householders are, on average, £775 a year better off. Full details of these measures and their effect on Exchequer revenues are set out in the relevant Financial Statement and Budget reports, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. These measures include cutting the basic rate of income tax to 22 per cent. the lowest rate for 70 years, introducing the 10p starting rate of income tax, over-indexing age-related personal allowances and introducing the working and child tax credits to support families and tackle child poverty.

The definition of a household can be found on page 173 of the 2002 edition of Family Spending a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Table 1.1 of this publication gives an estimate of the number of households in 2001–02; figures for earlier years are given in previous editions.

An estimate of the average gain is calculated by comparing net household incomes after the operation of 2003–04 direct tax and benefit system with those after the operation of the 1997–98 direct tax and benefit system, uprating parameters to 2003–04 levels in line with changes in prices, and excluding the effect of the abolition of mortgage interest relief at source (MIRAS).

Private Schools

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect on value added tax revenue of the charitable status of private schools in the last year for which figures are available. [139693]

John Healey: No such estimate can be made. VAT reliefs for charities are general and available data on expenditure by charities and non-profit making bodies do not identify different sectors.

Secondees

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 4 November 2003, Official Report, column 620W, on secondees, which organisation is responsible for salaries and expenses of secondees out of the Treasury; and if he will make a statement. [139994]

Ruth Kelly: Of the 28 organisations mentioned in my earlier answer, the Treasury fully funds secondments to 6 of the organisations (with one of which we have a reciprocal arrangement). Secondments are partially funded by us to 6 other organisations, and the remaining 16 are fully funded by the organisation.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue cost of restructuring stamp duty on residential property sales so as to charge marginal rates of (a) 0 per cent. on property sales of £100,000 or less, (b) 2 per cent. on sales revenue of between £100,000 and £199,999, (c) 3 per cent. on sales revenue of between £200,000 and £299,999, (d) 4 per cent. on sales revenue of £300,000 to £399,999, (e) 5 per cent. on sales revenue of £400,000 to £499,999, (f) 6 per cent. on sales revenue of £500,000 to £749,999 and (g) 7 per cent. on sales revenue of £750,000 and above. [135308]

Ruth Kelly: The revenue cost of restructuring stamp duty on residential property sales according to the scheme described above is estimated to be £700 million in 2004–05. This does not include any allowance for behavioural changes.

Tax Credits (Overpayment)

Richard Burden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether existing tax credit claimants will be expected to make contact with the Inland Revenue to request a form or give information regarding their earnings for the last tax year in preparation for a reconciliation of their tax credit status in April 2004; [135413]

(2) what action he is taking to ensure that the Inland Revenue applies lessons learned from the first year of operation of the (a) working tax credit and (b) child tax credit to the administration of those credits in time for financial year 2004–05; [135414]

(3) whether existing tax credit claimants will automatically be sent forms to complete regarding their earnings for the last tax year in preparation for a reconciliation of their tax credit status in April 2004; [135415]

(4) when he expects existing tax credit claimants to provide information about their earnings over the last tax year in order to achieve a smooth reconciliation of individuals' entitlements in time for April 2004. [135416]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue has reflected the lessons learned from the introduction of tax credits last April in the detailed design of the processes for finalising tax credits awards and renewing claims from April 2004.

The Inland Revenue will be writing to all tax credits claimants early next year to explain how the finalisation and renewals processes will work, and to let them know what they can expect to receive from the Revenue and how and when they would be expected to respond.

No claimant will need to initiate contact. The Inland Revenue will write to all tax credits claimants from April 2004 over a period of weeks explaining how they can finalise their award for 2003–04 and renew their claim for 2004–05, if appropriate.

Once contacted by the Inland Revenue, we expect two-thirds of claimants will need to provide details of their income for the previous tax year (2003–04) and confirm their circumstances over the period of their award.

The remaining third of claimants—families receiving only the family element of child tax credit—will not need to contact the Inland Revenue unless they have changes to report in their circumstances or income over the last tax year (2003–04). Because the level of their award would be affected only by a significant change in income, we expect that only a small minority of these claimants will need to report their 2003–04 income.

Claimants who need to provide information will have until 30 September 2004 in which to do so. During this renewal period, tax credits payments will continue. Once the information is provided, the Inland Revenue will finalise the previous tax year's award (2003–04) and, if appropriate, set up the award for 2004–05.

If they do not have details of their actual income for 2003–04 by the deadline, claimants can provide an estimate by 30 September 2004. They will then have until 31 January 2005 to provide the details of their actual income.

There will be a comprehensive publicity campaign throughout the period to ensure that claimants are fully aware of what they have to do.

The Inland Revenue is also expanding the capacity of the Tax Credits Helpline to support the finalisation and renewals processes, with the addition of two new contact centres.

As set out in my answers of 7 July 2003 to the hon. Members for Arundel and South Downs (Mr. Flight), Official Report, column 583W and for Yeovil (Mr. Laws), Official Report, column 584W, the Inland Revenue's compliance strategy for new tax credits has been placed in the Library of the House.

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints he has received about (a) child tax and (b) working tax credit; how much compensation has been paid for errors; and what the (i) range and (ii) average amount of compensation paid is. [135933]

Norman Lamb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many compensation awards have been made by the Inland Revenue in respect of complaints about (a) child and (b) working tax credit; [136151]

(2) how many complaints seeking compensation have been received in respect of (a) child and (b) working tax credit; [136152]

(3) what the total value is of compensation awards made by the Inland Revenue in respect of complaints about (a) child and (b) working tax credits. [136449]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 4 November 2003]: To the end of September approximately 1,600 claims had been paid out. This represents about one thirtieth of one per cent of all claims received for tax credit awards. The average payment was £30.

Taxation

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much additional revenue would be raised from the residents of (a) each of the borough councils in Hampshire and (b) the Southampton and Portsmouth unitary authorities for every penny increase in the basic rate of tax. [139714]

Dawn Primarolo: The requested information is given in the table.

Additional full-year yield (£ million) of increasing the basic rate of tax by 1p in 2000–01

(a) Borough Councils in Hampshire
Basingstoke and Deane	10.4
East Hampshire	6.8
Eastleigh	8.4
Fareham	6.9
Gosport	4.3
Hart	6.1
Havant	5.8
New Forest	9.0
Rushmoor	4.4
Test Valley	6.7
Winchester	8.2
(b) Portsmouth and Southampton unitary authorities	22.1

Estimates are based upon the 2000–01 Survey of Personal Incomes. The effects of the illustrative changes can be scaled up or down over a reasonably wide range. The results exclude any behavioural response to the tax change.

VAT Carousel Fraud

Norman Lamb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the value of VAT carousel fraud was in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement; [139769]

(2) if he will make a statement on the progress of efforts to tackle VAT carousel fraud; [139770]

(3) how many prosecutions there were in respect of VAT carousel fraud (a) in 2000, (b) in 2001, (c) in 2002 and (d) since 9 April; [139771]

(4) how much money has been withheld in VAT repayments to companies trading in (a) mobile telephones and (b) computer chips in each of the last three years; how much was subsequently paid on to these companies; and if he will make a statement. [139773]

John Healey: There are no separate estimates for tax losses from the specific carousel variant of VAT Missing Trader Intra-Community (MTIC) fraud. However, estimates of revenue loss from all forms of MTIC fraud, which includes carousel fraud, for 1999–2000, 2000–01 and 2001–02 were published in "Measuring Indirect Tax Losses" at the time of the pre-Budget report in November 2002, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. There are no estimates for earlier years.

Details of Customs strategy and progress in tackling VAT MTIC fraud were set out in "Tackling Indirect Tax Fraud" (November 2001), "Protecting Indirect Tax Revenues" (November 2002), and Customs' Spring Report (May 2003), copies of which are also available in the Library of the House.

Prosecution figures for VAT MTIC fraud for 2001–02 were published in Customs' Annual Report and Accounts 2001–02 in December 2002 (CM 5671). Figures for earlier years are not available.

Customs does not maintain information in the format requested and it could be produced only at disproportionate cost. The levels of VAT repayments being withheld by Customs in any given sector at any given time vary on a daily basis, and repayments may be made which are subsequently established to be wrongly paid, resulting in an assessment for VAT at a later date.

Estimates of tax losses and the number of prosecutions for 2002–03, and an update on progress in tackling the fraud, will be published later this year.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has made to the European Union in respect of its rules on cross-border trade and VAT carousel fraud; and if he will make a statement. [139772]

John Healey: The UK Government has regular dialogue with the European Commission and other member states of the EU about the most effective way to counter carousel VAT fraud, including simplifying and modernising the current rules on cross-border trade and strengthening the arrangements for administrative co-operation and information exchange between member states' tax administrations. The UK has supported initiatives in this area such as the proposal for a new VAT Administrative Co-operation Regulation, which will come into force on 1 January 2004.

HEALTH

Chlamydia

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under what powers the testing of 11 to 16-year-olds for chlamydia in schools is carried out; and what recent discussions he has had on the testing of school children for other sexually-transmitted diseases. [131806]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The power and decision to provide a school based health service, and the content of that service, is for the individual governing body of the school in consultation with pupils, parents and the school community.

GM Crops

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research (a) has been undertaken and (b) is planned by the Government into the effects of consuming GM crops on human gut flora. [138805]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Food Standards Agency has not undertaken, and is not planning, any research into the effects of consuming genetically modified crops on human gut flora. The Government's Science Review on genetic modification has concluded that there is no evidence that transgenic DNA per se behaves differently from any other DNA with respect to its fate following consumption in food.

Heroin Addicts

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what estimate he has made of the number of heroin addicts in (a) Leeds and (b) the UK in each of the last 10 years. [139345]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We do not hold this information centrally.

A and E Services

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many admissions to Accident and Emergency departments there were in each of the past 12 quarters, broken down by hospital. [133750]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Quarterly activity statistics for accident and emergency departments are available from April 2001 for each national health service trust on the Department of Health website at http://www.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity/. A copy of this information is also available in the Library. Information is not collected by individual hospital site.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what dates since 1 October 2002 changes were made to the criteria used by the NHS in collecting data about the four-hour accident and emergency waiting time target. [135419]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Since October 2002 there has been one clarification to the criteria used by the national health service in collecting total time data. In addition monitoring has been extended beyond major accident and emergency (A&E) units to include all A&E and minor injuries units (MIU) services during this period.

A clarification took effect from January 2003. This provided a definition of an inpatient ward type 2 and 3 A&Es (specialist A&Es, MIU and walk in centres) were included in total time monitoring on a voluntary basis from the same month. Monitoring of total time in type 2 and 3 A&Es became mandatory from April 2003.

Ambulances

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average length of time ambulances took to reach (a) the patient and (b) the hospital to which the patient needed to be taken in (i) the North West region, (ii) Merseyside and (iii) St. Helens in the last 12 months; [137989]

(2) in what proportion of 999 calls made to the Merseyside Ambulance Service in the most recently measured 12 months for which figures are available an ambulance was unnecessary. [138007]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information is not available. The latest published performance data held by the Department is for 2002–03. This can be found on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0313.pdf. This includes response by category of call by national health service trust.

Information relating to inappropriate calls is not available.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) frontline ambulances, (b) patient transport vehicles, (c) fast response cars, (d) medical motorbikes, (e) medical cycles and (f) special baby care units were available in Merseyside in each year since 1997. [138009]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested is shown in the table.

Patient Transport Service vehicles in fleet (including spare)	172	172	178	178	178	178
Solo Rapid Response Cars in fleet (including spare)	0	0	12	13	13	18

Bovine TB

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice his Department has issued to those who have been in contact with animals infected with bovine tuberculosis. [132628]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Guidance on the management of the public health consequences of tuberculosis in cattle was issued to all consultants in Communicable Disease Control in June 2000.

BUPA

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost to the NHS has been of (a) hip replacements, (b) knee replacements and (c) cataract operations carried out at the BUPA hospital in Redhill. [134950]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As the release of this information would entail disclosing a third party's commercial confidences, exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Open Government applies.

Cannabis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in trialling cannabis for medicinal use; and if he will make a statement. [137563]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department supports the evaluation of the therapeutic use of cannabis by clinical trials, and is working with organisations able to conduct high quality clinical trials that will put this research onto a scientific footing. A Medical Research Council supported clinical trial to attempt to measure the therapeutic effects of cannabis extract in people with multiple sclerosis was recently completed by Dr. John Zajicek, a Consultant Neurologist at Derriford Hospital in Plymouth. Further information on the trial can be accessed at http://www.cannabis-trial.plymouth.ac.uk/

A programme to develop a medicine derived from cannabis has been ongoing in the United Kingdom. The work is led by Dr Guy of GW Pharmaceuticals Limited. Current details about the clinical trials being sponsored by GW Pharmaceuticals Limited may be obtained from the Company's website at http://www.gwpharm.com/rese clin index.html.

If the benefits of a cannabis-based medicine are scientifically demonstrated, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary will move to seek Parliament's agreement to any necessary changes to the misuse of drugs legislation. It would be premature to take such a step before the quality, safety and efficacy of the medicine have been fully established.

Consumers for Health Choice

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the outcome was of his discussions with the representative of Consumers for Health Choice on Tuesday 7 October. [138204]

Miss Melanie Johnson: On Tuesday 7 October, I met with representatives of Consumers for Health Choice, the Health Food Manufacturers' Association, the Proprietary Association of Great Britain and the National Association of Health Stores to hear these groups' concerns about the implications of the Food Supplements Directive.

I restated the Government's commitment to pressing for European Union maximum permitted limits of vitamins and minerals in food supplements to be set on a safety basis and to this end, using its influence in both scientific and political forums. I will raise this issue with Ministers in other member states as and when appropriate. I am also seeking to arrange a meeting with Commissioner David Byrne at the earliest practical opportunity.

Contaminated Blood

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people suffering from haemophilia have (a) died and (b) suffered illness as a result of contaminated blood products from the NHS in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [138790]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The number of haemophilia patients registered with the Macfarlane Trust who have died in the last five years, after infection with HIV from infected national health service blood products, is shown in the table.

	Number of deaths
1998	22
1999	19
2000	24
2001	13
2002	12

Information on the number of haemophilia patients with HIV who have suffered illness is not available.

The latest information from the United Kingdom Haemophilia Centre Doctors Organisation show 212 patients with haemophilia have died from liver disease. The number of haemophilia patients with hepatitis C who are demonstrating signs of serious liver disease is 2,645, from a total 2,829 patients who are living with hepatitis C, as at January 2000.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to compensate (a) the dependants of those who have died from hepatitis due to infected blood products and (b) those who contracted hepatitis by such means, but recovered after treatment. [138791]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The details of the hepatitis C ex gratia payment scheme are still being worked out. We expect to announce the scheme's eligibility criteria and payment structure shortly.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department (a) has commissioned and (b) is evaluating in order to determine the level of compensation for people infected with hepatitis C due to infected blood products; and if he will make a statement. [138792]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The following independent resources are being considered as part of the on-going deliberations to determine the level of payments made under the proposed hepatitis C ex gratia payment scheme:

the scheme of payments implemented by the Macfarlane Trust;

the scheme of payments implemented by the Eileen Trust;

the report of the Hepatitis C Working Party to the Haemophilia Society; and the report of the Scottish Executive's Expert Group on Financial and Other Support chaired by Lord Ross.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the steps that he is taking to ensure that contaminants are not present in NHS blood products. [138793]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The safety of blood and blood products used in the national health service is of paramount importance. Every reasonable step has been taken to minimise any risks during blood transfusion. The current high levels of safety are achieved by screening out potential high risk donors and then further testing of every unit of donated blood for HIV, hepatitis B, hepatitis C and syphilis before it is released to hospitals.

As a precautionary measure against the theoretical risk that vCJD can be transmitted through blood, since 31 October 1999 all blood used for transfusion has had the white cells removed (a process called leucodepletion), and in 1998, we stopped using United Kingdom plasma in the manufacture of blood products.

New blood safety initiatives, including technologies to remove pathogens in blood, are kept under review by the National Blood Service's Blood and Tissue Safety Assurance Group and the Department's Advisory Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Blood and Tissues for Transplantation.

Coronary Disease

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether his Department has met milestones one to four for primary care management of heart failure in the national service framework for coronary heart disease; whether he has plans to set further milestones; and if he will make a statement; [138188]

(2) whether his Department has met milestones one to three for hospitals admitting patients for the management of heart failure in the heart failure section of the national service framework for coronary heart disease; whether he has plans to set further milestones; and if he will make a statement. [138189]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The national health service has made good progress on meeting the heart failure milestones set out in the national service frameworks. This has been supported further this year through the publication of the National Institute for Clinical Excellence guideline on the management of heart failure. The Department has set a target for improved management of heart failure in the Planning and Priorities Framework for the next three years and has supported delivery of this target through publication of a toolkit of best practice for the NHS in October of this year.

The quality and outcome framework in the new general medical services contract will support further progress in this important area.

Dentistry

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many national health service dentists there were in each year between 1997 and 2003. [135370]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The table shows the number of national health service dentists on a head count basis in England at September each year from 1997 to 2002. Information for 2003 is not yet available.

Information is not available on a whole time equivalent (wte) basis because dentists working in the general dental service dentists (CDS) are self employed dentists who are not required to work standard hours and who are free to vary their working time if they wish.

NHS dentists cover dentists working in the GDS, hospital dental service, community dental service, personal dental service (PDS) and salaried dentists working in the GDS. Dentists working in more than one dental service are included in each service, apart from dentists working in both the PDS and the GDS, who are counted in the GDS only.

NHS Dental Services: Number of dentists in England

September each year	Number of dentists
1997	20,393
1998	20,887
1999	21,435
2000	21,728
2001	22,321
2002	23,183

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, (1) what plans he has to increase spending on the provision of dentures; and what discussions he has had with the General Dental Council on the provision of dentures; [136753]

(2) what plans he has to prevent the illegal (a) production and (b) fitting of dentures; and what estimate he has made of the level of illegal (i) production and (ii) fitting of dentures. [136754]

(3) if he will introduce an agreed qualification in denturism to permit clinical dental technicians to deal directly with the public. [136755]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Dental appliances are manufactured to the prescription of a registered dentist, mostly in privately owned laboratories, which have to be registered with the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulation Agency (MHRA) under the Medical Devices Regulations 2002. We are working with the General Dental Council and the profession to provide for the registration of dental technicians including clinical dental technician (CDTs). As a result, members of both professions will need to be appropriately trained and qualified. The registration of CDTs will enable suitably qualified members of the profession to both supply and fit dental appliances thereby legalising the practice of denturism.

No prosecutions have been undertaken against dental laboratories which have failed to register under the Medical Devices Regulations. The vast majority of breaches of the Regulations are resolved with the co-operation of the manufacturer in line with the Government's Concordat on Enforcement without the need for prosecution. The MHRA investigates and resolves all potential breaches that are drawn to their attention. Information on the illegal fitting of dentures is not held centrally.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state (a) the reasons for compulsory retirement in dentistry and (b) the age limit for this retirement. [138196]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Health Service (General Dental Services Supplementary List) and (General Dental Services) Amendment Regulations 2003 amend the National Health Service (General Dental Services) Regulations 1992 by changing the age at which a dentist must be removed from a dental list from 65 to 70 years of age. A dentist so removed may continue to assist in the provision of general dental services after the age of 70 years.

The NHS Pension Scheme's current normal retirement pension age is 60. Members may stay in the scheme until age 70 but from age 60 they may retire and take a pension voluntarily without reduction.

Any member still employed at age 70 may take their retirement pension and continue working in the NHS.

Dentists, along with all other NHS Pension Scheme members are able to retire with benefits from age 50 on a voluntary basis. The voluntary early retirement from age 50 is payable with actuarially reduced benefits.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had with his counterparts in the European Union on regulations on services that may be provided by dental technicians within the European Union. [138221]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Working practices and any legislative controls for dental technicians vary across the countries of the European Union. We intend that the General Dental Council's proposals for registration should aid the development of common standards to assist freedom of movement within Europe.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent discussions he has had with representatives of dental technicians regarding regulations relating to their position in providing dental services; [138223]

(2) what recent discussions he has had with the (a) Scottish Executive and (b) Welsh Assembly regarding regulations on the provision of dental services within the UK by dental technicians; [138224]

(3) what recent discussions he has had with the General Dental Council on the role of dental technicians in providing dental services. [138225]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Dental technicians are key members of the dental team. All the Health Departments in the United Kingdom have indicated their support for the General Dental Council's proposals for the registration of dental technicians. This will ensure that they are properly trained and acquire registrable qualifications, which have been identified in consultation with the profession. We plan to put the necessary legislative changes in place during 2004 and intend that registration arrangements should give new impetus to the training and recruitment of dental technicians.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time before dentists qualified overseas can take the qualifying examinations to practise in the UK has been over the last five years. [135917]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 10 November 2003]: The International Qualifying Examination (IQE), which is the General Dental Council's (GDC) statutory examination for the purpose of gaining admission to the United Kingdom dentists register, was introduced on 1 January 2001. Since then, the number of dentists applying to take the examination has increased from some 150 to nearly 200. Average waiting times for the three parts of the IQE since that date are shown in the table.

Months

	Part A	Part B	Part C
2001	2.75	4.5	7.4
2002	4.25	5.5	10
2003	5.75	7.5	10

The figures exclude candidates who have asked for the timing of the examination to be delayed. Information for the years prior to the introduction of the IQE is not available. The GDC has increased Part C capacity for 2004 and waiting times should be shortened significantly, with some candidates given only three months wait to sit Part C.

Diagnosis and Treatment Centres

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much (a) has been and (b) is intended to be spent on capital costs in the new diagnosis and treatment centres. [134952]

Mr. Hutton: Independent sector treatment centres (IS-TCs) are being procured in accordance with strict Official Journal of the European Commission (OJEC) rules. The advertisements published in the OJEC in December 2002 were for the provision of health services only and not capital build. The IS-TC programme was design to ensure that additional capacity is available as soon as possible to treat National Health Service patients.

The 47 NHS treatment centre schemes have been allocated a total capital spend of over £370 million.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what the location will be of the diagnostics centre in Southend-on-Sea; and if he will make a statement. [139808]

Mr. Hutton: The proposed location of the treatment centre in Southend-on-Sea is expected to be at Fossetts Farm, on the outskirts of Southend-on-Sea. This is subject to receipt of planning permission.

Digital Hearing Aids

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will make a statement on the availability of NHS digital hearing aids in Wirral South. [139546]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Wirral Hospitals National Health Service Trust manages the provision of digital hearing aids across the Wirral, including Wirral South. Funding has been made available for the years 2003–04 and 2004–05 to ensure that a modernised service, providing digital hearing aids, will be available from all NHS hearing aids services in England by 2005.

Elective Admissions

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many patients have waited more than (a) three months, (b) six months and (c) 12 months for an elective finished in year admission in each of the last five years for which figures are available for each NHS Trust in London; and if he will make a statement. [135155]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Epilepsy

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the national misdiagnosis rates for epilepsy were in (a) adults and (b) children in the last year for which figures are available; [139786]

(2) what percentage of patients with epilepsy are seizure free. [139787]

Dr. Ladyman: We do not collect information on the misdiagnosis rates for epilepsy. However, recent reports from the Clinical Standards Advisory Group, "Services for patients with epilepsy (2000)", and the Chief Medical Officer, "On the State of the Public Health (2001)", showed that around 20 per cent. of people referred to epilepsy clinics may be misdiagnosed and receive inappropriate and unnecessary treatment. In May 2002, the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) made its report of the National Clinical Audit of Epilepsy Related Death available to local national health service clinicians and organisations to help them establish or review policies for the management of epilepsy and epilepsy-related death. NICE is also developing a clinical guideline for the diagnosis, management and treatment of epilepsy, which is currently due to be published in June 2004 and which will help address any shortfalls in current practice.

The new general medical services contract includes clinical quality standards for the management of epilepsy in primary care. Under the quality and outcomes framework being introduced from 1 April 2004 as part of the contract general practitioner practices will be rewarded for monitoring and managing people with epilepsy. This will include recording the percentage of patients aged 16 and over receiving drug treatment for epilepsy who have been seizure free for the last 12 months. The Joint Epilepsy Council's "National Statement of Good Practice" shows that around 70 per cent. of people with epilepsy have the potential to become seizure free.

Flu Vaccinations

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate the NHS has made of potential savings derived from sending only one copy of the influenza vaccination reminder letter to a household, even if more than one resident in the household is affected. [132774]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Although no official cost effectiveness assessment has been carried out, general practitioner practices usually ask their primary care trust to write to patients on their behalf. It is thought that this approach is quicker, more cost effective than individual practices writing out and preserves patient confidentiality.

Fluoridation

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what peer presented research his Department has examined in assessing the potential benefit in the proposed addition of fluoride to drinking water; [136406]

(2) what other countries' drinking water supply systems were (a) investigated and (b) visited by his Department when preparing proposals to add fluoride to drinking water. [136407]

Miss Melanie Johnson: In 1999, the Department commissioned the University of York to carry out an up to date expert scientific review of fluoride and health. "A Systematic Review of Water Fluoridation" published in September 2000, reported that fluoridating water reduces the number of children with tooth decay by 15 per cent. The review identified 3,246 research studies from 30 different countries, but was critical of the quality of the research available. Accordingly, the Department asked the Medical Research Council (MRC) how the evidence base could be strengthened and the Chief Medical Officer and Chief Dental Officer are advising Ministers on the implementation of the MRCs recommendations. We have already commissioned a study on the absorption of fluoride, which has now been completed and is subject to peer review.

Food Advertising

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what discussions he has had with other Ministers on extending regulations on food advertising aimed at children. [139624]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government is concerned about the levels of childhood obesity and is taking and considering a number of actions to tackle the problem. The Food Standards Agency (FSA) has recently published a discussion paper on possible options for action on the promotion and advertising of foods that could improve children's diets and health, and is expected to advise Ministers of its analysis of these options early next year. It would not be appropriate to discuss specific options before receiving the FSA's advice.

Food Labelling

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to ensure that recommended daily amounts for nutrients are carried on food labels. [139481]

Miss Melanie Johnson: There is no legislative requirement for guideline daily amounts of nutrients to be included on food labels. However, the Food Standards Agency recommends that this information should be given and a number of food manufacturers already include such information on their products. In the next few months, the European Commission is expected to make a proposal to amend the current nutrition labelling directive. The Government are pressing for mandatory nutrition labelling on all foods, and for the labelling to indicate whether the product is high, medium or low in key nutrients, that is fat, sugar and salt.

Food Supplements

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what steps he has taken to promote to other European Union member states the methodology for establishing safe levels of nutrient intake adopted by the Expert Advisory Group on vitamins and minerals; and what further plans he has for promoting his policies of case by case reviews of published literature on nutrient safety. [136626]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Article 5 of the Food Supplements Directive lays out a framework for the future setting of maximum permitted levels of vitamins and minerals in food supplements. The United Kingdom continues to press for European Union maximum permitted limits to be set on a safety basis, and in doing so, is using its influence in both scientific and political forums. I intend to raise this issue with Ministers in other Member States as and when appropriate. I am also seeking to arrange a meeting with Commissioner David Byrne at the earliest practicable opportunity.

Foundation Trusts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he expects to issue further advice to putative NHS foundation trusts on the use of existing databases of (a) patients and (b) staff names for the purposes of creating a membership register; [139715]

(2) when he expects to issue advice on the implications of the (a) Data Protection Act 1998 and (b) Freedom of Information Act 2000 on the (i) compilation and (ii) use of membership registers of NHS foundation trusts. [139716]

Mr. Hutton: Subject to Parliament, it is the Government's intention that national health service foundation trusts will be required to have a members register. Officials are working with the first wave of applicants and organisations with expertise in maintaining membership organisations with a view to developing practical advice to be incorporated into an updated edition of "NHS Foundation Trusts: A guide to the governance arrangements".

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will issue advice to putative NHS foundation trusts on the nature of the questions they may ask prospective members concerning their (a) ethnicity, (b) faith and (c) disability. [139717]

Mr. Hutton: Department of Health officials are working with the first wave of applicants and organisations with expertise in maintaining membership organisations on the sorts of information that national health service foundation trusts would need to collect to ensure their membership is representative of those eligible for membership. The Department will develop practical advice on these matters to be incorporated into an updated edition of "NHS Foundation Trusts: A Guide to the Governance Arrangements".

General Practitioners

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner fundholders there are in (a) the North West and (b) England. [134892]

Mr. Hutton: General practice fundholding was abolished on 1 October 1999. There are no general practitioner practices in the North West nor in England operating as GP fundholders.

Genetic Research

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to determine the ethical framework applied to genetic research in receipt of financial support from the Government. [137528]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Genetic research commissioned by the Government and carried out within the national health service is subject to oversight by the appropriate NHS Research Ethics Committee. Gene therapy research will continue to be subject to the approval of, and ongoing supervision by, the Gene Therapy Advisory Committee.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who has been consulted on the ethical dimensions of the Biobank project; and where it is possible to inspect the comments of consultees. [137529]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Consultations on the ethical dimensions of UK Biobank have involved key public and professional stakeholders ranging from patients' and civil society groups, scientists and health care professionals, to ethicists, lawyers and social scientists, as well as members of the public. These consultations have informed the discussions of the Interim Advisory Group on Ethics and Governance and the development of the ethics and governance framework. Reports of the consultations can be accessed on the UK Biobank website at www.ukbiobank.ac.uk.

GPs

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners there were in (a) Taunton Deane and (b) West Somerset in each year since 1992. [137384]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested on the number of general practitioners is shown in the tables.

Hepatitis C

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action is being taken to improve the (a) detection and (b) treatment rates of hepatitis C; and what the (i) detection and (ii) treatment rates are in the Northern health region in the last year for which figures are available; [139402]

(2) if he will make a statement on the progress of the Hepatitis C Action Plan. [139403]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department published its consultation document, "Hepatitis C Strategy for England", in August 2002, which set out proposals to improve the effectiveness of prevention, diagnosis and treatment services for hepatitis C. The Department intends to publish an action plan to implement this strategy in the next few months.

Detection and treatment rates for the Northern health region are currently being collated and will be placed in the Library when available.

Hospital Projects

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many hospital projects with a value of over £50m initiated since 1997 he estimates will be completed by the end of 2005. [136894]

Mr. Hutton: Of the schemes with a capital value over £50 million given the go-ahead since 1997, we anticipate that 22 private finance initiative schemes and two publicly funded schemes will be completed and operational by the end of 2005.

Hospital Trusts

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what control NHS hospital trusts have over the volume of patients being referred to hospitals. [133403]

Mr. Hutton: Primary care trusts (PCTs) are responsible for commissioning sufficient activity from national health service trusts and other providers to meet the needs of their local population. The levels of activity required from NHS trusts should be specified in service agreements (SAs) and will represent a ceiling to the Trusts contractual obligations.

Where either there are no SAs in place or the activity levels specified in a SA have already been met by the trust, the PCT is responsible for commissioning additional activity to meet the needs of its patients.

HSC 2002/007 (Securing Service Delivery: Commissioning Freedoms of Primary Care Trusts) and HSC 1998/198 (Commissioning in the new NHS) provide further information. Copies are available in the Library.

Information Technology

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions his Department has had with the National Audit Office regarding the correspondence they have had about the national programme for information technology. [133926]

Mr. Hutton: The Department routinely has discussion with the National Audit Office (NAO) as part of its remit to monitor the work of Government departments. A senior member of the NAO has a seat on the national programme board for the National Health Service information management and technology strategy.

Joint Working

Mr. Barry Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will make a statement on joint working between primary health care trusts and citizen advice bureaux; and how much funding primary health care trusts contributed to citizens advice bureaux in each of the past three years. [135873]

Mr. Hutton: It is for individual primary care trusts to determine joint working arrangements with local stakeholders and to allocate funds accordingly. The information requested on funding is not available centrally.

King George's Hospital (Redbridge)

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which private healthcare companies expressed an interest in running the treatment centre at King George's Hospital, Redbridge; and what the criteria were used to award the contract; [133273]

(2) if he will estimate how many patients will be treated at the treatment centre based at King George's Hospital, Redbridge; and if he will make a statement. [133274]

Mr. Hutton: Anglo Canadian was announced as preferred bidder for the proposed treatment centre at King George's Hospital, Redbridge on 12 September. Their appointment is subject to final contract negotiation and agreement. Because of the commercial in confidence status of the procurement, it is not possible to list the other companies that expressed an interest in this scheme.

The selection of the preferred bidders followed detailed evaluation of the submitted tenders. The evaluation criteria included clinical quality, building proposals, human resources, speed of mobilisation and delivery, affordability, value for money, bidders corporate structure and price. There was a structured scoring mechanism against each of these criteria and total scores assessed between bidders.

It is expected that the treatment centre based at King George's Hospital will complete 11,800 procedures on average per year of the contract in ophthalmology, general surgery and trauma and orthopaedics. These are indicative activity levels and are subject to the possibility that it may make sense for the national health service and the preferred bidder to shift activity between different centres.

Macular Degeneration

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the number of patients with wet age-related macular degeneration who were treated privately with photodynamic therapy in NHS hospitals in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [138048]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect data on the number of patients treated privately with photodynamic therapy in national health service hospitals.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations (a) he and (b) his ministerial colleagues has received from (i) the Royal College of Ophthalmology, (ii) the AMD Alliance and (iii) the RNIB on the implementation of NICE guidance for wet age-related macular degeneration; and if he will make a statement. [138049]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We have recently received representations from the Royal National Institute for the Blind and the Macular Disease Society raising concerns about the extended implementation period from three to nine months. They were concerned that primary care trusts would delay paying for photodynamic therapy (PDT) until the latest possible time. Specialised commissioning groups are leading the implementation of PDT and at a meeting held on 4 November, departmental officials made clear that funding should not delay implementation of the guidance. The Department is also working closely with the Royal College of Ophthalmologists on the implementation of the guidance.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether reading centres assessing patients with wet age-related macular degeneration for treatment with photodynamic therapy will be required to make a diagnosis before patients are treated; and if he will make a statement. [138050]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Reading centres assessing patients with wet age-related macular degeneration for treatment with photodynamic therapy (PDT) will not be required to make a diagnosis before patients are treated. For the moment, reporting on the same day, in real time, by the reading centres service is not feasible. Consequently to avoid delay, PDT will be offered on the basis of the initial judgement of the clinician at the PDT centre, with confirmation of the diagnosis by the reading centres service being made after the first PDT treatment has occurred.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the annual cost to the NHS of providing photodynamic therapy for wet age-related macular degeneration (a) by primary care trusts, (b) by hospital trusts and (c) in total; and if he will make a statement. [138051]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Institiute for Clinical Excellence has estimated that the cost of providing photodynamic therapy (PDT) to 1000 patients per year would be in the region of £4 million in the first year, rising to £8.3 million by the third year and remaining constant thereafter. PDT is a specialised service and we would expect up to 50 centres to be supported. Therefore, every primary care trust (PCT) or hospital trust is not expected to provide this service. Initially, specialised commissioners will fund the service and PCTs will need to consider longer term funding arrangements.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of patients with classic no occult wet age-related macular degeneration who are unable to receive photodynamic therapy on the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [138052]

Ms Rosie Winterton: On the basis of limited epidemiological data, the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) estimated that each year in England and Wales there may be 5000 to 7500 new cases of predominantly classic subfoveal choroidal neovascularisation (CNV) associated with wet age-related macular degeneration. However, they noted there is a high degree of uncertainty about this estimate. We have asked the National Health Service to ensure that patients with suspected CNV are treated wherever capacity exists to do so. By July 2004, the NICE guidance will have been implemented fully across the country and capacity will build between now and then.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals have equipment and trained professionals in place to provide photodynamic therapy for wet age-related macular degeneration; and if he will make a statement. [138053]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There are approximately 30 centres providing photodynamic therapy. Some are well established, others are coming on stream. We expect that up to 50 centres will be set up to deliver the National Institute for Clinical Excellence's recommendations. As a specialised service, we expect commissioners to plan for centres to serve a population of not less than a million.

Meat Fraud

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set up an inquiry into the lessons to be learnt from the prosecutions relating to meat fraud (a) at Denby Poultry Products and (b) in Rotherham. [137587]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Following the prosecutions for fraudulent diversion of unfit meat in the Rotherham case, the Food Standards Agency (FSA) set up the independent Waste Food Task Force. The Task Force, which was made up of experts from enforcement, industry and consumer backgrounds, advised the FSA on additional action that could be taken to prevent the illegal diversion of unfit meat into the food chain. The Task Force also included enforcers involved in the Denby Poultry Products prosecutions. The board of the FSA, at its September meeting, adopted an action plan to implement the recommendations of the Task Force. In addition to this, the FSA has called a seminar on 26 November to discuss the lessons to be learned from the Denby prosecutions. The seminar will involve those who were involved both in the Denby prosecutions and in other similar cases, including local authority enforcers, the Meat Hygiene Service, the police and the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, as well as industry and consumer representatives.

Mental Health

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) children and adolescents, (b) adults and (c) pensioners were treated by mental health trusts in west Sussex in each of the last six years. [134773]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The total number of admissions of patients with learning disabilities or mental illness resident in the west Sussex local authority is shown in the table.

Notes:
[1] From April 2002 a new trust called West Sussex Health and Social Care Trust came into existence, in the main this trust treats mental health patients in the West Sussex area. This was formed by the merger of three other trusts, or parts of them, namely Worthing Priority Healthcare, Sussex Weald and Downs NHS Trust (previously Chichester Priority Care Services) and Mid Sussex NHS Trust.
[2] The figures shown are the numbers of admissions under mental health specialities and learning disabilities in these three trusts, over the years 1996–2002. This does not, however, guarantee that the patients being admitted are from the west Sussex area.
[3] Admissions are defined as the first period of patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to his answers of 3 November 2003, Official Report, column 518W, on mental health, if he will place copies of the (a) Robert Lee Review and (b) review by Sir Andrew Leggatt in the Library; [138023]

(2) if he will set out details of the regional variations in efficiency and practice of the Mental Health Review Tribunal offices. [138024]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Copies of the Robert Lee review of the Mental Health Review Tribunal Administration will be placed in the Library. Sir Andrew Leggatt's Review of Tribunals was carried out at the request of the Department for Constitutional Affairs and copies will be placed in the Library.

The following details demonstrate the regional variations in efficiency and practice of the Mental Health Review Tribunal offices and is based on up to date statistical information between January and September 2003.

Regional Office	Number of applications received in office	Number of hearings heard	Ratio of applications that reach hearing stage (percentage)	Average waiting times for application to reach hearing stage
				Section 2 (days)	Non-restricted (weeks)	Restricted (weeks)

Notes:
1. Section 2 applications have a statutory requirement to be heard within seven days of receipt in the MHRT office.
2. All other applications must be heard as soon as possible, with regard to the receiving of reports and evidence.

Factors affecting regional efficiency are:

the volume of applications received in any one office; and the ratio of work to medical members.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the statement by the National Director of Mental Health on 31 July on the draft Mental Health Bill represents Government policy; whether he intends to make significant changes to the draft Bill before it is laid before Parliament; what assessment he has made of responses received during the consultation on the draft Bill; and what the timetable is for publishing the responses. [138474]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Director for Mental Health expressed his personal views to the Parliamentary Health Forum on 4 June 2003. The Government have considered carefully the need for changes to the draft Bill, following responses to consultation and on-going meetings with key stakeholders. Any changes to the draft Bill will be indicated when the Government publish their response to consultation prior to the introduction of the Bill to Parliament.

Mental Health Trusts

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the backlog maintenance cost was to reach (a) estate code condition B, (b) fire safety standards and (c) health and safety standards for all mental health trusts in England, broken down by trust. [133847]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is set out in the table. The figures provided do not indicate levels of risk to patients and staff. Trusts make every effort to remedy significant concerns as quickly as possible. This is reflected in the very small numbers of injuries and deaths arising as a result of fires and reportable health and safety incidents in national health service hospitals in England, despite the very high numbers of people who use healthcare premises.

Spending on routine maintenance by mental health trusts reached £41 million in 2002–03 with an additional £60 million having been spent between 1998 and 2001. Improvements to health and safety and fire safety will result from the current priorities and planning framework targets for reducing the backlog of maintenance.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the annual maintenance budget for each NHS mental health trust in England was in each of the last five years. [133848]

Mr. Hutton: The annual maintenance budgets for national health service mental health trusts is not centrally collected.

Data for the last five years on the annual spend on maintenance costs (including engineering, building and grounds and garden maintenance costs) has been placed in the Library. Validation of the data given for 2002–03 remains subject to amendment.

These figures include:

Costs associated with the provision of engineering, building and ground and gardens maintenance.

Labour costs for directly employed and contract staff including contract support costs, fees, materials, and;

Pay elements for senior managers and all associated staff where involved in maintenance;

Expenditure relating to the employment of staff belonging to an external organisation (including private finance initiative work).

Capital works involving adaptations, improvements and/or alterations are not included.

The trusts listed in the table are those defined as mental health and exclude any trusts where only a minority of services relate to mental health.

Mersey Regional Ambulance Service

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many times during the past six months the Mersey

Regional Ambulance Service has been contacted by BT expressing concern about the way in which the service deals with emergency calls. [136789]

Miss Melanie Johnson: British Telecom has contacted the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust once in the last six months to discuss how the trust can improve the handling of emergency calls.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many calls the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service (a) failed to answer within two minutes and (b) took more than five minutes to answer in each of the past 12 months. [136790]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Merseyside Ambulance Control Centre has recently updated its call routing system and therefore information prior to August is not available.

The number of calls with a delay in excess of two minutes is shown in the table.

2003	Number of calls
August	195
September	236
October	332

Note:
The number of calls has been supplied directly from the Mersey Ambulance Service NHS Trust and is not validated Department of Health data.

Mersey Regional Ambulance Service do not routinely collect data that follows the format of calls that took more than five minutes to answer.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken by the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service to develop an education and training strategy as recommended by the Commission for Health Improvement; and if he will place a copy of the strategy in the Library. [138434]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Mersey Regional Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust has incorporated its training and education strategy into the human resources strategy. This is in line with the national human resources agenda and has received endorsement from the trust's executive team and the human resources committee.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken by the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service to improve the patient transport service. [138436]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Mersey Regional Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust has developed an improvement and modernisation programme in consultation with staff and trade unions for its patient transport service (PTS) operation. The PTS operation is performance managed and progress is reported regularly to the trust board and the performance management committee.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures have been put in place by the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service to ensure that all staff are trained in infection control. [138438]

Miss Melanie Johnson: All staff employed in the emergency and paramedic service at Mersey Regional Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust receive training in infection control as part of their basic training and education. Training in infection control also forms part of the standard induction programme for all operational staff, which includes staff within the patient transport service.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of the action plan agreed between the Mersey Regional Ambulance NHS Trust and the central commissioning group for its area. [138449]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The action plan has not yet been agreed by the relevant parties. A copy will be placed in the Library in due course.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what steps have been taken by the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service to ensure that all staff (a) are aware of and (b) act upon their Guidelines for the Management of Infection in the Pre-Hospital Setting. [138711]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 17 November 2003]: I am advised by Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority that the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust has a detailed infection control policy. All staff receive copies of the policy and are required to confirm in writing that they have read and understood its content and their responsibilities.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what steps have been taken by the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service Trust (a) to assess the implementation of the Community Paramedic Scheme and to (b) ensure it has the confidence of the public following the publication of the report by the Commission for Health Improvement on the Trust. [138712]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 17 November 2003]: I am advised by the Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority that, following the report of the Commission for Health Improvement, the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust has introduced a policy together with procedures for "first responders" within the region. The policy has been approved by the trust board.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what steps the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service has taken to implement an action plan for the use of the decontamination unit; and on what date the unit was brought back into use. [138713]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 17 November 2003]: I am informed by the Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority that the plan for ensuring that the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust has an effective decontamination facility was written in April 2003. The decontamination unit was brought back into use during August 2003.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what procedures have been introduced by the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service Trust for the safe storage and custody of drugs in ambulances following the report on the Trust by the Commission for Health Improvement. [138715]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 17 November 2003]: I am advised by the Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority that, following the report of the Commission for Health Improvement, the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust's existing procedures were reinforced to ensure consistency of approach for the storage of drugs.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what steps have been taking by the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service to ensure that all patients' report forms are treated as confidential documents. [139070]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The patient report forms used within the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust are stored on ambulances in a safe box, they are not accessible by members of the public. Within the ambulance stations, patient report forms are stored in locked cabinets. Only staff responsible for checking, auditing or completing the patient report forms are able to view them.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures have been put in place by the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service to improve access to (a) research literature and (b) the internet at ambulance stations. [139071]

National School Fruit Scheme

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much the Government has spent centrally on the National School Fruit Scheme in the last five years for which figures are available; and what central allocations have been made for this in this year and future years; [128229]

(2) what central funding sources other than the National Lottery New Opportunities Fund are used to fund the Five-a-Day healthy eating programmes; and how much has been allocated through these other funding sources in (a) the last three years, (b) the current year and (c) future years. [128230]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Over the three years 2000–01, 2001–02 and 2002–03 the Department of Health made available £3.3 million of central funds to support its Five-A-Day programme, comprising £1.8 million for the National School Fruit Scheme and £1.5 million for community pilots. Department of Health support in 2003–04 and future years will be from central resources for cardiovascular disease and cancer prevention overall, which are not allocated to specific programmes.

NHS Consultants

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what procedure he has established to ensure that where a patient is removed from the UK waiting list of a NHS consultant, the consultant is (a) kept informed of the clinical outcomes and (b) involved in their post-operative care. [136742]

Mr. Hutton: Any patient referred from the National Health Service to an independent provider (including an overseas provider) will have a discharge letter completed by the independent provider. This is forwarded to their NHS consultant and general practitioner. Where orthopaedic patients are treated abroad, there is support and agreement to register these patients on the United Kingdom national joint registry.

Care and follow-up arrangements are arranged according to individual needs. Patients who are sent abroad for treatment will remain in the care of the overseas consultant for a period of two to three weeks depending on the treatment they receive. The patient is formally discharged following a post-operative assessment carried out usually between six and eight weeks post-treatment. If the patient requires treatment in the interim, he or she is entitled to seek a referral to NHS provision through the usual routes by GP or emergency admission, should this be required. Overseas consultants are happy to discuss the clinical care of NHS patients by telephone should the patients UK consultant wish to do so.

NHS Expenditure

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, to what extent the National Health Service spending has been (a) over and (b) under planned levels in (i) financial year 2001–02 and (ii) the first half of this financial year; and if he will make a statement. [136870]

Mr. Hutton: The resource underspend for the Department, which includes National Health Service spending, in 2001–02 was £526 million. The Department plans to spend all available resources in the current financial year. To ensure that best use is made of resources in year, end-year flexibility arrangements allow expenditure to be carried forward into the next financial year.

NHS Finance

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what per capita expenditure was on the NHS in 1997–98; what it was in 2002–03; and what it is expected to be in future years for which plans have been made. [137681]

Mr. Hutton: The table shows total net national health service expenditure per head of population in England for 1997–98 and for the period 2002–03 to 2007–08.

£ million

		Spend per head[1,2,3]

[1] For 1997–98, figures are on a cash basis, whereas figures for the period 2002–03 to 2007–08 are on a stage 2 resource budgeting basis. As a result, figures are not comparable across the period.
[2] Figures are calculated using population projections provided by ONS.
[3] Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

Andy Burnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the distance from target in cash terms for each primary care trust in England for each year of the current spending round. [138936]

Mr. Hutton: Primary care trust distances from targets for 2003–04, 2004–05 and 2005–06 have been placed in the Library.

NHS Records (Electronic System)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how the transfer of NHS records to an electronic system will be funded. [135630]

Mr. Hutton: The integrated care records service (ICRS) is one element of the national programme for information technology (NpfIT) in the National Health Service. Central funding for the NPfIT in the NHS is to be made available from the Spending Review 2002 as follows—£370 million in 2003–04, £730 million in 2004–05 and £1.2 billion in 2005–06.

The costs for the ICRS are being calculated as part of the ongoing procurement and financial management processes within the Spending Review 2002 envelope.

Exact costs are subject to current procurement negotiations. Due to commercial confidentiality and sensitivity it would not be in the public interest to reveal the details of the negotiations and the potential costs.

The content of the ICRS databases will be generated initially from information already held within NHS systems. This process will be undertaken by local service providers as part of the initial implementation phase during 2004. Over the course of time, the ICRS will build up a summary of relevant health episodes for patients.

The ICRS is not about re-entering all of the historical data held on existing systems or paper records but about improving patient care through the capture, use and availability of accurate and up-to-date quality data.

NHS Reference Costs

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out the formula and (b) calculations on which the NHS reference costs are based. [134951]

Mr. Hutton: The Reference Costs collection entails collecting unit cost and activity data from all National Health Service providers in England, for each financial year.

Various appropriate activity currencies are used for a range of services and treatments provided by the NHS, which form part of the scope of the Reference Costs collection. Unit cost data is produced by submitting NHS organisations in accordance with the rules detailed in the NHS Costing Manual, to ensure that both cost and activity data are calculated on a consistent and comparable basis.

The Department of Health collates such data, and produces national average unit cost figures, by calculating, for each service/treatment area, the total national cost for the service, and then dividing this by the total reported activity for that service, at national level.

All national average costs are published in the National Schedule of Reference Costs, at service level, in conjunction with national activity levels, and interquartile ranges, detailing the ranges between which the middle 50 per cent. of NHS provider costs lie.

To calculate National Reference Cost Index scores at individual organisation level, the individual NHS providers' activity is multiplied by the national average unit costs for each service/treatment category, undertaken by that NHS provider. This produces a total expected cost for each service/treatment area for each provider. When added together, this establishes an expected cost that each provider would be expected to incur if they were operating at the national average cost per treatment, procedure, etc.

An Index score of 100 signifies that on average, a provider is operating at national average cost levels. A score higher than 100 indicates that for their current level of activity, on average, an NHS provider is operating at costs higher than would be expected for this level of activity. Conversely, a score of less than 100 indicates that the organisation is operating at costs less than would be expected, were they to be operating at national average unit cost levels, for a particular financial year.

NHS Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, on which NHS equipment his Department holds information of the numbers in service. [136907]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There is no central point in the Department of Health that collates information on numbers of the equipment that is in service within the National Health Service.

Non-smoking Areas

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what plans he has to make it compulsory for restaurants and cafes to have non-smoking areas. [135656]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We have no plans to make it compulsory for restaurants and cafes to have non-smoking areas.

We will continue to work with partners to encourage smoke-free policies across the country, whilst at the same time increasing support for smokers who want to quit.

I am encouraged by the responsible attitude of many restaurant owners to speed up this process and am optimistic that many venues will become smoke-free. However I recognise that we still have some way to go and I encourage all businesses to respond to the levels of actual public and customer demand for more smoke-free places.

Obesity

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the average body mass index in (a) England, (b) each region and (c) each strategic health authority for each of the last 10 years. [138191]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Figures available from the Health Survey for England are set out in the table. For those respondents with a valid height and weight measurement from which the body mass index could be calculated, it gives the average body mass index by Government Office Region for the period 1998–2001. Figures prior to 1998 are not available by Government Office Region. Care should be taken in interpreting trends in children's body mass index because of small sample sizes.

Paramedics (Data Link Schemes)

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will provide financial assistance to the setting up (a) in England and (b) in Brent of Data Link schemes for paramedics to obtain details of a person's medical history. [136640]

Mr. Hutton: Access by paramedics to patients' medical history (subject to appropriate security and confidentiality safeguards) will be included in the core functionality of the integrated care records service (ICRS) that will be implemented across the National Health Service, beginning in 2004 as part of the national programme for information technology in the NHS. Local service providers are being appointed to work with local health communities to deliver solutions tailored to specific local needs.

Central funding for the National Programme for IT in the NHS, of which the ICRS is one component, is to be made available as follows—£370 million in 2003–04, £730 million in 2004–05 and £1.2 billion in 2005–06.

There is also some £850 million per annum provided in local baseline allocations that must be used to support investment in IT infrastructure or particular local priorities. If there is specific functionality required in Brent or elsewhere, and local circumstances or priorities dictate that it will be required sooner than ICRS will be rolling it out nationally, then local funds should be used to procure and provide that application, system or service.

Funding for local initiatives is a matter for the relevant strategic health authority and primary care trusts.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the questions regarding chiropody services tabled on 14 October 2003 by the hon. Member for Billericay, reference numbers 131565 to 131568. [139788]

Dr. Ladyman: I replied to the hon. Member on Monday 17 November 2003, Official Report, column 578W.

Patient Referrals

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many patients have been referred by each (a) Strategic Health Authority and (b) NHS Trust in London in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [135154]

Mr. Hutton: It has not been possible to respond to the specific question raised. Strategic health authorities do not refer patients. However, if the hon. Member requires specific waiting time information by commissioner and provider, he can visit the following website, www.doh.gov.uk/waitingtimes.

Pneumococcal Disease

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the recorded incidence of pneumococcal disease infection by health authorities was in the last year for which figures are available; and what estimate he has made of unreported pneumococcal disease infection by health authority. [139482]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Information on the incidence of pneumococcal disease infection by health authority (HA) is not available. Notifications are for pneumococcal meningitis only and these are listed by health authority in the table. No estimate has been made of unreported pneumococcal disease infection by HA.

Poultry Waste

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Food Standards Agency has to provide guidance to those involved in the meat trade to (a) improve self-regulation and (b) assist the trade in identifying criminal activity in the distribution of poultry waste. [137585]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Food Standards Agency (FSA) has assisted meat trade organisations in preparing and publicising the Industry Code of Practice on the Production, Handling and Processing of Animal By-Products. The FSA will also in December be discussing with other food trade organisations what further action can be taken to identify and prevent fraudulent diversion of unfit meat into the food chain. In addition, the FSA is commissioning a study into the possible use of a marker in low risk animal by-products, which will enable both industry and enforcers to detect meat which is unfit or not intended for human consumption, but does not prevent the legitimate use of such material, for example, in pet food.

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action is planned to ensure effective policing of the segregation of high and low risk waste at poultry slaughterhouses and its distribution from slaughterhouses; and what plans he has to provide extra resources to the Meat Hygiene Service for this purpose. [137586]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Food Standards Agency (FSA) has revised its instructions to the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) on the enforcement of animal by-products legislation, and the FSA is auditing the MHS's performance against those instructions. In addition, as part of the FSA's action plan to implement the recommendations of the Waste Food Task Force, the Agency is working with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and the MHS to produce a new, joint, risk-based regime for enforcement of animal by-products legislation in licensed premises. This will make best use of existing enforcement expenditure. In addition to this, the FSA is currently considering the case for extra expenditure for animal by-products enforcement in licensed premises as part of its review of MHS functions.

Prostate Cancer

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what progress the Government has made in reducing the incidence of prostate cancer in the last five years; [133863]

(2) what his Department's strategy is for tackling prostate cancer. [133882]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Good progress has been made since the National Health Service Prostate Cancer Programme was launched on 6 September 2000, setting out the Government's approach to improving prostate cancer services in England and Wales.

As part of the Prostate Cancer Risk Management Programme (PCRMP), evidence-based primary care resource packs were sent to all general practitioners in England from 23 September 2002 to aid them in counselling men who are worried about prostate cancer, ensuring the men make an informed choice about whether or not to have a prostate specific antigen (PSA) test.

Other elements of the PCRMP include ensuring that a systematic and standardised follow up pathway is available for individuals whose test result is above the PSA threshold and action to improve the quality of laboratory testing of PSA samples. Primary care and laboratories were informed of the related recommendations from the scientific reference group, which supports the PCRMP, in September 2002.

In 2003–04 the Department will be directly funding £4.2 million of research a year on prostate cancer. This compares with just £98,000 in 1996–97. Two National Cancer Research Institute prostate cancer research collaboratives have been established in Newcastle and London. Funded research includes studies on various treatments for prostate cancer, improving the PSA test and ethnic differences in prostate cancer incidence. The National Cancer Research Institute considered prostate cancer as part of its strategic analysis in 2002, but made no specific recommendations.

The Department has funded the following regarding public awareness:

Section 64 grant to the Prostate Cancer Charity to increase further information about prostate cancer.

Section 64 grant to the Prostate Cancer Charity to improve awareness of the risks and symptoms of prostate cancer in African and Afro-Caribbean men in Britain.

The database of individual patient experiences in prostate cancer. 97.5 per cent. of patients with suspected urological cancers (including prostate) were seen for their first out-patient appointment within two weeks of their general practitioner deciding they should be urgently referred, and the hospital receiving the referral within 24 hours, between April and July 2003.

The cancer services collaborative is modernising cancer care, including prostate cancer, by reducing unnecessary delays in the system for patients throughout the cancer journey.

There has been an increase in the number of consultant urologists from 427 in 2001 to 466 to 2002, and is set to grow to 504 in 2005.

The incidence of prostate cancer has risen over the last five years. Much of this increase is thought to be due to an increased use of the PSA test and a lengthening of life expectancy.

Much has been achieved on prostate cancer since the Prostate Cancer Programme was launched, but we recognise that there is still much to be done. That is why we welcomed the launch of the Prostate Cancer Charter for Action on 29 January 2003, and set up the Prostate Cancer Advisory Group (PCAG) to ensure better collaboration and communication between the charter members and Government. PCAG is already taking forward work on information for prostate cancer patients, public awareness and a national prostate cancer resource website.

School Sport

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 10 November 2003, Official Report, column 64W, on school sport, what assessment has been made of the percentage of school children who (a) were offered and (b) took up two hours per week of high quality physical education and school sport in the last year for which figures are available. [139031]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: I have been asked to reply.

The Government is investing more than £1 billion in England to transform physical education, school sport and club links. The funding will help deliver an ambitious Public Service Agreement target, shared by the Departments for Education and Skills and for Culture, Media and Sport, to increase the percentage of 5 to 16-year-olds who spend a minimum of two hours each week on high quality PE and school sport within and beyond the curriculum to 75 per cent. by 2006. Data collected during the autumn term 2002 suggested that about a third of schools provided this entitlement at Key Stage 1, two fifths at Key Stage 2 and a third at Key Stages 3 and 4. Data are now being collected for the first time—for publication in April 2004—on the number of pupils who choose to take up this entitlement.

Sexual Health

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were treated for sexually transmitted infections, broken down by (a) type of infection, (b) sex of patient and (c) age of patient in (i) Eastleigh and Test Valley South, (ii) Southampton City and (iii) Mid-Hants Primary Care Trust, in each of the last 10 years. [138153]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is not possible to break down the information into the areas requested in the time frame requested. However, the figures for the old Southampton and South West Hampshire Health Authority area are shown in the tables.

Notes:

1. Admissions—admissions are defined as the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.
2. Diagnosis (primary diagnosis)—the primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.
3. Grossing—figures have not (yet) been adjusted for shortfalls in data (ie the data are ungrossed).
4. Since data is residency based, figures between one and six do not need to be suppressed as authorised by the Security and Confidentiality Group (SCAG).
5. Prior to 1996–97 there were differences in organisational formation and/or how diagnosis data was collected meaning that data would not be comparable with those years given.

Sight Loss

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost to (a) the NHS, (b) individuals, (c) families and carers, (d) local authorities and (e) taxpayers of 3,000 people losing their sight; and if he will make a statement. [138055]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We have not made any assessment of these costs. The costs of blindness will differ according to who becomes blind and when. It is not possible to separate the costs of blindness and partial sight given current information.

The latest estimates of the costs of blindness and visual impairment are from a study commissioned for the Guide Dogs for the Blind Association in July this year.[1]

The report's estimates of the annual non-treatment costs for people registered blind or partially sighted in England in various groupings are shown in table 1.

Table 1: Estimate of annual non-treatment costs for people with blindness/partial sight

	Estimate per person
Children	1,123
Working age	19,841
Elderly	4,980
Total	7,561

Notes:

[1] These costs make assumptions, based on expert opinion and judgments from the literature, about typical income received from: disability living allowance, carer's allowance, vision rehabilitation services, income support, job seeker's allowance, tax allowances; the provision of community based healthcare and the numbers of blind and partially sighted people unemployed.

[2] The major costs are for those of working age which may be overstated since the report makes assumptions about the lost productivity to the economy related to unemployment among the blind and visually impaired and assumes that this can be represented by average earnings. If there are flexible labour markets and non-negligible unemployment then some portion of this "lost" productivity will be recovered through other workers.

[3] Costs could be overestimates since it is not clear from the research whether these are the costs incurred by an average blind or partially sighted person, or the costs that are directly attributable to their blindness or partial sight, for example, some of those who are unemployed and blind or partially sighted would have been unemployed if they were not blind or partially sighted.

It is not possible to identify treatment costs specifically for those who are blind (or as a result of blindness) from NHS data sources. It is possible to identify the costs of treatment for glaucoma and cataracts, which are both conditions that are associated with low vision and can lead to blindness. The costs shown in table 2 are from the Guide Dogs for the Blind Association report.

Table 2: Estimate of treatment costs for cataracts and glaucoma

	Estimate per person
Glaucoma	1,016
Cataracts	688

Finally, the literature on the "out-of-pocket costs" for blind patients has been reviewed by the Royal National Institute for the Blind. At 2000 prices, these are estimated to be around £52 per person per week.

Social Care

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what discussions he has had with west Sussex Social Services Department regarding the provision of central funding for the social care of residents of the Chagos Islands arriving in west Sussex. [134770]

Dr. Ladyman: Officials in the Department of Work and Pensions and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are considering, with the Department of Health, the situation of destitute Chagosians in the United Kingdom and specifically in west Sussex. Ministers at the Department of Health have had no direct contact with west Sussex County Council on this matter. Departmental officials, however, have maintained close contact with officers of west Sussex County Council.

South Woodham Ferrers Health Clinic

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to expand services at the South Woodham Ferrers Health Clinic; and if he will make a statement. [139677]

Dr. Ladyman: I have no plans to expand South Woodham Ferrers Health Clinic.

However, I am informed that Maldon and South Chelmsford Primary Care Trust's bid to Chelmsford borough council's Jubilee fund was successful and they received £75,000 from that fund which it intends to use to redesign South Woodham Ferrers Health Clinic. The PCT has secured planning permission but has revised its original plan which will result in the addition of three further outpatient suites. The PCT is currently awaiting the decision of the borough council's planning committee on the revised plans.

Strategic Health Authorities

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which strategic health authority has the highest deficit; what guidance he will give Avon, Wiltshire and Gloucestershire Strategic Health Authority about its deficit; how much the Avon, Wiltshire and Gloucestershire Strategic Health Authority received from the Government in financial year 2002–03; how much the (a) Bristol, (b) Bath, (c) Wiltshire and (d) Gloucestershire regions received of that sum; and if he will make it his policy when making allocations within strategic health authority areas to award greater sums to regions which (i) have a higher population and (ii) have demonstrated higher standards of performance. [134548]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In 2002–03, the last year for which we have audited accounts, the Avon, Wiltshire and Wiltshire and Gloucestershire Strategic Health Authority area reported the highest overall deficit. The Avon, Wiltshire and Gloucestershire SHA economy received a total resource allocation of £1.989 billion. The table shows distribution of the allocation across its primary care trusts.

The Department has asked the Avon, Wiltshire and Gloucestershire SHA to ensure that each National Health Service body within the health economy plans for and achieves financial balance and delivers its key targets.

From 2003–04 revenue resources have been allocated to primary care trusts on the basis of the relative needs of their populations. A weighted capitation formula is used to determine each primary care trust's target share of available resources.

Stroke Treatment

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of stroke patients are being treated in specialist stroke units; [139784]

(2) what percentage of stroke patients he plans will be treated in specialist stroke units by April 2004. [139785]

Dr. Ladyman: We do not collect the information requested centrally. However, stroke is one of the condition specific standards (Standard 5) incorporated into the national service framework for older people. The target is that by April 2004, 100 per cent. of all general hospitals which care for people with stroke will have a specialised stroke service as described in the stroke service model, and that all people who are thought to have had a stroke will have access to diagnostic services and access to specialist stroke services as appropriate.

The most comprehensive source of information on stroke is the National Sentinel Stroke Audit, carried out by the Royal College of Physicians. The audit was commissioned by the National Health Service in 1998 and was last updated in 2002. The results can be found at http://www.rcplondon.ac.uk/pubs/strokeaudit01–02.pdf. There will be a further update of these figures in 2004.

Transgenes Research

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what published research he has assessed on the effects of transgenes on cellular processes other than the intended function of the gene; and what research he has commissioned on this subject. [136062]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 4 November 2003]: Department of Health research funding is largely focused on research to bring the benefits of new medicines into the national health service. The Department of Health has not commissioned research on this subject. Basic scientific research of this nature is mainly funded by the research councils.

Waiting Lists/Times

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the latest available (a) inpatient waiting list figures and (b) outpatient quarterly figures for the Mid-Essex Hospital Trust area. [139469]

Dr. Ladyman: Inpatient waiting list figures for Mid-Essex Hospital Trust for quarter 2, 2003–04 are shown in the table.

Working Time Directive

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister for Women what recent assessment she has made of the implications of the Working Time Directive on women's employment. [140173]

Ms Hewitt: I have not been able to answer this Question before Prorogation. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Libraries of both Houses.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Party Funding

Mr. Watson: To ask the Leader of the House what recent discussions he has had with the Electoral Commission on the inquiry into the funding of political parties; and if he will make a statement. [140240]

Mr. Hain: I met the Chairman of the Electoral Commission on 18 November 2003 to discuss the Commission's work on the funding of political parties, and have spoken to him on other occasions about this and other issues.

CABINET OFFICE

Civil Contingencies Secretariat

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement on the recent work of the Civil Contingencies Secretariat. [140169]

Mr. Alexander: On 19 June 2003, the Civil Contingencies Secretariat published a revised third edition of Dealing with Disaster and a draft Civil Contingencies Bill which establishes a new framework for civil protection against the challenges of the 21st century. The draft Bill is currently being considered by a Joint Committee of both Houses. The Secretariat continues to improve the resilience of the United Kingdom to disruptive challenges through working with others to anticipate, assess, prevent, prepare, respond and recover.

Lord Birt

Norman Lamb: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will make a statement on the contribution made by Lord Birt to the Cabinet Office Strategy Board. [139778]

Mr. Alexander: Lord Birt, who was appointed in October 2001 as an unpaid strategy adviser to the Prime Minister, attends the Cabinet Office Strategy Board as an external member.

SCOTLAND

Identity Cards

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with Ministers in the Scottish Executive in relation to the introduction of identity cards. [138966]

Mrs. McGuire: My right hon. Friend and I have regular meetings with Scottish Executive Ministers, at which a wide range of issues affecting Scotland are discussed.

PRIME MINISTER

Arctic Veterans

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen), on 5 November 2003, what procedure the request for medals for Arctic veterans has undergone, what further stages have to be gone through; and if he will make a statement. [137891]

The Prime Minister: First, I would like to pay tribute to the bravery and dedication of all those who sailed in the Arctic convoys. Those who served in the Arctic Convoys during the Second World War were awarded a medal, the Atlantic Star, at the time to mark their important contribution.

The general policy on medals, which has been followed by successive Governments over many years, is that two separate medals are not awarded for any one exercise or campaign. In addition, except in cases where specific criteria are met as in the case of the Suez Canal Zone, proposals for new medals are not considered more than five years after the event.

Any further representations or requests for new evidence to be examined should be sent to the Ministry of Defence in the first instance.

Presidential Elections (USA)

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if it is his policy to remain neutral on the outcome of presidential elections in the United States of America. [140151]

The Prime Minister: Yes.

State Visit

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the representations he has received from organisations in the United States regarding the forthcoming visit of US President Bush, with particular reference to political organisations. [140152]

The Prime Minister: As far as I am aware, none.

War Criminals

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his actions to seek to persuade the President of the United States to bring captured senior Saddam supporters to trial, with particular reference to Mr.Tariq Aziz. [140040]

The Prime Minister: United Nations Security Council resolution 1483 affirmed the need for accountability for crimes and atrocities committed by the previous Iraqi regime. We fully support this, as do the US. We believe it is for the Iraqi people to decide how to bring those responsible to justice, with suitable international help. The Governing Council is developing the idea of a Special Iraqi Tribunal to prosecute those suspected of serious human rights abuses under the former regime. No final decision has yet been reached.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

ASBOs

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General what guidance the Crown Prosecution Service in Merseyside has provided to the Merseyside police in relation to antisocial behaviour orders; and who is responsible for requesting that an order be made. [132336]

The Solicitor-General: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Conviction Rates

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Solicitor-General what the conviction rate was for prosecutions under (a) a designated public places order and (b) the model bye-law for an on-street drinking ban in each year since the introduction of the DPPO. [136380]

The Solicitor-General: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Corruption Legislation

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General whether she has refused consent for any investigations or prosecutions to be carried out under corruption legislation. [132362]

The Solicitor-General: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Denham: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will make a statement on prosecutions under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 of people who have employed illegal immigrants. [136361]

The Solicitor-General: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Serious Fraud Office

Mr. Mike Hancock: To ask the Solicitor-General (1) when she will reply to the written questions, tabled by the hon. Member for Portsmouth South on 14 October 2003, refs (a) 131900, (b) 131901 and (c) 131902; [139578]

(2) how many (a) offences of fraud and (b) serious frauds involving breaches of trust by professionals were reported to the Serious Fraud Office in each of the last three years; how many prosecutions were initiated; what the outcome was in each case; and if she will make a statement; [131900]

(3) what plans she has to set up branches of the Serious Fraud Office in the regions; [131901]

(4) what recent assessment she has made of the work of the Serious Fraud Office; and if she will make a statement. [131902]

The Solicitor-General: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

BBC Charter

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent representations she has received on the renewal of the BBC Charter; and if she will make a statement. [140172]

Tessa Jowell: The review of the BBC's Charter will be wide-ranging, with full industry and public consultation, and will, I hope, be characterised by vigorous and open debate. The process will be extensive and thorough, with several opportunities for people to feed in their views, and there will be an appropriate parliamentary stage.

It will begin before the end of the year when I issue a consultation document outlining the main issues for consideration.

My Department has already received numerous representations about a wide range of issues relating to the BBC. Those views will, along with information from a variety of other sources, including formal public consultation, be used to inform the Government's thinking on Charter review.

Crystal Palace

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has had with (a) Sport England and (b) relevant local and other authorities on the future of Crystal Palace as a sports stadium. [140177]

Mr. Caborn: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Ethical Tourism

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action the Government is taking to support ethical tourism schemes. [139397]

Mr. Caborn: The Government welcomes in principle the efforts of individual tourism businesses who promote themselves under an eco-tourism banner. We regard such businesses as an important element of the mix of tourism products available to consumers.

There are no plans to introduce a national, Government-sponsored, eco-tourism award scheme. However, several such schemes do operate independently in the UK, often aimed at a geographical or product niche. The Government supports their aims. Indeed on 12 November 2003 I met the operator of one such conservation scheme, targeted at caravan parks, for a discussion about environmental tourism.

Golf

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funds are available to develop young golfers through municipal golf courses. [140060]

Estelle Morris: Participation projects in golf are eligible for Sport England Lottery Funding, and golf received a total of 40 grants worth £8.9 million between 1995 and May 2003.

Sport England also provides £92,000 of Exchequer funding annually to the Golf Foundation for the development of Junior Officers. The role of Junior Officers is to encourage young people to participate in the sport, through schemes such as Tri-Golf which is now being delivered throughout primary schools and social inclusion partnerships bringing golf to young people in areas of social and economic deprivation.

Leisure Facilities

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what initiatives she has discussed to improve access to leisure facilities in disadvantaged communities. [140061]

Estelle Morris: We are investing £581 million through the New Opportunities Fund (NOF) in sports facilities for schools in England. The Space for Sport and Arts programme is putting £130 million into primary school sports facilities in 65 of the most deprived LEAs in the country. (This includes £25 million from NOF.)

We are investing £459 million in the national strategy for PE, school sport and club links. This includes a further £10 million to enhance primary-school playgrounds in 27 deprived areas and £60 million for the Community Club Development Programme to improve amateur club facilities. Distribution is a matter for governing bodies, but the programme is targeted at deprived areas and disadvantaged groups.

Licensing Act

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what fees she will introduce under the Licensing Act 2003; what estimate she has made of the cost of implementing the Act in each of the next three years; and what estimate she has made of the amount which will be raised from applications for licences. [139763]

Mr. Caborn: Proposed fee levels and the expected costs of compliance with the Act were set out in the Regulatory Impact Assessment which accompanied the Licensing Bill and is available from the House Library. Regulations setting out these fees will be laid before Parliament shortly. The Department is working closely with the Local Government Association to ensure that fees are set at a level to which provides for full cost recovery in respect of administration, inspection and enforcement.

Lottery Funding

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her policy is on the recovery of Lottery funding from projects awarded grants which subsequently fail. [140230]

Estelle Morris: Lottery distributing bodies are required, under their financial directions, to attach conditions to each Lottery grant, enabling the distributor concerned to seek repayment of the grant, in full or in part, in certain circumstances. These circumstances include a breach by the recipient of any of the grant conditions; a material change of purpose, ownership or recipient during the project or after its completion; and cases where the recipient ceases to operate, becomes insolvent, fails to apply the grant for the purpose for which it was awarded, fails to complete the project, is found to have completed its application form fraudulently, incorrectly or misleadingly, or acts fraudulently or negligently during the completion of the project. The Department has issued guidance to the distributing bodies on the matters to be taken into account when they are considering seeking recovery of a Lottery award.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether Lottery distributors monitor the performance of successful Lottery bids against the criteria under which they were granted. [140231]

Estelle Morris: Each Lottery distributing body's financial directions require the body to institute a system for project monitoring in respect of capital and revenue projects supported with Lottery funds, to monitor whether the objectives and terms and conditions of grant are being met. The exact nature of monitoring will vary in individual cases depending on the size, nature and complexity of the project concerned.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much Lottery funding has been recovered from failed Lottery projects in each of the past five years for which figures are available, broken down by Lottery fund. [140232]

Estelle Morris: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Market Research

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much her Department spent on (a) opinion polling and (b) market research in the last financial year; and if she will make a statement. [139981]

Mr. Caborn: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Meridian Station (New Hythe)

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement about the future of the Meridian station in New Hythe. [140010]

Estelle Morris: This is a matter for the Independent Television Commission, who I understand are currently considering Meridian's proposals.

Millennium Fund

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what assessment is undertaken of the use made of successful Millennium Fund bids; [140233]

(2) what assessment is undertaken of the financial viability of bids to the Millennium Fund; and if she will make a statement. [140234]

Tessa Jowell: I will write to the hon. Member in my capacity as Chair of the Millennium Commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

NM Rothschild and Sons Ltd

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on services provided to her Department by NM Rothschild since 1997. [139965]

Mr. Caborn: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Olympic Bid

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total cost to public funds was of running the competition for a logo for the UK Olympic bid for London 2012. [140209]

Tessa Jowell: London 2012 Ltd organised an open competition to design the logo with a prize of £10,000 and associated organisational costs of £18,000. The competition attracted 1,100 entries generating community involvement in the bid, and was judged by a panel including athletes, designers, a school sports co-ordinator and a London black cab driver. The winning logo, which will be used on all bid materials and communications, from advertising and building wraps through to badges and pens, was produced by Kino Design. London 2012 Ltd have estimated that using a private design agency would have led to considerably higher costs.

Performance Monitoring

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total cost was of (a) setting, (b) monitoring and (c) measuring the performance targets for her Department in 2002–03; and how many and what grades of civil servants monitor these targets. [137955]

Estelle Morris: Performance targets for the department were agreed as part of Spending Review 2002. The monitoring and measurement of PSA targets forms part of departmental performance management. Performance management is an integral part of the day to day running of the department, and as such it is not possible to separate the specific costs out. The monitoring of progress towards, and performance against, the department's PSA targets is undertaken by a wide variety of staff at all levels of the organisation.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the performance targets that (a) her Department and (b) its agencies and non-departmental public bodies are required to meet; and if she will specify for each target (i) who sets it and (ii) who monitors achievement against it. [137970]

Estelle Morris: Key performance targets for the Department for Culture, Media and Sport are agreed as part of the Spending Review and the latest set were published in Spending Review 2002: Public Service Agreements 2003–2006 (Cm 5571). The department monitors progress towards the target along with HM Treasury and PMDU and progress is reported regularly.

Performance targets for the majority of the Department's non-departmental public bodies can be found in the 2003–2006 funding agreements between the Department and the relevant body, which were laid in the Library of the House on 25, 26 and 29 of September 2003. Performance targets for English Heritage and the Historic Royal Palaces are contained in these bodies annual reports which have been laid in the Library of the House. Performance targets for Sport England and Arts Council England are still being formulated.

Achievement against the targets is monitored by the department, including through meetings between the Secretary of State/Ministers and relevant Chief Executives.

Prime Funding

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had since July with leaders of sporting bodies which are not in the list of 10 for prime funding with public money announced on 18 November by the Chairman of Sport England. [140178]

Mr. Caborn: None. The list of sports which will qualify as priorities for Lottery funding at governing body level was and is entirely a matter for Sport England. The 10 sports announced on 18 November will be priorities for the 40 per cent. of total sports Lottery funding which will be allocated for governing body support at national level. The other 60 per cent. will be distributed through the nine Regional Sport Boards, which will consider projects on their merits and without regard to the national priority list.

Television Advertising

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the dates of meetings she and her officials have had with representatives of (a) the advertising industry, (b) commercial television channels and (c) the food and drink industry during the last six months. [138676]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 18 November 2003]: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the my hon. Friend and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

TV Licences

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) for what reason the Television Licensing Authority collects six months' money in advance from TV licence holders who opt to pay for their licences using the direct debit facility; under what powers the Television Licensing Authority collects such advance payments; and how much was held in advance payments on the latest date for which figures are available; [139389]

(2) what percentage of TV licence holders using the direct debit payment facility who surrendered their licences before the end of that term subsequently claimed refunds on their extra payments, in the last period for which figures are available; [139390]

(3) what percentage of deceased TV licence fee payers who used the direct debit payment facility subsequently had refunds claimed by their executors for the six months' extra payments, in the last year for which figures are available; [139391]

(4) if she will abolish the six-month pre-payment scheme for TV licence fee payers opting to use the direct debit facility; and if she will make a statement. [139394]

Estelle Morris: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Women's Sport

Angela Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what research has been commissioned by her Department into the gender balance of television sports coverage; and if she will make a statement. [139568]

Estelle Morris [holding answer 19 November 2003]: This Department has not undertaken any research in this area because broadcasters are generally free to respond to the needs and preferences of viewers in making their scheduling decisions. It is a well established principle of broadcasting that Government only intervenes in the sports broadcasting market to seek to ensure that all viewers, including the lower paid and the elderly, have "free to air" access to listed sporting events.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Asylum Seekers

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what legal advice is made available to asylum seekers. [139651]

Mr. Lammy: Publicly funded legal help is available for those making an asylum application, provided the client is financially eligible. Where an asylum application is refused, further legal advice and representation is available for an appeal, although at this stage the availability of public funding is subject to a strict merits test.

Only solicitors' firms or advice agencies that hold a contract with the Legal Services Commission may undertake publicly funded work.

My Department recently consulted on a series of changes to publicly funded immigration and asylum advice and representation. An announcement on the way forward will be made separately. In addition, the Department, the Home Office and the Legal Services Commission are currently examining the initial decision-making stage of the asylum process with particular regard to the role that publicly funded legal advice plays.

House Repossessions

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many house repossessions there have been in each region per quarter since 2000. [140174]

Mr. Leslie: Figures for the number of possession proceedings executed per quarter since 2000 are provided in the following tables.

Mr. Leslie: No. As the Prime Minister has indicated previously to the House, records are not kept of the individual occasions on which powers under the Royal Prerogative are exercised, nor would it be practicable to do so.

Consultants

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the cost to his Department was of the use of external consultants in (a) 2002–03 and (b) the last six months. [139245]

Mr. Lammy: The Department's net expenditure with external consultants in the financial year dated 2002–03 was £5.7 million.

My Department only collects information on consultancy expenditure on an annual basis at the end of the financial year, so figures for the current year are not yet available.

Crown Immunity

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs, if he will make a statement on the impact of (a) the Freedom of Information Act 2000 and (b) human rights legislation on disclosure of information from hearings under which access is restricted owing to Crown Property immunity from prosecution. [133075]

Mr. Leslie: Consideration is being given to the issue of the State's immunity from criminal proceedings. Both the Government's consultation paper on the reform of the law on involuntary manslaughter, in May 2000. and 'Revitalising Health and Safety' in June 2000, contained proposals for removing or modifying that immunity.

In the light of the responses to those publications, an inter-departmental working group was established. My noble Friend. the Under Secretary of State, Lord Filkin. will write to the hon. Member when further infomation is available.

Departmental Expenditure (Official Residences)

Mr. Flight: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much the Department spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [134684]

Mr. Lammy: My Department has no residential properties used by Ministers or officials.

Electronic Voting

Mr. Watson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what meetings he has had with manufacturers of electronic voting machines. [140027]

Mr. Leslie: I have not met with any manufacturers to discuss electronic voting machines, but my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Local Government has met a number of such manufacturers as part of the local elections pilots programme over the past three years.

Gender Recognition Certificates

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment he has made of (a) the impact on a marriage where one person is granted a full gender recognition certificate, (b) the effect on children in a marriage where one person is granted a FGRC and (c) the financial effects of one partner in a marriage being granted a FGRC. [138168]

Mr. Lammy: This Government are committed to understanding and recognising the needs and aspirations of transsexual people. We recognise that transsexual people face many challenges not least the impact on their family should they decide to seek legal recognition in an acquired gender. The purpose of the draft Bill is specifically to give transsexual people legal recognition in their acquired gender, and with that legal recognition transsexual people will be expected to conform with gender specific arrangements that would apply to anyone sharing their legal gender.

(a) The issue of what to do with existing marriages is a complex one. The Government's policy is clear on existing marriages that involve a transsexual person. It is a policy founded on the fact that UK law does not recognise marriage between two people of the same legal gender and the Government do not intend to see that position charmed.

(b) Transsexual parents will no doubt consider carefully what impact their gaining legal recognition in an acquired gender might have on their children. A transsexual person will retain his or her parental status after being granted a full gender recognition certificate and, thereby, legal recognition in their acquired gender.

(c) The issue of an interim gender recognition certificate makes the existing marriage of the successful applicant voidable at the application to the Courts of either party to the marriage but has no effect beyond that. In granting the annulment, the Court will be able to make orders dealing with financial and other issues arising from the annulment of the marriage.

(d) The Government have conducted a consultation exercise for same sex civil partnership and will publish their response in due course. If a civil partnership scheme is created, an individual who has been married prior to receiving recognition in the acquired gender could, subsequent to receiving recognition, register a civil partnership with the same individual.

House Sales

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many house sales there were at more than (a) £50,001, (b) £100,001, (c) £200,001, (d) £500,001, (e) £750,001 and (f) £1 million in London in each of the last six years for which figures are available. [139932]

Mr. Lammy: The figures for each completed calendar year are as follows. Land Registry collects residential property price data by specified price bands and it is not possible to provide figures for sales specifically at "more than £750,001". An alternative range has therefore been provided.

More than (£)	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002

Lady Hermon: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many responses he received to the "Constitutional Reform: Reforming the Office of the Lord Chancellor" consultation document; how many of these responses came from (a) the judiciary and legal professions, (b) Government Departments and agencies, (c) political parties and hon. Magistrates (Wales)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the declared political allegiance of magistrate benches in Wales was in the last year for which figures are available. [140367]

Mr. Leslie: Applicants to the magistracy are no longer asked to declare their political affiliation. The most recent figures, however, give the position in April 2003. These show that, of those who declared any affiliation, 526 declared for Labour, 473 for the Conservatives, 240 for the Liberal Democrats and 126 for Plaid Cymru.

Market Research

Dr. Cable: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much the Department spent on (a) opinion polling and (b) market research in the last financial year; and if he will make a statement. [139990]

Mr. Lammy: My Department conducts a range of exercises to measure public satisfaction with services and to assess future needs. Information regarding expenditure on such activities is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Office for the Supervision of Solicitors

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will make a statement on the rate of throughput of cases in the Office for the Supervision of Solicitors. [139678]

Mr. Lammy: The OSS produce a monthly Digest of Performance Measures and Statistics which gives details of their performance. From January 2003 to October 2003, their throughput of cases is as follows:

Combined performance of conduct and service cases

Food Aid

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which countries have been the top five recipients of (a) UK and (b) EU food aid in 2003; what tonnages of food each received, broken down by food type in each of the last five years; and what local production of these food types was in the five countries in each of the last five years. [138889]

Hilary Benn: The top five recipients of UK bilateral food aid in 2002–03 are:

	£ million
Central Africa (regional)	25.75
Ethiopia	19.04
Zimbabwe	6.51
Zambia	4.28
Angola	2.75

EC figures (including UK attribution) for 2003 are not yet available.

UK Government food aid contributions are made in cash rather than in kind and disbursed through a variety of means including World Food Programme and Non-Governmental Organisations. Neither DFID nor the EC hold centrally information relating to the tonnages and types of food then purchased, or the local production statistics in each of the recipient countries. To answer the question fully and going back over five years, would incur disproportionate cost.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of pregnant women aged between 15 and 24 years in sub-Saharan Africa suffered from HIV/AIDS in the last year for which figures are available. [139535]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: There is limited data on the prevalence rate among pregnant women in the 15 to 24-year-age group. However, the level of HIV infection among pregnant women is similar to that in the general female population and the latter can be used as a proxy for the prevalence in pregnant women of the same age.

The latest UNAIDS estimates of the prevalence rate of HIV/AIDS in women aged 15 to 24 years in sub-Saharan Africa range between a low of 6.4 per cent. and a high of 11.4 per cent. at the end of 2001. The World Bank estimates the middle point of this range as 9.3 per cent.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the prevalence rates of HIV infection were in vulnerable groups in Asia in each of the last 10 years. [139541]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Comprehensive data showing prevalence rates for these vulnerable groups in Asia is not available for the whole period requested. What data is available comes mainly from internationally accepted sources e.g. UNAIDS (see www.unaids.org). It does suggest a clear trend of increasing HIV prevalence in specific vulnerable groups in several countries.

DFID is working closely with others, including UNAIDS, to improve data on HIV prevalence in these marginalised and often hidden population groups in China, India and other Asian countries.

Illiteracy

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on illiteracy in developing countries in (a) 1980, (b) 1990 and (c) 2000. [139621]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Dakar Goal on literacy calls for a 50 per cent. improvement in levels of adult literacy by 2015. The world is making steady but slow progress on this goal. In 2000, almost one fifth of the world's adults, 862 million people aged 15 and over, were illiterate. This means that over the last two decades we have seen an improvement of less than 10 per cent. in adult literacy rates, from approximately 70 per cent. in 1980 and 75 per cent. in 1990 to 80 per cent. in 2000. Women continue to be disproportionately affected and still account for almost two-thirds of the world's illiterates. Clearly, the world needs to intensify efforts if the Dakar literacy goal is to be achieved

DFID believes that literacy is key to enabling individuals to acquire the basic skills necessary to build and sustain a livelihood, and to participate in and shape society. To support national governments in their efforts to reduce levels of illiteracy, DFID focuses on strengthening education systems to increase access to good quality primary education for all children. Since May 1997 the Government have committed over £700 million to support sustainable, high quality, primary education systems in developing countries. We will do more. Between 2002 and 2007 we intend to invest about £1 billion in education.

At the same time, improving literacy practice for adults will continue to be an integral part of many different sectoral programmes supported by DFID, such as health, transport and water. We will continue to emphasise the need to ensure that all such efforts to improve literacy levels are given appropriate priority in poverty reduction strategies.

Iraq

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to his answer of 1 September 2003, to the hon. Member for Edinburgh West (John Barrett), Official Report, column 809W, if he will make a statement on the work of the task force set up to remove radioactive material removed from the civil nuclear facility at al-Tuwaitha in Iraq. [138617]

Mr. Rammell: I have been asked to reply.

The findings of the inspection team which assessed the extent and impact of the looting of the storage drums and containers from Al Tuwaitha has been reported by the Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). The inspection team found that approximately 200 containers, used for storing low-enriched uranium, had been removed and the contents dispersed. The quantity and type of compounds dispersed were not found to be sensitive from a proliferation point of view. The site has now been secured and the radioactive material sealed in concrete.

A second task force, consisting of the Iraqi Ministry of Health, Ministry of the Environment, World Health Organisation (WHO), Coalition Provisional Authority, IAEA and NGOs was convened to address the potential risk to public health caused by the residual radioactive materials within the looted containers. As a result, the MoH, MoE and WHO have initiated a survey, through local public health centres, to assess and monitor the population potentially affected. The survey, still in its preliminary phase, has been disrupted by the impact of the bombing of the UN HQ on 19 August 2003 and has yet to be completed. The UK Government has provided £6 million to WHO in 2003 to support WHOs sectoral lead in health in Iraq.

Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the follow-up action taken by the countries which have completed poverty reduction strategy papers. [139617]

Hilary Benn: So far, Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers (PRSPs) are being implemented in 32 countries, three of which are in the process of implementing their second PRSP (Bolivia, Nicaragua and Uganda). Through its Country Offices and with international partners, DFID is working closely to monitor progress on implementation.

Preliminary evidence suggests that many of these countries are using their PRSPs to maintain processes for civil society participation; improve the framing of macroeconomic policies; improve policies for service delivery and governance; improve public expenditure management; and shift spending priorities towards poverty reduction.

According to the World Bank and IMF, expenditure on poverty-reducing sectors (e.g. health, education, water, sanitations) has increased in PRSP countries by 4 per cent. of total spending, and by 1.5 per cent. of GDP. However, implementation of these strategies remains at an early stage, and will require sustained support both from country governments and the international community to help meet emerging challenges and realise the Millennium Development Goals.

Primary Education

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of primary age children enrolled in primary school in Asia in each of the last 10 years. [139538]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Internationally agreed figures for Primary school enrolment for each of the last 10 years do not exist. However the most recent Education For All Global Monitoring Report published by UNESCO in November 2003 compares the Net Enrolment Rate, defined as the number of pupils in the official primary school age group enrolled in primary school as a percentage of the primary school age population, for the Asia regions (Central Asia, East Asia and the Pacific, and South and West Asia) between 1990 and 2000. Details are:

Primary net enrolment ratio

	1990	2000
Central Asia	82	91
East Asia and Pacific	96	93
South and West Asia	73	81

The Education For All Global Monitoring Report 2003–04, containing this data, is available at http://www.efareport.unesco.org

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the ratio of girls to boys enrolled in primary school in Asia has been in the last 10 years. [139612]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Internationally agreed figures for gender ratios of enrolments for each of the last 10 years do not exist. However the most recent Education For All Global Monitoring Report published by UNESCO in November 2003 compares the Gender Parity Index (GPI), defined as the ratio of female-to-male gross enrolment ratios, for the Asia regions (Central Asia, East Asia and the Pacific, and South and West Asia) between 1990 and 2000. Details are:

Ratio of girls to boys in primary school

	1999	2000
Central Asia	0.99	0.99
East Asia and Pacific	0.94	0.99
South and West Asia	0.76	0.84

Beverley Hughes: The latest available information on those persons proceeded against, and found guilty, under section 8 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1996 and section 24 of the Immigration Act 1971 are shown in the table. Comparable data prior to 1983 are not available due to changes in data collection methods.

The data given for 1997 to 2001 have been revised significantly since they were published in the command paper "Control of Immigration Statistics: United Kingdom 2001" in November 2002. These corrected data are being published here for the first time. Despite being labelled as being the number of persons proceeded against under the Acts, the data for magistrates courts given previously described the number of offences and therefore have been revised downwards.

For the Crown Court, the tables previously counted immigration offences only where they were the principle offence under consideration. The figures have now been revised upwards to include the principle immigration offence, irrespective of what other offences may have been dealt with at the same time.

Information on those people proceeded against in 2002 under the Immigration Acts is due to be published at the end of Novemb[illegible] on the Home Office website: www.homeoffice.gov.u[illegible]rds/whatsnew1.html.

WALES

Bechtel

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel in each year after 1997 by the Welsh Office, stating in each case (a) the nature of the work, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the duration of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [137734]

Mr. Touhig: The Wales Office was established in 1999. Bechtel have not been contracted to carry out any consultancy work for the Wales Office since then.

There are no records of Bechtel carrying out any work for the Welsh Office between 1997 and 1999.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel for agencies responsible to his Department or its predecessor in year since 1997, stating in each case (a) the nature of the work, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the duration of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [138061]

Mr. Touhig: The Wales Office was established in 1999. It has no agencies.

There are no records of Bechtel carrying out any work for agencies of the Welsh Office between 1997 and 1999.

Burglary

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the level of burglary was in Wales in 1997; what it was in 2002; and if he will make a statement. [139293]

Mr. Touhig: The number of burglary offences recorded in 1997 was 46,445. In 2002–03, it was 36,848.

There was a change in the counting rules for recorded crime from 1998, which had the effect of increasing the number of crimes counted, and therefore, the number of offences are not directly comparable.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his co-ordinated plans with the Welsh Assembly to tackle drug abuse in Wales. [139294]

Mr. Touhig: I have met ministerial colleagues, both in Westminster and the Assembly, to discuss tackling substance misuse.

The Drug Strategy, "Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain", was introduced in 1998. Following a review in 2002, it was built on and adapted with the launch of an Updated Strategy, which is widely available, including on the Home Office website.

The Assembly has responsibility for many areas of tackling substance misuse in Wales, for example, the provision of treatment for those with substance misuse problems. The Assembly Strategy for Wales, "Tackling Substance Misuse in Wales: A Partnership Approach", is widely available, including on the National Assembly for Wales' website.

Examination Results

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the average grade at (a) GCSE and (b) A-level in Wales was in 2002; and what the results were in England. [139592]

Mr. Touhig: Provisional statistical information on GCSE and A-level results in Wales for 2002 are available in the National Assembly's Statistics Wales Release SDR 55/2003.

DfES provides statistical information for GCSE and A-level results in England in a similar form in their release SFR 30/2003.

Both releases are available in the library of the House of Commons.

Free Prescriptions

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those medical conditions which allow free prescriptions to be claimed. [135258]

Mr. Touhig: This information is available in the leaflet HC11—Help with Health Costs, which states that free NHS prescriptions can be claimed by those who have a valid medical certificate issued because of the following conditions:

- Permanent fistula (including caecostomy, colostomy, ileostomy or laryngostomy) requiring continuous surgical dressing or an appliance
- Forms of hypoadrenalism (including Addison's disease) for which specific substitution therapy is essential
- Diabetes insipidus and other forms of hypopituitarism
- Diabetes mellitus except where treatment is by diet alone
- Hypoparathyroidism
- Myasthenia gravis
- Myxoedema (Hypothyroidism) or other conditions where supplemental thyroid hormone is necessary.
- Epilepsy requiring continuous anti-convulsive therapy
- A continuing physical disability which prevents the patient leaving his residence except with the help of another person.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) free and (b) charged for prescriptions were issued in each year since 1997. [135288]

Mr. Touhig: The information is given in the following table:

Prescriptions items dispensed in the community within Wales

£ million

	Free of charge	Charged
1997–98[1]	32.2	4.4
1998–99[1]	33.1	4.5
2001–02	38.0	5.1
2002–03	40.4	5.3

[1] Estimate based on a 5 per cent. sample.

Data for 1999–2000 is not available. Data for 1997–99 relates to the responsibility of the former Welsh Office, while the figures since then are the responsibility of the National Assembly for Wales.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many free prescriptions to the chronically ill were issued in each year since 1997. [135289]

Mr. Touhig: Information collected centrally for the National Assembly for Wales on prescriptions exempt from charge in Wales relates only to those conditions which are medically exempt. As prescription items dispensed for other chronic conditions are not identified separately it is not possible to give an overall figure.

Gun Crime

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many incidences of gun crime there were in Wales in 2002; how many there were in 1997; and if he will make a statement. [139295]

Mr. Touhig: There were 85 recorded crimes in Wales in 1997 involving a firearm other than an air weapon; the figure was 106 in 2002.

Although the incidence of firearms offences is relatively low in Wales, too many people are still being killed or injured by firearms. This is unacceptable and is being addressed on a number of fronts, including:

- reducing the supply and availability of firearms, and
- effective police operations to drive down firearm offences.

During the firearms amnesty earlier this year, 508 guns were handed in, in Wales. The proposed five-year minimum sentence for illegally selling, possessing or manufacturing prohibited firearms sends a strong message that we will not tolerate the illegal proliferation of guns within our society.

Manufactured Imports

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the First Secretary on the level of imports of manufactured goods into Wales. [136383]

Mr. Touhig: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales regularly meets the First Minister. In addition, I have regular bi-lateral meetings with the National Assembly for Wales's Economic Development Minister and discuss a wide range of issues, including trade levels of manufacturing goods in Wales.

The level of exports for manufacturing goods in Wales since May 1997 to the quarter ending 2002 has been consistently higher than the level of imports to Wales.

Current available statistics point to a continuation of this trend.

NHS (Capital Expenditure)

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much capital expenditure there has been in the NHS in Wales in each of the last five years; and how much of that was attributable to private finance initiative projects. [137090]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 10 November 2003]: In the 2002 Spending Review, the Government allocated an additional £251 million in 2003–04, £925 million in 2004–05 and £1,765 million in 2005–06 to Wales in accordance with the long standing Barnett formula. This included the allocations for health of £140/516/931 million announced by the Chancellor in his spring 2002 Budget.

The allocation of public expenditure on services such as health is a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

Top-up Fees

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on higher education top-up fees in Wales. [139292]

Mr. Touhig: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales announced in his written statement of 17 July 2003, Official Report, column 84WS, we propose, subject to parliamentary approval, to transfer to the National Assembly for Wales full responsibility for the tuition fee regime, including powers over new policy as regards variable fees.

Waiting Times

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for reducing waiting times for NHS treatment in Wales. [139280]

Mr. Touhig: I have regular meetings with the Assembly Minister for Health and Social Services, at which we discuss a range of health issues including waiting times.

I am aware that the Assembly has very recently announced a new initiative to tackle long waiting times in Wales. Setting priorities for the Health Service in Wales, including waiting times, is a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Rural Bodies

9. Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) Countryside Agency and (b) Rural Development Service employees will transfer to other government employment following the implementation of the Haskins Review; how many job losses she estimates there will be; and if she will make a statement. [139838]

Margaret Beckett: In my statement on 11 November, I announced my intention to create an integrated agency that would incorporate elements of the work of English Nature, the Countryside Agency and the Rural Development Service where those functions will most enable the agency to reflect its new remit. Plans for how this agency will be set up, including arrangements for transferring staff, are now being developed. I would hope to give more details in the spring.

22. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how she proposes that the independent role played by English Nature will be maintained under the proposals of the rural delivery review. [139851]

Alun Michael: The intention is to strengthen the independent role currently played by English Nature, not merely to maintain it. In her statement on 11 November, the Secretary of State announced her intention to create an integrated agency to incorporate elements of the work of English Nature, the Countryside Agency and the Rural Development Service. The integrated agency will use the experience and expertise of its constituent parts. English Nature's worldwide reputation on biodiversity matters provides a strong foundation for this work. The integrated agency will provide independent policy advice to Government and will implement policy within the framework of the Government's approach to sustainable development.

The exact status of the agency will be considered as part of the Government's full response and implementation plan, as my right hon. Friend made clear.

Recycling

13. Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of whether the UK will meet its recycling targets for 2005. [139842]

Mr. Morley: National targets for England are to recycle and compost 17 per cent. of household waste in 2003–04 and 25 per cent. in 2005–06. Our current assessment of local authority performance is that we expect to meet the 2003–04 target and that, although challenging, the 2005–06 target is achievable.

Dairy Industry

14. Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the dairy industry. [139843]

Alun Michael: The Government recognise the difficulties caused by low farmgate prices and the challenges of adjusting to the new conditions faced by the reformed CAP, but we also believe that the UK dairy sector has a sustainable future. The UK has a comparative advantage in terms of climate and farm efficiency and size over many of its competitors and if the industry can work together to maximise its potential then there is no reason why it cannot succeed.

17. Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action she will take to increase the farmgate price of milk for British dairy farmers. [139846]

Alun Michael: The reasons for the low farmgate prices over the last few years are complex and cannot be reduced to a single factor. Many of these reasons require action by the industry itself. However, the Government can and have taken action in line with their strategy for sustainable farming and food to facilitate and promote the industry's efforts to become more competitive.

18. Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with representatives of the dairy industry. [139847]

Alun Michael: Ministers frequently meet representatives from all parts of the dairy supply chain and are therefore aware of the issues affecting the sector. Matters affecting the whole supply chain are regularly discussed at the Dairy Supply Chain Forum chaired by my noble Friend, the Lord Whitty.

21. Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the dairy industry. [139850]

Alun Michael: The Government recognise the difficulties caused by low farmgate prices and the challenges of adjusting to the new conditions faced by the reformed CAP, but we also believe that the UK dairy sector has a sustainable future. The UK has a comparative advantage in terms of climate and farm efficiency and size over many of its competitors and if the industry can work together to maximise its potential then there is no reason why it cannot succeed.

Transport (Environmental Impact)

15. John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Department for Transport on the environmental impacts from transport. [139844]

Mr. Morley: My ministerial colleagues and I have regular discussions with the ministerial team in the Department for Transport on many matters including environmental issues.

Sheep

19. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is on the European Commission's proposals on sheep identification. [139848]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government support the Commission's objective to improve sheep and goat identification but are very concerned that it has take full account of the particular needs and requirements of the UK's stratified and extensive sheep industry.

We are currently undertaking negotiations in the Council of Ministers and are pressing hard for a satisfactory outcome for the UK industry.

Farm Subsidies

20. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the representations she has received from farming interest groups concerning the review of subsidies to farming. [139849]

Alun Michael: We have received responses from a wide range of stakeholders to the public consultation on the options available to member states under the agreement on reforming the common agricultural policy (CAP). There was close to unanimous support for our decision to decouple subsidy fully in England from 2005. The biggest issue to emerge from the consultation was whether to go for an historic or flat rate basis for the single farm payment and responses were divided on this. We are looking carefully at the responses to the consultation and will be making a decision soon on the model for the single farm payment.

Common Fisheries Policy

23. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the sea fish species whose stocks have increased in UK waters since the institution of the European common fisheries policy. [139852]

Mr. Bradshaw: Fish stocks fluctuate considerably over time, and so comparing two arbitrarily chosen years is of limited value. Generally, however, pelagic stocks, such as mackerel and herring, are at higher levels than in 1983 when the common fisheries policy came into effect. A few demersal stocks, such as North sea haddock, are also at higher levels than in 1983. Stocks of prawns and shellfish have generally thrived.

Gangmasters

Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) to what extent legislation applies to undocumented gangmaster-provided labour in the agricultural, horticultural and first-line food processing industries; [140246]

(2) what (a) monitoring and (b) enforcement provisions are used to ensure that gangmasters in the agricultural, horticultural and first-line food processing industries comply with United Kingdom legislation; [140247]

(3) how many gangmasters providing labour in the agricultural, horticultural and first-line food processing industries have been found to be in breach of United Kingdom law since 1997; how many of those gangmasters were subsequently prosecuted; and what sanctions and penalties were applied to those gangmasters found guilty following prosecution. [140248]

Mr. Bradshaw: This information will take some time to collate. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information in due course.

Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many gangmasters operate within the agricultural, horticultural and first-line food processing industries in the UK; and how many gangworkers are employed within these industries. [140189]

Mr. Bradshaw: Information about the number of gangmasters operating in the agricultural, horticultural and first-line food processing industries in the UK and the number of workers they supply is not collected by Government. In evidence given to the EFRA Select Committee's inquiry into gangmasters it was estimated that the number of gangmasters operating in agriculture and horticulture could be approaching 3,000 of which some 250 are thought to be substantial businesses. Information about the total number of seasonal and casual workers employed in agriculture and horticulture is collected by Defra's annual Census of agriculture and horticulture. In June 2002 (when the Census was taken) some 64,000 seasonal and casual workers were employed. This figure will include both workers supplied by gangmasters to employers in agriculture and horticulture and workers who are employed directly by those employers.

Habitats Directive

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the regulatory impact of the UK regime for administering the Habitats Directive. [138553]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Habitats Directive is principally transposed into UK law by regulations which came into force in 1994 and 1995. Since then no overall assessment has been made. Nature conservation is a devolved matter and therefore any assessment in Scotland, North Ireland and Wales will be a matter for the relevant administrations. In England, assessments are carried out before candidate Special Areas of Conservation are submitted to the European Commission under Article 4 of the Directive. My Department has also published Regulatory Impact Assessments on recently proposed draft amendments to the regulations in England, and on draft regulations to implement the Directive in the offshore zone.

Beef Exports

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what compensation has been offered to UK farmers as a consequence of the unauthorised ban on British beef imports to France; and if she will make a statement. [139845]

Mr. Bradshaw: No compensation has been offered to UK farmers for the effects of the illegal French ban on imports of UK beef. Any bids for compensation must come from those affected and be pursued with the French authorities.

"A" Rated Appliances

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will respond to the letter of 24 October from the Chief Executive of the Radio, Electrical and Television Retailers' Association about the ability of small electrical retailers to sell 'A' rated appliances. [140062]

Alun Michael: Letters sent direct to the Department from Organisations and Members of the public are not recorded centrally but are passed to the appropriate policy Division for response. I understand that the letter referred to by the hon. Member is being dealt with and the Chief Executive of the Radio, Electrical and Television Retailers' Association will receive a response shortly.

Abattoirs

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice and assistance will be given to small abattoirs to meet health and safety standards in the next two years. [139046]

Mr. Bradshaw: We are working in close co-operation with industry representatives, the Meat and Livestock Commission and regional partners to secure an appropriate network of abattoirs throughout the country. This includes the continuing role of small and medium sized enterprises. Official meat inspection costs are being offset by the Food Standards Agency by more than £20 million per annum. In addition we have advised abattoir owners on the requirements for blood collection under the new Animal By-Products regulations, particularly on how compliance costs for small businesses could be minimised. We will continue to take a constructive approach to the implementation of regulatory requirements including implementation of hazard analysis critical control point procedures.

Agriculture

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what grants are available to (a) dairy, (b) arable, (c) sheep, (d) beef, (e) poultry and (f) pig farmers in the Chorley constituency. [140023]

Mr. Bradshaw: Farmers in Chorley can apply to participate in the following schemes under the England Rural Development Programme: Countryside Stewardship Scheme, Organic Farming Scheme, Farm Woodland Premium Scheme, Woodland Grant Scheme, Energy Crops Scheme, Vocational Training Scheme, Processing and Marketing Grant, and Rural Enterprise Scheme. Any sheep and suckler cow producers whose holdings are within or part within the Less Favoured Area boundary are entitled to claim Hill Farm Allowance.

The Farm Waste Grant (Nitrate Vulnerable Zones) Scheme provides help to farmers in Nitrate Vulnerable Zones who are installing or improving farm waste facilities.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on grants given by regional development agencies for agricultural shows in (a) England and (b) the North West over the last two years. [139263]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

I have not been able to answer this Question before Prorogation. I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the grant given to the Royal Lancashire Agricultural Society by the North West Development Agency for the 2003 Royal Lancashire Show. [139264]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The Lancashire Rural Recovery Partnership, which is funded by the North West Development Agency, provided a grant of £32,578 to fund some of the marketing costs for the 2003 Royal Lancashire Show. This was to help publicise the fact that the Show was taking place at a new venue for the first time in 2003. The funding also contributed towards the promotion of a local product event aimed at generating awareness of local speciality products.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the outcome was of the Agriculture and Fisheries Council on 17th November; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if she will make a statement. [139941]

Margaret Beckett: I will write to my hon. Friend with this information shortly.

Air Quality (Heathrow)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department has commissioned into air quality in the Heathrow area; and if she will publish the findings. [138843]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra has commissioned Cambridge Environmental Research Consultants Ltd to model air quality in the Heathrow area. The report is expected April 2004. The Department also assesses air quality at a national level and in the Greater London area and publishes the results on its air quality website, the Air Quality Archive. Both these levels of assessment include Heathrow.

National air quality monitoring data are available at www.airquality.co.uk. The latest published national air quality modelling report "UK air quality modelling for annual reporting 2001 on ambient air quality assessment under Council Directives 96/62/EC and 1999/30/EC" is available at www.airquality.co.uk/archive/reports; as too is the latest research report modelling London's air quality "Modelling air quality for London using ADMS-Urban".

American Ships (Decommissioning)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what date Able UK applied to her Department for (a) a dredging licence and (b) a licence to build a protective bund for a proposed dry dock in respect of the planned decommissioning of United States vessels. [137143]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 November 2003]: The information is as follows:

(a) Defra regulates the disposal of dredged material at sea rather than dredging per se. The Department received an application for disposal of dredged material on 20 October 2003.

(b) Able UK applied for a FEPA licence to build a coffer dam at the mouth of the TERRC basin on 26 September 2003.

A FEPA licence had been applied for successfully before but had lapsed.

Atlantic Ocean

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what data her Department has collated on the salinity of the seawater of the North East Atlantic Ocean over the last 20 year period; and if she will publish the data. [140087]

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the deep sea salinity levels of gulf stream waters off the coast of the UK were in each of the past 10 years. [140409]

Mr. Morley: I will write to the hon. Member, and my hon. Friend with this information shortly.

Atrazine (Maize)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the results were of the Farm Scale Evaluation trials in respect of conventional maize crops in the 17 per cent. of cases where atrazine was not used as a herbicide. [140153]

Mr. Morley: The results of the farm-scale evaluations published on 16 October 2003 were based on the range of contemporary practice used by the participating farmers for conventional maize. The published papers did not present separate results for each conventional practice that this encompassed. Such analysis may be possible based on the data collected and I understand the research team are currently considering this. If any further information becomes available it will be published in the normal way.

Badgers

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action has been taken to prevent recolonisation of badger setts after clearance of TB-infected badgers in Krebs reactive areas. [140297]

Mr. Bradshaw: All trapped setts are subject to the same procedures, irrespective of the TB status of the badgers taken from them, and no action is taken to prevent re-colonisation of any setts in reactive areas.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, what procedures are carried out in respect of badger setts from which TB-infected badgers have been removed. [140298]

Mr. Bradshaw: All procedures are standardised and do not vary between setts from which TB infected badgers and non-infected badgers are taken.

Within the Randomised Badger Culling Trial, no specific action is taken against setts from which badgers have been removed. Following the removal of traps, at the conclusion of trapping operations, techniques such as sticking holes (placing sticks across them) may, occasionally, be used to assist subsequent surveys assess post-cull badger activity.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what radius was adopted to describe the area designated for badger culls in (a) the Krebs proactive and reactive culling protocols and (b) culling protocols adopted prior to 1988. [140310]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Krebs proactive and reactive culling areas were chosen from localities in Cornwall, Derbyshire, Devon, Gloucestshire, Herefordshire, Staffordshire and Wiltshire with the highest incidence of TB in cattle; each of the ten proactive and ten reactive areas measures approximately 10,000 hectares (100 sq km). Whilst culling is carried out across an entire proactive area, in reactive areas culling takes place only on and around farms which have had a TB breakdown.

The culling protocols adopted prior to 1986 were the Gassing Strategy (1975–1982) and the Clean Ring Strategy (1982–5). In the Gassing Strategy the area of badger removal extended up to 1 km from farms with confirmed TB breakdowns. The mean area of badger removal in Clean Ring Strategy areas was about 9 sq. km.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research the Department has commissioned on the use of anaesthesia in badger setts prior to lethal gassing. [140312]

Mr. Bradshaw: No research has been commissioned in this area.

Gassing of badgers has been discounted as a culling option because it is considered to be inhumane.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many badgers have been subject to post-mortem examination for TB in England in the past 10 years; how many were TB reactors; and what proportion of TB lesions found were considered to be of a type which would render badgers capable of transmitting bovine TB. [140313]

Mr. Bradshaw: Excluding badgers taken in the Randomised Badger Culling Trial (RBCT) or in the seven counties road trafic accident survey, 14,387 badger carcases have been examined of which 2,995 (20.5 per cent.) were considered to be positive. The Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB (ISO) recommended that, pending completion of the RBCT, interim reports on numbers and locations of badgers culled and TB prevalences should not be published in order to avoid encouraging illegal action against badgers, deterring participation in the trial and to protect the trial's statistical validity.

Of the badgers considered to be infected, only those with lesions detected in the lungs, pleura, kidneys and intestines are considered to be likely to be shedding M.bovis and so infectious. 447 (15.1 per cent. had lesions in these tissues.

Barn Owls

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received from the Highways Agency on implementing the recommendations in its Biodiversity Action plan on steps to halt the decline in the barn owl population. [139765]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Highways Agency Biodiversity Action Plan (HABAP), published in 2002, includes a specific Species Action Plan (SAP) for Barn Owls. The stated aim of the SAP is > "to reduce the level of incidental mortality on new and existing roads whilst ensuring favourable management of barn owl foraging and nesting habitat."

This document sets out a number of related objectives and associated actions required to achieve them.

The Highways Agency has commissioned its own study on the barn owl and is currently reviewing the findings of its own commissions and those of others. The outcome of this review will contribute to the publication of advice on implementation of appropriate actions in accordance with the SAP.

The Government have set new targets to protect and enhance biodiversity as part of The Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate. The Framework and associated targets cover all central Government Departments and their Executive Agencies, including the Highways Agency. Departments will report annually on progress.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to implement changes in agricultural policy to improve the (a) quantity and (b) quality of barn owl habitats away from major roads. [139766]

Mr. Bradshaw: Through our agri-environment schemes we have encouraged farmers to provide many thousands of hectares of grassland habitat, including for example over 20,000 hectares of cereal field margins. These less-intensively managed areas are good habitats for small mammals and provide barn owls with somewhere other than roadside verges to hunt their prey.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs from which organisations the Department takes advice on the control of TB in cattle. [140291]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB (ISG) is a group of independent scientists who advise the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on how best to tackle the problem of cattle TB. The ISG was set up following the acceptance by Ministers of the recommendations contained in the Krebs Report (1997).

In addition, the TB Forum aims to bring together experts and interested parties to consider new measures which might be taken to control TB in cattle. Membership consists of representatives from the British Veterinary Association, the British Cattle Veterinary Association, the Countryside Council for Wales, the Country Land and Business Association, English Nature, the Farmers Union of Wales, The National Farmers' Union, NFU (Wales), Wildlife Trusts, the National Federation of Badger Groups, the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, the National Beef Association, the Tenant Farmers Association and the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Professor John Bourne, Chairman of the ISG is also a member of the Forum, which is chaired jointly by the Chief Veterinary Officer, Jim Scudamore, and the Head of the Animal Health Group at Defra, Peter Nash.

Mr. Paterson To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the estimated population of badgers in England was between 1973 and 1980; and what the estimate is for 2003; [140292]

(2) how many closed dairy herds in England are registered with the Department; [140294]

(3) what steps farmers can take to ensure that their cattle are not exposed to M. bovis infection where pasture might be frequented by badgers actively shedding M. bovis vacilli; [140295]

(4) if she will make a statement on the conditions under which a badger is capable of transmitting TB to cattle; and what the mechanism of transmission is; [140302]

(5) what protocol was adopted for the ecological survey carried out as part of the Krebs trials; [140303]

(6) what the potential maximum period of infectivity of adult badgers demonstrating active lesions of M. bovis infection is; [140305]

(7) what assessment she has made of the success rate, in terms of the percentage of badgers killed in a defined area, of the policy of gassing setts adopted prior to 1986; [140311]

(8) how many cows have been subject to post-mortem examination for TB in each of the past 10 years; how many were found to be TB reactors; and how many of the reactors revealed tubercular lesions in the udder capable of contaminating milk. [140315]

Mr. Bradshaw: I will write to the hon. Member with this information shortly.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice the Department have given to farmers on keeping closed herds. [140293]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has provided a significant amount of advice and codes on the health and welfare of livestock. The Defra leaflet, "TB in Cattle—Reducing the Risk" suggests that farmers consider moving to a closed herd system. However, such a system still needs to be combined with other disease prevention measures to reduce risks of disease introduction and spread.

Due to loss of livestock during FMD, there was a need to replace livestock from outside sources. Defra produced a leaflet "Golden rules for a healthy herd" that gave specific advice on preventative strategies for avoiding introduction of the most important cattle diseases during restocking.

Defra has also produced a concise list of disease prevention measures (including the need to always know the health status of animals being bought or moved) in the form of a yellow card which was developed with livestock industry representatives and vets. It was sent to all livestock farmers in 2002, and is available on the Defra website.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether perturbation becomes a significant factor in the spread of TB to cattle where there has been incomplete clearance of badgers in a Krebs reactive area. [140296]

Mr. Bradshaw: We do not know the significance of badger perturbation in the reactive culling areas of the Krebs trial. However, it is known that badgers in a culled population do exhibit changes in their ecology and behaviour which may result in an increased risk of disease transmission.

Research on perturbation is being carried out on behalf of Defra by Oxford University and the Central Science Laboratory. Results will published once the research programme has been completed.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what actions are required of dairy farmers in respect of their premises following removal of (a) TB reactor and (b) infected cattle from their premises. [140299]

Mr. Bradshaw: Movement restrictions are imposed on all cattle herds when TB reactors are disclosed at the TB test. In the case of dairy herds, the Chief Environmental Health Officer will be informed, to enable decisions to made about protecting public health. If disease is confirmed, the Consultant in Communicable Disease Control will also be informed.

Immediately following their identification, all reactors should be isolated from contact with any other cattle. These cattle must remain in isolation until removal for slaughter. Animals that react inconclusively to the test must also be isolated both from the herd and from the conclusive reactors. They must remain in isolation pending retest.

After removal of reactor(s) or affected animals a Cleansing and Disinfection Notice is issued to the owner. The notice covers the isolation building and any other areas of the farm identified by the Veterinary Officer as likely to be infected. Up to a month is allowed to carry out the disinfection and cleansing.

Movement restrictions remain in place until the herd has tested clear at least once (twice where infection is confirmed after post-mortem).

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what class of pathogen bovis is. [140300]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra classify animal pathogens for the purpose of administering the Importation of Animal Pathogens Order 1980 and the Specified Animal Pathogens Order 1998. Mycobacterium bovis is classified as a Group 2 animal pathogen.

Pathogens classified as group 2 are disease producing organisms which are either exotic or produce notifiable disease, but have a low risk of spread from the laboratory.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the likely incidence of TB breakdown in cattle in Krebs reactive areas, if 100 per cent. culling of badger population in the areas had been carried out. [140301]

Mr. Bradshaw: Under the protocols for the Krebs trial, badgers are culled using cage trapping, which is estimated to remove around 80 per cent. of the badger population. Analysis of the trial data from reactive areas is therefore only able to indicate what effect this level of removal on and around farms which have had a TB breakdown will have on the incidence of TB breakdown in the reactive area as a whole. It is not possible to estimate what effect an alternative capture method, which would remove 100 per cent., rather than 80 per cent., of the badgers would have.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether cattle-to-cattle transmission of TB has occurred in the Krebs reactive trial area. [140304]

Mr. Bradshaw: It is highly likely that some cattle-to-cattle transmission of TB has occurred in all Krebs trial areas, although it is impossible to quantify the number of herd breakdowns which might have been due to this means of infection.

An epidemiological survey in the Krebs badger culling trial areas, known as "TB99", is looking at risk factors in TB outbreaks. A preliminary analysis is set out in the Third Report of the Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the OIE limit of the incidence of TB in cattle necessary to maintain TB-free status trading for the UK, expressed as a percentage of the national herd. [140308]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Office of International des Epizooties (OIE) provides expertise for the control of animal diseases.

Article 2.3.3.2 of the OIE Terrestrial Animal Health Code states that for a Country or zone to qualify as officially free from bovine tuberculosis, shall satisfy the following requirements:

Bovine tuberculosis is notifiable in the country;

99.8 per cent. of the herds in the considered geographical area have been officially free from bovine tuberculosis for at least the past three years as disclosed by periodic testing of all cattle in the area to determine the absence of bovine tuberculosis.

Periodic testing of all cattle is not required in an area where a surveillance programme reveals that 99.9 per cent. of the cattle have been in herds officially free from tuberculosis for at least six years.

Defra statistics on the incidence of bovine TB are not collated in a format that allows for a comparison with the OIE incidence of TB.

Table 1 as follows shows the percentage of the national herd that was under restriction between 2001 and 2003.

Current EU restrictions relating to BSE prevent export of live bovines from the United Kingdom. Export of beef and beef products are permissible under the Date-based Export Scheme (for UK origin beef), or, the XAP Scheme (for beef of foreign origin). Beef fromcattle under TB restrictions cannot be exported.

Table 1 percentage of national herd under restriction

Year	2003[1]	2002[2]	2001[2]
Total number of herds registered on Ventnet	96,865	99,584	105,714
Of which were under TB2 restrictions because of a TB incident at some time during the year	4,740	4,174	2,511
Percentage of national herd under restriction (cumulative figure for the year)	4.8	4.1	2.3

[1] Data represents 1 January 2003 to 30 September 2003–11–24

[2] Data for 2001 and 2002 are not comparable to other years, because TB testing was significantly reduced during the foot and mouth outbreak, and when testing resumed, it was targeted at higher risk herds.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of registered cattle herds in the UK are under TB restriction. [140309]

Mr. Bradshaw: The data requested is not available for the UK. However, between 1 January and 30 September 2003 approximately 4.9 per cent. (4,740*) of cattle herds in Great Britain had been under TB restriction.

* Provisional data downloaded from the State Veterinary Service database on the 20–21 October 2003—subject to change as outstanding TB test and culture results become available.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many carcases produced from cows not reported as TB reactors originating from farms in England were found to be positive for M. bovis or otherwise infected with bovine tuberculosis as a result of samples taken at slaughterhouses in the last 10 years. [140314]

Mr. Bradshaw: All cattle slaughtered in licensed slaughterhouses are subject to inspection by Meat Hygiene Service officials. Where lesions suggestive of TB are found at post-mortem, samples are sent for laboratory culture of M. bovis, the causative organism of bovine tuberculosis. Cases identified by the MHS (but not sent for slaughter as reactors) are "slaughterhouse cases".

Data not currently available for 1994 and 1993

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) standard, (b) upper level, (c) lower level and (d) average payment made for bovine TB compensation was for (i) commercial dairy cattle and (ii) pedigree dairy cattle in (A) England and (B) Wales for each of the last five years for which figures are available. [136410]

Mr. Bradshaw: As compensation for bovine tuberculosis (TB) is based on individual valuations of cattle to be slaughtered for disease control reasons, information in the format requested can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

The number of cattle slaughtered and overall expenditure on compensation for cattle slaughtered under TB control measures in England and in Wales, for the financial years 1998–99 to 2002–03, is given in the attached table:

Number of cattle slaughtered under TB control measures and expenditure on TB compensation 1998–99—2002–03

[1] TB reactors plus direct contacts.
[2] The compensation figures in the table relate only to compensation paid. Previous published information has included valuation and haulage costs, and salvage receipts..
[3] Provisional data only
[4] In 2001, the TB testing and control programme was largely suspended due to the Foot and Mouth Disease (FMD) outbreak. Since testing resumed in 2002, resources have been concentrated on herds with overdue TB tests which would have had a longer period in which to contract the disease. Also the proportion of high risk herds being tested post-FMD is greater than that prior to the outbreak. As a result, the number of TB reactors identified and slaughtered in 2002–03 is not comparable to those identified and slaughtered in previous years.

Climate Change

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the potential effects of climate change on British agriculture. [137270]

Mr. Bradshaw: Since 1987 MAFF and now Defra has commissioned over £6 million of ongoing research focused on (i) identifying the impacts of potential climate change on UK agriculture; and (ii) helping farmers to develop adaptation strategies to manage the impacts of climate change. A report which summarises this research was published in early 2003 and is available on UK Climate Impacts Programme (UKCIP) website: http://www.ukcip.org.uk/Agriculture/agriculture.htm.

Furthermore, in 2000 we commissioned a report 'Climate Change and Agriculture in the UK' aimed at raising awareness of climate change within the farming community. Where sufficient evidence was available, this report summarised possible adaptation strategies to cope with expected changes; where the knowledge base was less robust, the report set out the potential impacts on UK agriculture. This report is available on the Defra website: http://defraweb/environ/climate/climatechange/index.htm

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will increase climate change agreement targets for companies not involved in the EU Emissions Trading scheme. [139148]

Mr. Bradshaw: The EU Emissions Trading Scheme will come into force on 1 January 2005. Operators in the Climate Change Agreements within sectors covered by the scheme will be given the opportunity to apply to opt out of the first phase of the scheme between 2005 and 2007. Those operators exercising this opt out will be subject, along with all other operators not covered by the EU ETS, to the provisions of the Climate Change Agreements for a review of targets in 2004 and 2008 to ensure that they continue to represent the potential for cost effective energy savings taking account of any changes in technical or market conditions.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to increase combined heat and power generation. [139606]

Mr. Bradshaw: The measures to support CHP announced in the Energy White Paper, taken together with measures we have previously introduced and detailed in the draft CHP Strategy, will significantly help CHP. These will be brought together in the final Government Strategy for CHP to 2010, which we will publish before the end of March 2004.

Dairy Farming

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures the Government has put in place in enable dairy farmers to add value to their products. [137892]

Mr. Bradshaw: Support is available through the England Rural Development Programme for farmers wishing to add value to their produce. The Processing and Marketing Grant can provide up to 30 per cent. of eligible costs towards projects to improve the processing and marketing infrastructure of mainstream agricultural products. The Rural Enterprise Scheme (RES) provides assistance of up to 50 per cent. to farmers to diversify their businesses, which might involve on-farm processing and retailing of their produce. Help can also be given through RES to market added value, quality, agricultural products.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Government has sought to amend EC Regulation 2597/97 in accordance with the Milk Task Force recommendations of December 2001. [137896]

Mr. Bradshaw: We wrote to interested parties on changing the rules on the fat content of drinking milk in Council Regulation (EC) No. 2597/97 in February 2002, as part of our follow-up to the Milk Task Force and to prepare for possible Commission proposals to amend the regulations. The response we received was mixed. Whilst there was some support for liberalising the rules, there was also concern that it might undermine the well established categories of drinking milk to the detriment of consumers and dairy processors. The Commission in their report on these rules, which was published earlier this year, also found no consensus in favour of changes. It has therefore proposed no changes for the time being, but will initiate a review in 2007, with a view to harmonising rules across the enlarged Community in 2009 when the existing derogations from the rules for Finland, Sweden and several accession countries will expire.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Government supports decoupling of the dairy sector in 2005. [138026]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government believes that by breaking the link between farm subsidies and production, decoupling will reconnect farmers to their markets, reduce damaging environmental impacts and reduce bureaucracy. Our economic assessment also indicates that decoupling should have a beneficial impact on farm incomes. We are therefore minded to decouple dairy direct payments in 2005. We will make a final decision once we have the results of our ongoing consultation on the dairy elements of the reform package, which closes on 3 February.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what targets the Government has set for (a) levels of production and (b) the number of producers in dairy farming. [138027]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government has not set targets for levels of milk production or for the number of producers in dairy farming.

Darwin Mounds

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the effectiveness of measures to protect the Darwin Mounds. [139832]

Mr. Bradshaw: We have proposed the designation of the Darwin Mounds as a Special Area of Conservation under the Habitats Directive. EC measures to protect the Darwin Mounds from damaging fishing activities came into effect on 20 August 2003. The area where restrictions are in place is closely monitored by the Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency. No breaches of the restrictions have been identified.

Dog Identification Scheme

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is on the tattooing of dogs for identification purposes. [138574]

Mr. Morley: The Government have considered the option of introducing a dog identification scheme, but have no current plans to do so. Defra promotes responsible dog ownership through byelaws, education and publicity.

Tattooing is an option for owners, but is not an option for statutory identification schemes such as pet passports where microchips are used.

Egg Industry

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what volume in tonnes of (a) shelled eggs and (b) whole egg powder was imported into the United Kingdom in the last 10 years for which figures are available; and from which countries. [138076]

Mr. Bradshaw: The following table shows UK imports of (a) shell eggs and (b) whole egg powder between 1993 and 2002.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to encourage households to reduce their energy consumption. [138675]

Mr Bradshaw [holding answer 18 November 2003]: The Energy White Paper details the steps being taken to encourage greater energy efficiency in the UK, and sets out an ambitious strategy for energy efficiency up to 2010 and beyond. Energy efficiency is expected to deliver about half the carbon savings needed to meet our goals for 2020. This will mean roughly doubling the rate of energy efficiency improvement of recent decades.

A wide range of policies and measures have already been established to encourage energy efficiency across the economy. These include:

Climate Change Agreements, where companies can gain an 80 per cent. discount from the Climate Change Levy for eligible processes by entering into Agreements and meeting energy efficiency targets;

the work of the Carbon Trust, which takes the lead on energy efficiency for business and the public sector, and supports the development of a low carbon economy in the UK. The Trust was launched in April 2001 as one way in which CCL receipts are recycled to business; the UK Emissions Trading Scheme (ETS), which will generate significant emissions reductions and is the first economy-wide greenhouse gas emissions trading scheme in the world. The UK Government is also working towards implementing the European ETS, due to start on 1 January 2005; funding for the Energy Saving Trust to run a number of programmes to promote the sustainable and efficient use of energy in homes. The Trust also facilitates the Energy Efficiency Partnership for Homes, which brings together key stakeholders to support and promote domestic energy efficiency; encouraging improvements in product standards so that energy-using appliances operate more efficiently;

the Building Regulations, updated in 2002, which are already delivering significant energy efficiency improvements in new and existing buildings.

Looking to the future, the White Paper proposes some key measures, including extension of the Energy Efficiency Commitment beyond 2005 at possibly twice its current level of activity; improvements in building standards through further revisions to the Building Regulations; and faster improvements in the standards of new household appliances.

In Budget 2003, my right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced that he would consult further on specific fiscal measures to promote energy efficiency. This consultation closed on the 24 October and the Government is grateful to all those who contributed. All responses are being actively considered to help inform policy development.

The Government intends to publish an Energy Efficiency Implementation Plan within a year of the White Paper's publication, which will provide further detail on all of these policies.

Environmental Protection

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if her Department will take into account in the Regulatory Impact Assessment of the EU REACH proposals the economic benefits to UK environmental testing laboratories of the testing work required. [140072]

Alun Michael: On 29 October 2003 the European Commission presented a proposal for the regulation of chemicals. The Government will carry out a UK consultation early in the new year which will be accompanied by a Regulatory Impact Assessment.

The impact assessment will aim to assess all the major costs and benefits, both direct and indirect to industry and make an assessment of the wider impact on the UK economy.

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the DTI/Defra Joint Environmental Markets Unit is consulted when her Department carries out regulatory impact assessments of new environmental protection measures to ensure that benefits of the measures to the UK (a) environmental technology and (b) services industry are included. [140073]

Mr. Morley: Regulatory Impact Assessments (RIAs) of new environmental protection measures are undertaken in accordance with the Cabinet OfficeGuidelines, "Better Policy Making: A Guide to Regulatory Impact Assessment". Among other things, this says RIAs should take account of the potential dynamic benefits of regulations and an assessment of all the business sectors affected—both positively and negatively. As part of this process, policy-makers consult with relevant stakeholders, including where appropriate representatives of the environmental goods and services industry who will then have the opportunity to make the case for the benefits. Like other parts of Government with an interest, the Joint DTI/ Defra Environmental Markets Unit will contribute as appropriate and as part of the policy-making process within Government.

Packaging

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) percentage and (b) volume of material was recycled by each EU country under the terms of the EU Packaging Directive in the last year for which figures are available. [139201]

Mr. Morley: Member states are required to notify the Commission of their packaging data 18 months after the respective year ends. Member states are still in the process of notifying the Commission of their 2001 data. The most complete data set therefore refers to the year 2000, as detailed in the table.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what estimate she has made of the total volume of packaging used by the fast food industry in each of the last 10 years when serving their customers, broken down by (a) cardboard and paper, (b) plastics, (c) biodegradable materials and (d) other materials; [139199]

(2) what assessment her Department has made of the potential for the use of biodegradable packaging within the fast food industry. [139200]

Mr. Morley: I will write to the hon. Member with this information in due course.

Fallen Stock

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations she has received on the fallen stock scheme. [140167]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has received correspondence and enquiries about the conditions for joining the Scheme and asking when it will start. Progress is being made with putting in place the conditions for launching the Scheme and details will be made available shortly.

Farming

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the costs of administration for farmers in real terms in each of the last four years. [137250]

Mr. Bradshaw: There is no estimate made of the total costs of administration for farmers. We estimate the cost in terms of farmers' time spent in completing statistical survey forms that was as follows (at the current prices in each of the years):

Year	£000
1999	949
2000	[1]1,432
2001	[2]561
2002	736

[2] Many surveys postponed or scaled down due to Foot and Mouth Disease

Fisheries

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what major fish stocks which are closed to UK vessels remain open to other countries' vessels; and what the quota levels of each are. [138095]

Mr. Bradshaw: Two fisheries—Western blue whiting and North Sea herring—have so far been closed in 2003 to the UK fleet as a whole. These fisheries remain open to those other member states which still have uncaught quota for them. Details of their quotas and landings, as shown by the Commission's FIDES database at 11 November, are set out in the following table.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she has briefed United Kingdom MEPs on the European Parliament Fisheries Committee on her strategy to decouple cod from other whitefish species. [138923]

Mr. Bradshaw: I attach great importance to finding and negotiating approaches which will promote the recovery of cod stocks whilst allowing fishermen the chance to exploit stocks which are abundant in themselves but caught in the same areas. To be negotiable, such approaches do need to be demonstrably workable. I will certainly ensure that MEPs are briefed on the UK's aims in this respect.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the European Commission's announcement on 11 November that it has opened formal infringement procedures against the United Kingdom in respect of alleged failure to enforce fisheries rules. [138924]

Mr. Bradshaw: The European Commission has commenced formal proceedings against the United Kingdom under Article 226 of the EC Treaty and Article 26(2) of Council Regulation (EC) No. 2371/2002 on the conservation and sustainable exploitation of fisheries resources under the common fisheries policy. The Commission considers that:

(i) the United Kingdom has not provided its competent authorities with the sufficient means to perform their tasks of inspection and control, as laid down in Article 1(2) of Council Regulation (EEC) No. 2847/93 establishing a control system applicable to the common fisheries policy;

(ii) the United Kingdom has not ensured in a sufficient and effective way the compliance with the Community rules in force concerning control measures, notably inspection and monitoring of all fishing activities within its territory and within the maritime waters subject to it sovereignty or jurisdiction;

(iii) insufficient and ineffective control has been observed in particular with respect to those obligations related to the use of the VMS (vessel monitoring systems) by vessels operating in the UK waters, to the recording of the exact amount of catches in the logbook, to the submission of sales notes, to the submission and recording of landing declarations, to the submission of transport documents and to the establishment of a validation system comprising in particular cross-checks and verification of data in order to ensure respect of the obligations laid down in Articles 3,6,8,9,10, 13, 14 and 17 of Council Regulation (EEC) No. 2847/93;

(iv) the United Kingdom has not taken the appropriate measures against the natural or legal persons who do not comply with the rules in force of the common fisheries policy, including proceedings capable of effectively depriving those responsible of the economic benefit of the infringements or of producing results proportionate to the seriousness of such infringements, effectively discouraging further offences of the same kind, and is of the view that the United Kingdom has failed to fulfil its obligations under Article 1 (2), Article 2 (1) in connection with the Article 3 (6), Article 6 (3), Article 8 (1), Article 13 (1—3), Article 14 (1 and 2) and Article 19 (1—3), and Article 31 (1 and 2) of Council Regulation (EEC) No. 2847/93.

We have two months in which to respond and to demonstrate compliance with its obligations under Council Regulation (EEC) No. 2847/93. If the Commission is not satisfied with our response it may take preventative measures as provided for in Article 26(3) of Council Regulation (EC) No. 2371/2002 and issue a reasoned opinion under Article 226 of the EC Treaty. Beyond that the Commission may refer the issues to the European Court of Justice.

Effective enforcement is integral to the success of the common fisheries policy and to efforts to conserve fish stocks. We are taking the Commission's criticisms very seriously and are currently consulting with the Scottish Executive, the Welsh Assembly Government and the Northern Ireland authorities. We expect to submit a positive response to the Commission early in the New Year.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what consultations with the industry she has had on the issue of decoupling cod from other whitefish species. [138925]

Mr. Bradshaw: I and departmental officials are engaged in ongoing discussions with fishermen, about decoupling and other issues associated with fish stock conservation, in the run-up to the key Council of Ministers meeting in December.

Food Regulation

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what responsibilities her Department has in relation to parliamentary consideration of proposals for the regulation of food. [139881]

Mr. Bradshaw: I will write to my hon. Friend with the information in due course.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many emergency purchase orders were issued by her Department and the former Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food during the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in 2001. [136821]

Alun Michael: Information held centrally shows that, 12,600 emergency purchase orders were issued by the Department and the former Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food during the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in 2001.

GM Oilseed Rape

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has for the future growing of GM oilseed rape safe for the production of biodiesel. [140154]

Mr. Morley: There are no such plans. No varieties of GM oil seed rape have authorisation for commercial growing in the UK.

Hazardous Waste

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance has been issued in the last five years on remediation of sites containing potentially hazardous waste. [134450]

Margaret Beckett: I will write to the hon. Member with this information in due course.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what plans she has to discuss with the Deputy Prime Minister measures to prevent planning applications for landfill sites dealing with hazardous waste being blocked for technical reasons; [R] [139698]

(2) how many hazardous waste landfill sites are operational in the United Kingdom; and what their estimated capacity is in tonnes per year; [R] [139702]

(3) what estimate she has made of the amount of hazardous waste in tonnes per year which will need to be disposed of separately under the Landfill Directive in each of the next five years; [R] [139703]

(4) what action she is taking to increase the number of hazardous waste sites across the country. [R] [139704]

Mr. Morley: I will write to my hon. Friend with the information in due course.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on delays to the issuing of hazardous waste criteria. [140066]

Mr. Morley: The draft Landfill (England and Wales) (Amendment) Regulations 2004, that implement the European Council Decision 2003/33 on waste acceptance criteria in England and Wales, are currently out for consultation. That consultation ends on 17 December 2003, and a response to the consultation will be placed on the Defra website as early as possible in the new year. We remain on target to meet the EU requirement to transpose this legislation by July 2004.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) when the hazardous waste regulations will be made available; [140067]

(2) what provisions will be in place by July 2004 to receive hazardous waste in (a) London and (b) each of the counties and Metropolitan areas in England and Wales; and if she will make a statement; [140068]

(3) what (a) staff and (b) resources have been allocated by her Department to the production of hazardous waste regulations. [140069]

Mr. Morley: I will write to the hon. Member with this information shortly.

Landfill Sites

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to her answer of 10 June 2003, Official Report, column 726W, on landfill sites, if she will place an updated list of the level of fine imposed for each landfill site in the Library. [139184]

Mr. Morley: An updated list of the level of fine imposed for each of the landfill sites, where the information is available, will be placed in the Library of the House.

The specific reason for the action is not recorded by the Agency, but the legislation under which the prosecution action is taken is indicated alongside each report. The list of incidents may relate to breaches of authorisation rather than pollution Incidents. Some of the cases have not yet come to court.

Marine Pollution

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Environment Agency has an independent working computer model of the hydrographic regime of the inshore waters of the North Wales coastal region for planning and management purposes. [140403]

Mr. Morley: Matters concerning the Environment Agency Wales are dealt with by the National Assembly for Wales.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will make a statement on the level of algal blooms in Liverpool Bay; [140265]

(2) what the locations are of algae blooms in United Kingdom waters, broken down by order of severity; [140365]

(3) if her Department will take steps to treat non-toxic algal blooms accumulated on the North Wales coast. [140402]

Mr. Morley: Algal blooms are a naturally occurring phenomenon. Given their intensity will vary at different times of the year eg spring compared to summer, between years, and their growth is dependent on a range factors, it is not possible to produce an accurate map identifying the location and severity of algae blooms in UK waters.

Through implementation of the requirements of the Urban Waste Water Treatment and Nitrates Directives we are taking action eg provision of more stringent treatment at relevant sewage treatment works, to protect the environment and water quality from undesirable disturbances caused, or likely to be caused, by the accelerated growth of algae in nutrient enriched waters. This complicated phenomenon is known as eutrophication.

In England and Wales the Environment Agency undertake reviews of water bodies eg rivers, estuaries, coastal, every four years to assess whether the water body meets the criteria in the Directives for identification as a eutrophic water. The next review is to completed in 2005. At present we do not consider Liverpool Bay (which includes the waters along the North Wales coast) meets the criteria for identification as a eutrophic water.

Considerable effort is currently being directed towards evaluating the ecological status of the north east Irish sea including Liverpool Bay and the north Wales Coast. Results from this work is expected to enable better assessments of the levels of algae in Liverpool Bay.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on co-operation between the United Kingdom Government and the Irish Government on monitoring pollution in the Irish Sea. [140363]

Mr. Morley: I will write to my hon. Friend with this information shortly.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the programme of continuous plankton recording around the British Isles. [140364]

Mr. Morley: A Continuous Plankton Recorder is a device which is towed by a ship of opportunity and can take a larger number of samples of particulate matter such as larger planktonic species from the water through which it passes.

The international marine environmental charity 'Sir Alister Hardy Foundation for Ocean Science' (SAHFOS), which is based in Plymouth, currently operates the Continuous Plankton Recorder survey. This survey has been in operation since 1931 and provides one of the longest and largest marine biological data sets in the world.

More than 70 years of information on the density of over 450 plankton types is contained in the database. Plankton samples have been collected from all over the North Atlantic but predominantly (some 200,000 samples) from waters around the British Isles.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she plans to take to reduce the nitrate levels in (a) streams and (b) lakes. [140391]

Mr. Morley: The Government has taken, and is taking, a range of action to address nitrate pollution in streams and lakes.

The EC's Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive contains provisions designed to reduce the adverse impact of sewage discharges on the water environment. The Directive, and Government policy building on the Directive's requirements, establishes that all discharges from sewage treatment plants serving populations greater than 2,000 have secondary treatment by the end of 2005.

Secondary treatment reduces the total nitrogen present in sewage. The amount of this reduction is dependant upon the type of secondary treatment process applied, but reduction of total nitrogen achieved through secondary treatment is of the order of 20 per cent. on average.

The Directive also contains provisions that require further treatment of nitrates from sewage discharges to reduce the impact on freshwaters intended for abstraction for use as drinking water. These provisions require that where nitrate concentration levels in these waters exceed or could exceed 50 mg/l, if no protective action is taken, then nitrate reduction is to be achieved through further treatment processes.

Between February 1997 and June 2002 eight water bodies in need of protection from excessive nitrates levels were identified as Sensitive Areas (Nitrate) in England. Relevant sewage works have been, or are being, built to provide the treatment needed to reduce nitrate levels in their discharges.

Additionally the EU Nitrates Directive, an environmental measure designed to reduce current and prevent future water pollution by nitrate from agricultural sources, requires all known areas of land draining into nitrate-polluted waters to be designated as Nitrate Vulnerable Zones. The Nitrates Directive requires the identification of polluted waters using the following criteria: (a) surface and groundwaters which contain or could contain, if preventative action is not taken, nitrate concentrations greater than 50 mg/l; (b) surface waters which are eutrophic or could become eutrophic if preventative action is not taken. Around 55 per cent. of England has been designated as NVZs on the basis that it drains into these waters, and action programme measures to reduce nitrate loss from agricultural land have been applied in these zones.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many incidents of illegal dumping of dredged material have been recorded off the North Wales coast in each of the last 30 years. [140397]

Mr. Morley: This Department has no record of any conviction under either the Dumping at Sea Act 1974 or subsequently the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 for illegal deposit of dredged material off the North Wales coast prior to such matters being devolved to the National Assembly for Wales during 1999.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBS) on the marine environment in the Irish Sea over the past 30 years. [140398]

Mr. Morley: I am not aware of any specific assessments of PCBs in the Irish Sea but there are two more general reports which cover the Irish Sea and provide the best available assessments of the effects of PCBs in that part of the marine environment. These reports, copies of which should be found in the Library of the House of Commons, are:

1. Quality Status Report 2000: Region III—Celtic Seas

OSPAR Commission, London 2000

ISBN 0946956499

2. National Monitoring Programme: Survey of the Quality of UK Coastal Waters

Marine Pollution Monitoring Management Group, Aberdeen 1998

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what estimate she has made of the quantities of (a) synthetic chemicals, (b) mercury, (c) cadmium, (d) lead, (e) zinc, (f) nickel and (g) arsenic released into the Irish Sea from establishments in the United Kingdom in each of the past 30 years; and if she will make a statement on the proposed reduction targets in each case; [140399]

(2) what research her Department has evaluated regarding the effects of major inshore algal blooms on the distribution of pollutants in coastal areas, with particular reference to the (a) metal absorbing capabilities and (b) bubble scavenging properties of algae. [140401]

Mr. Morley: The information requested will take some time to collate and I will write to my hon. Friend in due course.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost of monitoring pollution levels in the Irish Sea was in each of the past 30 years. [140406]

Mr. Morley: The information required will take some time to collate. Therefore I will reply to my hon. Friend in due course.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department has evaluated on the potential health risks of foam and sludge deposits left by Phacosystic algae blooms on the shore line. [140407]

Mr. Morley: I am not aware of any evaluation of research on this topic by this Department.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total tonnage of sewage sludge dumped in Liverpool Bay was in each of the past 30 years. [140408]

Mr. Morley: Under the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive, the disposal of sewage sludge to surface waters, including coastal waters, has been banned since 31 December 1998. I understand that an estimated total of 40–50 million tonnes was deposited by water companies and predecessor water authorities in the north east Irish Sea/Liverpool Bay in the 30 years up to that date.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether information on marine pollution collected by (a) the Environment Agency, (b) her Department and (c) local authorities is entered on to a central database. [140411]

Mr. Morley: Relevant monitoring information generated by the UK on marine pollution is entered onto a central database. It is known as the National Marine Monitoring Programme (NMMP) database and is managed by the Environmental Data Unit of the Environment Agency, which is located at Twerton.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the (a) statutory and (b) non-statutory bodies which have monitored pollution levels in the Irish Sea in each of the past 15 years. [140412]

Mr. Morley: I will write to the hon. Member with the information in due course.

Marine Resources (EU Competence)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assurances she has (a) sought and (b) received about the effect of the proposed exclusive competence of the EU over marine resources of the sea in the draft constitution; and what assessment she has made of the effect of EU exclusive competence on (i) UK six and 12 mile limits, (ii) relative stability of catches, (iii) national conservation measures and (iv) regulation of quota hoppers. [140165]

Mr. Bradshaw: The draft EU constitution makes no changes to competence over fisheries (which is shared between the EU and member states) nor over the conservation of marine biological resources under the Common Fisheries Policy (which has been exclusively within the competence of the Community since 1979). Under these arrangements the UK six and 12 mile limits have been renewed, relative stability maintained, national conservation measures introduced and measures introduced so that coastal communities derive economic benefit from vessels fishing against UK quota.

Market Research

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list each item of market and opinion research commissioned since May 1997 by (a) her Department and (b) agencies and non-departmental public bodies for which her Department is responsible; what the purpose of each item was; and whether the results were published. [137014]

Alun Michael: The Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs came into being in June 2001, and the list of surveys since that date is:

Corporate Identity research

Illegal Meat Imports—general public tracking and omnibus

GM Crops—desk research

GM Debate—foundation discussion workshops

GM Debate—stimulus content creation

Defra Customer Vision

Defra's sponsorship activities

Communicating with Farmers—Customer reaction to Defra Communications

Illegal Meat Imports—Business and holiday traveller focus

Illegal Meat Imports—Research with Ethnic Minorities

Records for agencies and non-departmental government bodies are not held centrally and information can be gathered only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much her Department spent on (a) opinion polling and (b) market research in the last financial year; and if she will make a statement. [139980]

Alun Michael: I will write to the hon. Member with this information in due course.

Milk

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the average price of milk for each month for the last five years at (a) farm gate, (b) processor and (c) retailer stage. [139599]

Mr. Bradshaw: The table gives figures for milk prices at farm gate and retailer levels from January 1998. Although we do not hold processor prices, the recent KPMG report into the pricing and profitability in the British dairy chain concluded that retail prices involved on average a 27.5 per cent. mark up on the processor price.

Government Statistics: RPI: average price milk, pasteurised per pint.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had in the last year with (a) farming representatives, (b) producers and (c) retailers on milk prices. [139527]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 19 November 2003]: The Secretary of State has had no formal meetings with representatives of the dairy industry, either producers, processors or retailers to discuss milk prices. However, Ministers frequently meet with representatives from all parts of the dairy supply chain and are therefore aware of the issues. Matters affecting the whole dairy supply chain are regularly discussed at the forum chaired by my noble Friend the Lord Whitty.

Mothers (Return to Work)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) representations and (b) discussions he has had in the last 12 months on increasing opportunities for mothers to return to the workplace; and if he will make a statement. [139441]

Margaret Beckett: I will write to my hon. Friend with this information shortly.

National Environment Campaigns

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the national environment campaigns promoted by the Government since 1997, providing at today's prices the (a) resource costs, (b) capital expenditure costs and (c) staffing costs. [139181]

Alun Michael: The information is as follows:

[1] Defra was formed in June 2001. Defra continued programmes begun by the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions.
[2] This is a change to the answer given in July 2002 to PQ65625. The figure quoted in that answer was £2,952,000. This revised figure reflects the fact that, in year, Encams were awarded an extra £1 million spread over financial years 2001–02 and 2002–03 for the Local Environment Quality Pathfinder Programme.
[3] This figure represents 7/12 of the 2003–04 allocation.
[4] Figures for 1997–8 to 2000–1 inclusive, show advertising expenditure only and include a small element of Scottish Executive support. Figures for 2001 onwards are total funded programme costs.

[6] 487staff, 5,255-resource.
[7] 522-staff, 5,081-resource.
[8] The Carbon Trust was formed in 2001–02 but did not begin marketing activity until 2002–03. Of the 2002–03 total, £750,000 was spent on the 'Thank You' campaign.
[9] Figures for the latest 'Lifeblood' campaign are not yet available.
[10] Most of the 'are you doing your bit?' campaign's planned resource was allocated in 2001–2 to rural support during the foot and mouth disease outbreak.

Notes:
1. Where it has been possible, without involving disproportionate cost, costs have been broken down into resource, capital expenditure and staff. However, the majority of costs are aggregated.
2. Expenditure at 2003–04 prices has been calculated using the underlying Retail Price Index (RPIX).

NM Rothschild and Sons Ltd

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on services provided to her Department by NM Rothschild and Sons Ltd. since 1997. [139969]

Alun Michael: I will write to my hon. Friend with this information in due course.

Off-road Trail Biking

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the environmental impact of off-road trail biking on roads used as public paths. [140056]

Alun Michael: This Department is currently carrying out a comprehensive research project into the use of motor vehicles, including motorcycles, on byways open to all traffic. Under the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000, roads used as public paths will shortly be reclassified as 'restricted byways' and vehicles will then no longer be able to use them unless it can be proved that the byway is a vehicular right of way.

Potatoes

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the last confirmed outbreak was of ring rot of potatoes in the UK. [139299]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 18 November 2003]: Until the case on 7 November 2003 there had been no previous outbreak of potato ring rot in the UK.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the arrangements are for testing for ring rot in potatoes. [139300]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 18 November 2003]: Testing for ring rot in potatoes is carried out in accordance with the provisions laid down in EC Council Directive 93/85/EEC of 4 October 1993 on the control of potato ring rot. This includes provision for member states to undertake official surveys of potatoes for the presence of the disease, with any samples taken being tested in accordance with internationally agreed protocols.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what contingency plans her Department has made for an outbreak of ring rot in potatoes. [139415]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 18 November 2003]: The Department's contingency plan for dealing with outbreaks of ring rot in potatoes is available on the Defra website at www.defra.gov.uk/planth/ring.htm

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what arrangements are in place for compensating producers of potatoes infected with ring rot who have complied fully with health regulations. [139416]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 18 November 2003]: Defra does not pay compensation to producers of potatoes infected with ring rot.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the robustness of the testing methodology for ring rot in imported potatoes. [139417]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 18 November 2003]: The testing methodology for ring rot in imported potatoes is laid down in EC Council Directive 93/85/EEC of 4 October 1993 on the control of potato ring rot. These tests reflect internationally agreed protocols based on best scientific advice.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the contingency arrangements for dealing with potato ring rot. [139472]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department's contingency plans for dealing with potato ring rot have been published on the Defra web-site at www.defra.gov.uk/planth/ring.pdf

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of (a) visual inspection and (b) other means in ensuring that consignments of potatoes are free from infection of bacterial ring rot; and what methods are available to determine the presence of bacterial ring rot in consignments of potatoes. [140319]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information is as follows:

(a) All Plant Health and Seeds Inspectors are fully trained in the visual identification of potato ring rot and there is no evidence to suggest that this training is not effective although ring rot is known to exist sometimes in a latent, symptomless form, which is why visual inspections are supplemented by laboratory testing.

(b) An annual survey for ring rot is carried out by the Plant Health and Seeds Inspectorate which involves taking samples of seed and ware potatoes from a representative sample of growers. The survey is a requirement of EC Council Directive 93/85/EEC of 4 October 1993 which also lays down details of the required testing methodology. In addition, all imported seed potatoes entering the seed potato classification scheme are tested for the presence of potato ring rot.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the risk of cross contamination to other seed potatoes following the recent outbreak of ring rot. [140320]

Mr. Bradshaw: EC Directive 93/85/EEC on the control of potato ring rot lays down a series of measures to be taken at outbreak sites which take account of the possible risks of cross contamination. Testing is still under way at the farm in Wales where the outbreak was discovered and it will be some time before we know whether the infection was restricted to the one stock. As a precautionary measure no other stocks of potatoes from the farm will be planted, whatever the results of the tests. Three premises in England to which stocks had already been sent from the outbreak farm have been put under statutory notice. We understand that the consignments sent to the Canary Islands have also been impounded. Any links which indicate a risk at other farms will result in similar restrictions at those premises.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what additional seed inspection procedures have been put in place following the recent outbreak of ring rot at (a) domestic sites and (b) points of import. [140321]

Mr. Bradshaw: The priority now is to determine the extent of the current outbreak and to trace and test other deliveries from the same and any related stocks. In the light of that information we will then review levels of inspection and monitoring of domestic and imported potatoes. This outbreak was detected as a result of our annual survey for the presence of potato ring rot under which 932 tests and 1,151 visual inspections are carried out last year.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures were taken to quarantine (a) the farm of Mr. John Morgan and (b) the four other farms to which he has sent seed potatoes possibly infected with ring rot. [140322]

Mr. Bradshaw: As soon as the diagnosis of ring rot was made on a sample from the farm in mid Wales a statutory notice was served under the Plant Health (Great Britain) Order 1993 (as amended) to prevent movement of potatoes from that farm. The same measures were taken, on a precautionary basis, at each of the three farms in England to which seed had already been delivered. In relation to the delivery to the Canary Islands we notified the Spanish authorities and we understand the consignment has been impounded.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research the Department has commissioned on the development of a bactericide for the elimination of ring rot in the past five years; and what the cost was. [140323]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are no bactericides approved for use on any plant bacterial disease in the UK. Unlike fungicides bactericides are not generally effective against disease on growing plants. There are standard commercial disinfectants available for hygiene measures in stores and on containers and harvesting/grading machinery. The efficacy of these was recently investigated at the Central Science Laboratory as part of a Defra funded research contract on the development of an on-farm strategy for eradication of ring rot which cost £40,000 per year (2002–03).

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the annual value of the potato crop produced in the UK was in the last year for which figures are available, at farmgate prices. [140306]

Mr. Bradshaw: I will write to the hon. Member with the information in due course.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average annual tonnage of seed potatoes (a) exported from the UK to and (b) imported into the UK from all sources was in the last 10 years for which figures are available. [140307]

Mr. Bradshaw: I will write to the hon. Member with the information in due course.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment the Government has made of the prevalence of ring rot in Europe and North America. [140324]

Mr. Bradshaw: EC Council Directive 93/85/EEC on the control of potato ring rot requires member states to carry out regular surveys and report the results to the Plant Health Standing Committee. Equivalent information is now being required from accession countries. All member states, except Italy, Ireland, Luxembourg, and Portugal have reported outbreaks of ring rot. Prior to the adoption of the control Directive in 1995 there was a wide variation between member states in their policy on the disease and the level of official action against it. Ring rot is regarded as an established disease in the USA and in large parts of Canada, although there are certain seed growing regions such as Prince Edward Island where statutory measures are taken to exclude ring rot and eradicate it when it occurs.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice the Government have sought from (a) European and (b) North American governments on the handling of ring rot. [140325]

Mr. Bradshaw: UK scientists at CSL are closely involved in the group of plant bacteriologists from around the EU who provided technical advice on diagnostic tests and risk management measures during the development of the control Directive on Ring Rot. They also play a major role in the scientific panels of the European and Mediterranean Plant Protection Organisation. In 2002 experts from Canada and the USA met with EU experts to discuss ring rot controls. Defra's Central Science Laboratory is in regular contact with the experts from the eradication programme on Prince Edward Island.

Poultry Meat

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what volume in tonnes of poultry meat was imported into the UK in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and from which countries it was imported. [138033]

Mr. Bradshaw: The table attached shows UK imports of poultry meat between 1993 and 2002.

Sea Salinity Levels

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of (a) the effect on the Gulf Stream Conveyer Belt of a fall in water salinity in the northern Arctic Ocean and (b) the likelihood of such conditions arising; [140405]

(2) what research her Department is conducting on the salinity of waters in the Gulf Stream Conveyor Belt. [140410]

Mr. Morley: I will write to my hon. Friend with this information shortly.

Secondments

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people from science and technology backgrounds have been seconded into the Civil Service in her Department in each of the last five years for which data are available. [138624]

Alun Michael: Since the creation of Defra in June 2001, the Department has seconded personnel from both the public and private sectors as follows:

15 in the period June 2001 to March 2002

19 in the period April 2002 to March 2003

21 in the period April 2003 to date.

The majority have been seconded from organisations from science and technology sectors. In addition, the Department has provided for opportunity and experience postings from its Laboratory Agencies and the Research Councils, of varying durations, to work on science and technology matters, such as the development of science policy and strategies. Data is not held centrally. Finally, the Department's Chief Scientific Adviser, Professor Howard Dalton, FRS, was appointed on secondment from Warwick university in 2001 and is working on a range of continuing professional development issues, including secondments into and out of the Department.

Defra is committed to playing its part in developing a modern, flexible, outward focused Civil Service that works in partnership with all sectors of society. Interchange is seen as a key tool in meeting this commitment. Defra continues to promote and encourage the interchange of personnel between the Department and a range of organisations to help fulfil its business objectives.

Sellafield

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the annual emissions were of radioactive liquid discharges from Sellafield of (a) tritium, (b) carbon 14, (c) zinc-65, (d) strontium 89, (e) strontium 90, (f) technetium 99, (g) iodine 129, (h) europium 152, (i) europium 154, (j) total Beta and (k) uranium in each of the past 30 years. [140404]

Mr. Morley: I will write to my hon. friend with this information shortly.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in what condition each site of special scientific interest (SSSI) was in each year since 1997, broken down by local authority area; and what the total land area of SSSIs was in each category (a) in England and (b) broken down by local authority area. [139202]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are 4,112 Sites of Special Scientific Interest in England, covering over one million hectares. English Nature has been assessing the condition of SSSIs against rigorous and consistent standards, since 1997. It takes six years to complete fully the assessment programme across the whole of England, and although individual sites may be assessed more than once over this period, it is impossible to assess each site each year. The first full assessment programme was completed in March 2003, and showed that 598,000 hectares of SSSI land (56.9 per cent. of the total) was either in favourable condition or clearly on course to achieve it, on the basis of the latest information available at that time. English Nature will publish a report giving the full results of this programme next month. Full details of all the individual SSSIs, and their condition, will be available on English Nature's website early in the new year.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many new areas of sites of special scientific interest she plans to designate in the next (a) two and (b) five years; where they are; whether each is (i) a new site and (ii) an extension of an existing site; what the size is of each new site and extension; and what the characteristics of each site are. [139203]

Mr. Bradshaw: Sites of Special Scientific Interest are notified not by the Secretary of State but by English Nature. This is done on a site by site basis and there is no forward programme of notifications over 2 or 5 years.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which sites of special scientific interest are under threat from (a) damage to their ecological status, (b) a reduction in size and (c) disappearance over the next (i) two and (ii) five years, what the source of the threat is in each case; what percentage of SSSIs are under threat; and if she will make a statement. [139204]

Mr. Bradshaw: Information on potential threats to Sites of Special Scientific Interest is not recorded. However, the actual causes of adverse condition are recorded by English Nature. This information will be presented in the report on SSSI condition which will be published in December, and will be made available for individual SSSIs on the English Nature website early in 2004.

Synthetic Oestrogen

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to (a) reduce levels of synthetic oestrogen in river water and (b) prevent the metamorphosis of male fish arising from high levels of synthetic oestrogen. [140241]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency published research findings in 2002 on the effects of oestrogens on aquatic life. A summary of the research findings is available in the Library of the House. My officials are currently discussing, with the water industry, the Office of Water Services (Ofwat) and the Environment Agency, a proposal for a collaborative demonstration programme aimed at assessing the cost-effectiveness of sewage treatment processes for the removal of synthetic oestrogens from sewage.

US Warships (Disposal)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the possible risk to wildlife in the special protection areas of Teesmouth and the Cleveland coast as a consequence of plans by Able UK to scrap United States vessels at Hartlepool. [133165]

Mr. Morley: I will write to the hon. Member with this information in due course.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what responsibilities lie with (a) the Environment Agency, (b) the Port Authority, (c) the US Administration and (d) Able UK in the event of environmental damage caused by the ships from the US Naval Reserve while they are in storage at Hartlepool. [139207]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 November 2003]: I will write to the hon. Member with this information in due course.

Warm Front

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many households are eligible for (a) Warm Front and (b) Warm Front Plus grants; and how many additional households qualify for assistance through the scheme as a result of working tax credit becoming a qualifying benefit. [131455]

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of (a) the impact of the Warm Front initiative and (b) the quality of the service it provides. [137314]

Mr. Bradshaw: In the past year, the NAO completed a report "Warm Front: Helping to Combat Fuel Poverty" looking at issues including the targeting, eligibility, measures and delivery of the scheme. An internal review looking at similar issues has also been completed by my Department.

The Department is also funding research looking at the health impacts of Warm Front. The Department will be considering the findings of these studies in the coming months as part of the development of Warm Front.

An independent quality assurance company carries out regular audits of the performance of the Warm Front scheme managers for the Department. This covers marketing, contact centre activity, surveyor activity, management of installers, checks on the quality of installed work, timelines for delivery of measures, scheme managers internal systems.

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how much was spent through the Warm Front schemes in each constituency in the last financial year; [133085]

(2) how many properties in each constituency have benefited from the (a) Warm Front and (b) Warm Front Plus schemes in the last five years; [133086]

(3) what estimate she has made of the number of households in each constituency who could benefit from the Warm Front scheme and who have yet to claim. [133087]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested will take some time to collate and I will write to my hon. Friend in due course.

Waste Management

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of whether proposals by Essex County Council for waste disposal comply with Government guidance and directives in respect of the recycling of waste; and if she will make a statement. [139385]

Mr. Morley: We have not made any assessment of whether Essex County Council's proposals for waste disposal comply with Government guidance and directives in respect of the recycling of waste. That assessment is for Essex County Council to carry out as part of their waste strategy.

Essex County Council's recycling rate for 2001–02 was 21 per cent. Their Statutory Performance Standard for recycling and composting of household waste is set at 22 per cent. for 2003–04 and 33 per cent. for 2005–06.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what consultation she will undertake with local authorities in advance of the implementation of European Union directives on waste management. [139950]

Mr. Morley: The Government is committed to consulting relevant stakeholders on the implementation of European Union directives. This includes the Local Government Association and individual local authorities where appropriate.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made by the delivery team set up by her Department in May on the implementation of the sustainable waste delivery programme. [139951]

Mr. Morley: The Waste Implementation Programme (WIP) was established in May 2003 on the recommendation of the Strategy Unit Report 'Waste Not, Want Not', with funding committed until financial year 2005–06.

The Programme Director has been in post since June 2003. An external Steering Committee has been set-up, and its first two quarterly meetings have now taken place. Its five sub-programmes (Local Authority Support; Local Authority Funding; New Technologies; Data; Research) are now in place and have each produced impact trajectories and detailed delivery plans.

The programme has already distributed £140 million to Local Authorities for the delivery of 258 projects, and seven PFI schemes have been approved.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to increase her Department's (a) detection and (b) prosecution of illegal waste activities. [139952]

Mr. Morley: A range of measures have been included in the Anti-Social Behaviour Bill that will lead to more effective investigations and more successful prosecutions for illegal waste activities or fly-tipping offences.

The Bill also requires local authorities and the Environment Agency to submit data to the Secretary of State to help compile a national picture of the scale and extent of fly tipping.

The Government is also developing a comprehensive strategy for dealing with fly tipping which will be consulted on shortly.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of the money collected in fines by her Department for waste-related offences has been retained by her Department. [139953]

Mr. Morley: I will write to the hon. Member with this information shortly.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures are being implemented to include schoolchildren in community recycling schemes. [139954]

Mr. Morley: Government is not implementing any specific measures to include school children in community recycling schemes.

Awareness of waste issues is covered in the school curriculum at various key stages. Government also provides Waste Watch with a grant of £232,000. £60,000 of this grant is used to fund waste awareness work in schools.

In addition, many local authorities support their recycling schemes with awareness campaigns. We do not have an assessment of the degree to which they involve school children.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects the landfill tax to reach the rate of £35 per tonne. [139955]

Mr. Morley: I expect the landfill tax rate for active waste to reach £35 per tonne in the medium to long term, as announced by the Chancellor in his last Budget statement.

The rate was increased from £13 to £14 per tonne on 1 April 2003 and will be increased to £15 per tonne from 1 April 2004. The Chancellor announced that it will subsequently be increased by £3 in 2005–06 to £18 per tonne, and by at least £3 per tonne in the years thereafter, until it reaches £35 per tonne.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the regulatory guidance notes on end of life vehicle permitting will be issued to vehicle salvage and dismantling companies. [139956]

Mr. Morley: The guidance on Part VII and Schedule 5 of the End of Life Vehicle Regulations 2003 will be issued to vehicle salvage and dismantling companies on Friday 21 November.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress is being made towards the target of 85 per cent. re-use and recovery by weight of end of life vehicles. [139957]

Mr. Morley: A recent study carried out for the Department by TRL Ltd., estimated that in 2000 approximately 77 per cent. of the weight of ELVs scrapped was already being reused, recovered and recycled. Legislation was introduced on the 3 November which means that End of Life Vehicles must be depolluted in line with the Directive requirements. We expect that additional components and materials will be recovered and recycled as a result of the depollution activities.

Mr. Alan Hurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the availability of funding for the development of new technologies for waste management schemes. [139456]

Mr. Morley: I will write to the hon. Member with this information in due course.

Water Budget Payment Units

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many homes in each region of England have water budget payment units. [140392]

Mr. Morley: The Water Industry Act 1999 ended the use of water budget payment units that cut off or restrict supplies to homes and other vital premises for non-payment of bills. Some companies allow customers to keep units with the disconnection element removed, but the Office of Water Services no longer collects the numbers installed.

Watercourse Maintenance

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance the Government issue to drainage boards in relation to the removal of silt following the European Waste Framework Directive and the Nitrate Directive on watercourse maintenance after 2006. [140351]

Mr. Morley: Neither the Waste Framework Directive nor the Nitrates Directive apply to the removal of silt from watercourses. However, Waste Management Licensing Regulations (1994) control the application of dredged material to land and the Government have made use of their discretion under Article 11 of the Waste Framework Directive to provide licensing exemptions for dredgings from inland waters. Where dredgings are to be spread on agricultural land, and the land falls within a Nitrate Vulnerable Zone, the requirements of the NVZ Action Programme Regulations must also be observed.

Website

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the content and design of her Department's website. [139339]

Alun Michael: I will write to the hon. Member with this information in due course.

Winemaking Industry

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the English winemaking industry. [137280]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are currently 333 active vineyards in England and Wales, 317 of which are based in England, and 114 wineries. Three quarters of the total area under vine is based in the south of England, where the climate is more suitable for growing grapes. A further 15 per cent. is in the East Anglian region and the rest is spread across other English regions and Wales.

English wine production is variable depending on the climate. Over the period 1999–2001, the average production in the UK was 14,434 hectolitres. Total wine production for the UK in 2002 was 9,384 hectolitres which was lower than average. Wine production in England alone for 2002 was 9,334 hectolitres. This year's harvest is expected to be considerably higher than the previous year and of good quality. The domestic industry currently meets around 0.2 per cent. of what is a large, and sophisticated UK market. In recent years, the English wine industry has been remarkably innovative, having made particular progress with the development and production of sparkling wines, some of which have been internationally recognised.

DEFENCE

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether steps have been taken to require that troops of the occupying power in Iraq do not have sexual intercourse with Iraqi women; and if he will make a statement. [135436]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

There are no multi-national forces operating in the US Area of Operations north and west of Baghdad.

The numbers are approximate as roulement and leave cause modest daily fluctuations.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what requests UK authorities have received from Iraqi (a) officials and (b) civilians for assistance for Iraqi security forces to stop illegal oil smuggling along the Shatt-al-Arab waterway; what assistance has been provided; and if he will make a statement. [139680]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) fatal and (b) non-fatal attacks there have been on UK army personnel serving in Iraq since the conclusion of military conflict; and if he will make a statement. [134826]

Mr. Ingram: Many of the following figures have been compiled under operational conditions and may therefore be subject to future refinement and revision.

Decisive combat operations in Iraq ceased on 1 May 2003. Figures for the number of attacks on United Kingdom forces were not collected before 1 June 2003. Between 1 June and 17 October 2003, we assess that there were 101 deliberate attacks on coalition forces in the UK-led area of operations. Five resulted in the deaths of British personnel.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the findings of the inquiry into the deaths on 24 June 2003 of members of the Royal Military Police in Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [135448]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 17 September 2003, Official Report, column 748W, to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd).

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the lessons the Department has drawn from the recent Iraq conflict regarding (a) logistics, (b) equipment and (c) food provision for armed forces personnel. [136443]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence is currently engaged in a comprehensive exercise to capture and analyse lessons from the operations in Iraq. This includes a full assessment of our logistics (including food provision) and equipment performance. I anticipate the publication of a final report on the major findings of this process by the end of this year.

Some early indicators were identified in our "First Reflections" report published in July. For example, while overall logistics performance was a major contribution to success, a major lesson is the requirement for a robust tracking system to enable equipment and stocks to be tracked throughout the supply chain. The Department found that the performance of equipment across all three Services matched and often exceeded expectations. Although food provision was not mentioned in detail in this report, the operation confirmed the validity of our current methodology.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many Iraqis have been (a) killed and (b) injured in violent incidents involving other Iraqis since first of May in the provinces of (i) Basra City and (ii) Maysan; and if he will make a statement. [136605]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 10 November 2003]: We are unable to confirm the number of incidents in which Iraqis kill or injure other Iraqis in Basra and Maysan. Violent crimes committed by Iraqis against their fellow Iraqis are a matter for investigation by the Iraqi Police. Coalition Forces continue to support the Iraqi Police during their operations and through the provision of training and equipment.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how much (a) weaponry and (b) explosives have been seized by British forces in Iraq since 1 May, broken down by type. [136607]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which instruments of (a) international humanitarian law and (b) human rights law have been recognised by the Government as governing the use of force by United Kingdom military personnel in Iraq since the end of the conflict. [136924]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, if he will list the (a) civilian and (b) industrial infrastructure reconstruction programmes undertaken by his Department in Iraq, including the (i) initiation date, (ii) projected completion date and (iii) units involved; and if he will make a statement. [137519]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK civilians are working for defence contractors in Iraq; for whom they are working; in which areas of Iraq they are working; what risk assessments were carried out prior to them beginning work; what protection they are receiving; and if he will make a statement. [137900]

Mr. Ingram: We do not hold details of the numbers of United Kingdom contractors currently working in Iraq. Contractors are employed by a number of Government Departments and organisations on projects throughout Iraq. UK forces in Multi-National Division South East (MND(SE)) area of operations constantly review security arrangements for British Citizens in the area for which they are responsible, including contractors. However, it is the contractors' responsibility to assess the risks to their employees prior to deploying them to Iraq. They are provided with security information, as well as regular liaison with local commanders once in Iraq, to enable them to do so.

The measures in place to protect contractors in Iraq vary according to the threat in the location in which they are working in Iraq, and the nature of the work they are carrying out. For reasons of operational security it would be inappropriate to provide details of the precise measures in place to protect British Citizens in each location, and I am withholding that information under Exemption 1 (Defence, Security and International Relations) of Part II of the Code of Conduct.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on planned future force numbers in Iraq. [139374]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 November 2003]: We intend to retain sufficient forces in Iraq to achieve our aims. Force levels are kept under review as the requirements of the mission evolve.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the Order of Battle for British forces in Iraq is. [139375]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 November 2003]: The United Kingdom currently leads the Multi-National Division (South East). UK units within the Division are: 20 Armoured Brigade Headquarters; The Queens Royal Hussars; 1st Battalion The Light Infantry; 1st Battalion Royal Green Jackets; The Royal Regiment of Wales; 26 Regiment Royal Artillery; 35 Engineer Regiment; 9/12 Lancers; 4 Composite Logistics Support Regiment; and 2 Field Hospital. In addition, there are a number of non-formed units and smaller elements, making up a total complement of around 10,200. These include the Joint Helicopter Force (Iraq), which has 23 support helicopters assigned. In addition, 2 C-130J and 1 HS-125 are based at Basrah.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by date of meeting the companies with which he has discussed the release of employees for reserve service in connection with Operation Telic in the last 12 months. [139614]

Mr. Caplin: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence regularly meets with companies to discuss a range of defence issues. No meetings have been scheduled specifically to discuss the release of reservists to support Operation Telic.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the UK armed forces have been (a) killed and (b) injured in Iraq since the end of the conflict. [139871]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, if he will arrange for the texts of arrangements agreed by Coalition Governments in relation to custody of persons captured in the course of the war in Iraq to be placed in the Library. [139912]

Mr. Ingram: In March 2003, the United Kingdom, US and Australian Governments signed a Memorandum of Understanding on the transfer of Iraqi prisoners. Copies of this memorandum were placed in the Libraries of the House on Friday 14 November. The scope of the memorandum is not confined to major combat operations in Iraq, but also covers those detained subsequently by UK forces.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the performance of the United Kingdom armed forces logistical support vehicles in Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [140042]

Mr. Ingram: No special research has been commissioned or evaluated on the performance of combat support vehicles in Iraq.

The study to identify lessons from operations in Iraq includes an assessment of the effectiveness of logistic support provided to our armed forces across the Gulf region. The initial findings of this study were published in early July in the MOD report, "Operations in Iraq 2003: First Reflections", and we plan to publish a fuller report before Christmas. Generally, the combat support vehicles deployed in support of operations in Iraq have achieved acceptable levels of availability.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the numbers of UK servicemen returned to the UK with diagnosed conditions of illness since the beginning of military action in Iraq. [140201]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Ingram: One Tornado GR4 aircraft and two Sea King helicopters were lost during the coalition's military action in Iraq.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the war in Iraq has cost. [111922]

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his estimate is of the additional costs incurred by his Department in connection with the conduct of operations in Iraq in (a) the financial year 2002–03 and (b) the present financial year to date; and what procedure is being followed to recover these from the earmarked reserve established by the Chancellor of the Exchequer. [112090]

Mr. Hoon: The net additional cost of operations in Iraq for 2002–03 is set out in the Ministry of Defence Annual Report and Accounts 2002–03, which is available in the Library of the House.

Operating costs for 2002–03 are £629.531 million and expenditure on capital equipment amounts to £217.680 million. These give a total spend of £847.211 million.

Additional funding will be sought in the normal way through Supplementary Estimates. The costs likely to arise in 2003–04 will be included in the Winter Supplementary Estimate which is due to be published on 27 November.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps have been taken to improve the sharing of information between national contingents at Headquarters, Combined Joint Task Force, in Baghdad. [130334]

Mr. Ingram: Since the start of operations in Iraq we have worked closely with our partner nations to facilitate effective sharing of information including through the use of liaison officers within the Commander Joint Task Force Headquarters in Baghdad. The process undergoes continuous refinement in the light of experience.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance was given to US military forces experimenting with weapon systems in the war in Iraq. [125084]

Mr. Hoon: The Ministry of Defence maintains many collaborative research partnerships with the United States, though none is specific to Operation Telic.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the agreements made by him to assist the US military forces in using experimental weapon systems in the war in Iraq. [125086]

Mr. Hoon: The Ministry of Defence neither has, nor has had, any agreements in place to assist any US forces in using experimental weapons systems during Operation Telic.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list military operations in Iraq involving (a) British forces and (b) United States forces with Britain's agreement in each month between January 2002 and 19 March 2003; in each case, how many (i) bombs were dropped and (ii) targets there were; what the strategic significance of each target was; and what the operational success rate was. [129897]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Maritime Wrecks

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many maritime wrecks there are in the Bristol Channel; and where they are. [93119]

Mr. Caplin: Within the limits of Admiralty Chart 1179 (Bristol Channel), produced by the United Kingdom Hydrographic Office, 272 wrecks or obstructions are shown on charts where scale allows.

I am placing the information requested on the position of these objects in the Library of the House.

Public Highways

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what circumstances members of HM forces may direct traffic on public highways; and if he will make a statement. [139946]

Mr. Caplin: Members of HM forces have no authority to direct traffic on public highways. However, they may supervise and control military traffic on public highways to ensure that it does not impede civilian traffic and that it complies with the appropriate traffic regulations.

Accountancy Services

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost to his Department was for accountancy services in 2002–03. [109481]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Acknowledgement Letters

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many acknowledgement letters and cards were dispatched by his Department in each year since 1997 for which figures are available; and what the estimated average cost was per letter and card. [111870]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 8 May 2003]: Details of the cost and number of acknowledgement letters and cards dispatched by the Ministry of Defence is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However the Department routinely sends a letter of acknowledgement for each piece of ministerial correspondence it receives. During the period 1 January 2003 to 31 October 2003, the MOD received 4,879 pieces of ministerial correspondence. The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the volume of Members' correspondence received by Departments. The report for 2002 was published on 15 May 2003, Official Report, columns 18–21W. Copies of previous reports are available in the Library of the House.

We keep the nominated next of kin of the deceased informed of progress in the continuing investigations into the deaths.

Armaments

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the armaments that can be used against (a) mechanised columns, (b) ammunition storage sites and (c) surface o air missile sites. [109683]

Mr. Ingram: The armed forces are equipped with a wide range of armaments that could be used against such targets.

The actual armament used will depend upon the specific nature and location of the target.

Armed Forces (Harmony Guidelines)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) which (a) Infantry, (b) Royal Artillery, (c) Royal Armoured Corps, (d) Royal Engineers and (e) Royal Signals units have not met their harmony guidelines in the past two years; [140220]

(2) which (a) Royal Navy vessels and (b) RAF squadrons have not met their harmony guidelines in the past two years. [140221]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Armoured Land Rovers

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many armoured Land Rovers are deployed with UK forces in Iraq; and whether this will be affected by the Ministry of Defence's decision to sell some of its stock of armoured Land Rovers. [130792]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Army (Tour Intervals)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which (a) Infantry, (b) Royal Artillery, (c) Royal Armoured Corps, (d) Royal Engineers and (e) Royal Signals units have had less than 12 months between tour intervals in the past five years. [140219]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what the present average tour interval is for infantry regiments in the Army. [137727]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 10 November 2003]: The Army's Harmony guidelines recommend a tour interval of 24 months between each six month operational tour for Army battalions, which equates to one tour in each 30 month period. Between first May 2001 and 31 October 2003 infantry battalions undertook an average of about 1.3 tours. This is primarily the result of the Army's commitments on Operation Telic in Iraq and we therefore expect the situation to improve as commitments reduce.

Australian Defence Programmes

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions there have been between the UK Government and the Australian Government on future strategic tanker and offensive air system programmes; and if he will make a statement. [109352]

Mr. Ingram: Ministry of Defence officials have discussed future offensive air systems with the Australian Government on a number of occasions. The United Kingdom and Australian Government are co-operating on work to demonstrate new technologies that will allow cruise missiles to be safely launched from large transport aircraft. This work is part of the UK's Future Offensive Air System project, and is being carried out by MBDA UK Ltd.

Officials have also provided occasional briefings to Australia about our requirement and planned PFI procurement strategy for the Future Strategic Tanker Aircraft (FSTA). FSTA was also discussed briefly during a meeting that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence held with Senator Robert Hill, Australian Defence Minister, on 12 November 2003.

C-130J Aircraft

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of RAF C-130J aircraft had been planned to be out of service in 2003 owing to maintenance; and if he will make a statement. [135801]

Mr. Ingram: The planned number of C-130J aircraft on routine, scheduled maintenance at any one time is normally one aircraft, equating to 4 per cent. of the 25 aircraft fleet. However, due to the heavy use of the fleet on Operation TELIC, this has been increased to a planned average of 1.5 aircraft; this equates to 6 per cent.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what percentage of RAF C-130J aircraft (a) are and (b) have been judged to be below mission readiness owing to chronic engine problems in each month in 2003; [135803]

(2) how many RAF C-130 J aircraft (a) are out of service and (b) have been out of service in each month of 2003 owing to (i) routine maintenance and (ii) engine problems; and if he will make a statement. [135802]

Mr. Ingram: "Chronic engine problems" has been taken to refer to significant faults such as turbine failures and generator problems that have caused engine rejections. Faults such as low oil pressure and other routine faults have not been included.

As at 0800 on 30 October 2003, nine RAF C-130J aircraft were out of service. Of these nine, two aircraft were back in service 24 hours later. The average number of aircraft unavailable due to routine maintenance and engine problems during the first 10 months of 2003 is provided in the following table. Some aircraft may have undergone routine maintenance at the same time as being out of service for engine related problems.

The figures in the table are not whole numbers because they are calculated as the number of aircraft that were unserviceable during the month multiplied by the proportion of the month that each aircraft was out of service. As an example, if one aircraft was unserviceable for 40 per cent. of the month then this would give an average of 0.4, as in January. These figures have then been expressed as a percentage in the second table.

Month	Average number of aircraft unserviceable for engine problems	Average number of aircraft in scheduled maintenance
January	0.4	2.0
February	1.2	2.0

Month	Average number of aircraft unserviceable for engine problems	Average number of aircraft in scheduled maintenance
March	1.2	1.1
April	1.2	1.3
May	7.7	1.3
June	5.1	1.0
July	4.6	1.8
August	6.0	1.2
September	6.1	1.7
October	7.2	1.9

Average percentage of fleet (25 aircraft) unserviceable due to chronic engine faults during each month of 2003 (adjusted for proportion of month each aircraft was unserviceable)

Month	Percentage of fleet
January	1
February	5
March	5
April	5
May	31
June	20
July	18
August	24

Childhood Obesity

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with other departments about implementing a strategy to tackle childhood obesity. [138787]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Chinook

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many Mark 3 Chinooks the RAF has; what their cost to the RAF was in the last year for which figures are available; how many are active; and what the location is of those which are (a) active and (b) inactive. [128601]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the right hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Cluster Bombs

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the military strategic value of the use of cluster bombs in future conflicts based on experience in Iraq in the current year. [130985]

Mr. Ingram: As a matter of course we conduct an exhaustive assessment after every military operation involving UK Forces. One element of this work will be an assessment of the effectiveness of all the equipment used during the operation. The publication of the Iraq lessons report is expected at the end of the year.

Combat Stress

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what help is being given to troops returning to the United Kingdom to cope with combat stress. [138955]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 30 June 2003]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Defence Procurement

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out his policy on defence procurement. [140100]

Mr. Ingram: Our Acquisition Policy is set out in the Ministry of Defence Policy Paper No 4—Defence Acquisition. The Policy is driven by the need to secure and sustain the defence capabilities at the best value for money and at a price we can afford. Competition remains the principal means of achieving value for money, although we will consider alternative strategies, such as partnering, where they are more appropriate.

Our Defence Industrial Policy, published in October 2002, sets out in more detail our approach to considering industrial issues in our Acquisition system.

MOD Policy Paper No 4—Defence Acquisition is available in the House of Commons Library and via the website: http://www.mod.uk/issues/acquisition/index.htm

Defence Industrial Policy Paper No 5: http://www.mod.uk/issues/industrial—policy.htm

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

EU Directives

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the EU directives implemented by the Department since 8 June 2001. [126601]

Mr. Caplin: The Ministry of Defence is consulted by other Government Departments on the negotiation or implementation of various European Directives. But EU Directives do not generally relate specifically to the MOD and the MOD has not been the lead Department in implementing any EU Directives since June 2001.

European Working Groups

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress with achieving transparency in respect of the European working groups for which his Department is responsible. [105745]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Formation Readiness Cycle

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the formation readiness cycle; and whether it has met the delivery aims set out in the Strategic Defence Review. [140223]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Future Aircraft Carrier

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the estimated date of delivery is of the first ship in the future aircraft carrier project; and in which financial year peak procurement expenditure is expected to fall. [110264]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on progress with the future aircraft carrier programme; [140225]

(2) what changes have been made in the design specifications for the future aircraft carrier; [140226]

(3) what the value of the future aircraft carrier contract was (a) when it was awarded and (b) at the latest available date; [140227]

(4) what assessment he has made of the effect upon contractors of changes in design specifications for the future aircraft carrier. [140253]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Future Command Liaison Vehicle

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what assessment he has made of the effect of the Future Rapid Effects System programme on procurement of the Future Command Liaison Vehicle. [139687]

Mr. Ingram: The number of Future Command Liaison Vehicles (FCLV) ordered takes into account the current analysis of the Future Rapid Effect System (FRES) requirement.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his written statement of 6 November 2003, Official Report, column 44WS, on Future Command Liaison Vehicle, what armoured vehicle arrangements will be made for the RAF Regiment; and how many vehicles from the manoeuvre and support brigades' fleet will be used to make up the shortfall. [139688]

Mr. Ingram: The RAF Regiment's requirement is being met by its current fleet of TUM (Land Rovers) and Saxons, and these will continue to be supported through life.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, when he expects to make a decision on the procurement of the second batch of the Future Command Liaison Vehicle. [139689]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence signed a contract with Alvis Vickers Limited for an initial batch of 401 Future Command and Liaison Vehicles, with the option to purchase a further 400 vehicles. We continue to keep our requirement under review, taking into account the Armoured Fighting Vehicle Rationalisation and Future Army Structure studies, as well as progress with the Future Rapid Effects System programme.

Future Strategic Tanker Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many United Kingdom jobs he forecasts will be involved with each of the bidders for the Future Strategic Tanker Aircraft contract; and if he will make a statement. [140041]

Mr. Ingram: The Future Strategic Tanker Aircraft PFI competition has yet to be concluded. Our decision will be based on the solution that provides the required capability at best value for money. Both bids could be expected to create or sustain several thousand jobs in the United Kingdom.

Fylingdales

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research he has collated on the health of the population in the vicinity of Fylingdales. [139361]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has not collated any research on the state of health of the local population near RAF Fylingdales. The radar there operates well within health guidelines established by the National Radiological Protection Board. Local health authorities are however undertaking their own research in response to public concerns raised on this matter.

Gripen Jets (Czech Republic)

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many meetings he has held with the Government of the Czech Republic regarding the possible sale of Gripen jets and the Czech decision to buy supersonic aircraft since 1 January 1999; when each of these meetings was held; where each of these meetings was held; and whom in the Government of the Czech Republic he met on each occasion. [123159]

Mr. Ingram: Defence Ministers are in frequent contact with members of the government of the Czech Republic and regularly meet in both bilateral and multilateral fora. A range of issues are routinely discussed.

The Defence Secretary held formal bilateral meetings at which the Czech requirement for supersonic aircraft was discussed on the following occasions:

23 November 1999 during the WEU Ministerial meeting in Luxembourg—with the Czech Defence Minister;

11 October 2000 in the UK (London)—with the Czech Prime Minister;

3–4 December 2001 in the Czech Republic (Prague)—with the Czech Defence Minister;

23 July 2002 in the UK (Farnborough International Air Show)—with the Czech Defence Minister;

24 September 2002 during the NATO informal Defence Ministers' meeting in Poland (Warsaw)—with the Czech Defence Minister;

21 November 2002 during the NATO Summit in the Czech Republic (Prague)—with the Czech Defence Minister;

30 April 2003 in the Czech Republic (Prague)—with the Czech Defence Minister

Gulf Personnel

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many British personnel are in the Gulf. [125039]

Mr. Ingram: The precise number of personnel in the Gulf fluctuates daily. As at 19 November there were around 10,600 United Kingdom personnel in the Gulf area.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of whether Gulf War Syndrome exists; what relevant studies of the issue he has recently assessed; and if he will make a statement on future expenditure on (a) research and (b) treatment for people suffering from Gulf War illnesses. [139405]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Hutton Inquiry

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his comments before the Hutton Inquiry, what precedent the Permanent Secretary feared would be created in allowing Dr. Kelly to appear before the Foreign Affairs Committee. [129707]

Mr. Hoon: I assume that my right hon. Friend is referring to the oral evidence which I gave on 27 August at pages 81–84 of the transcript. The concern about creating a precedent in fact related to the Intelligence and Security Committee, not the Foreign Affairs Committee. This is clear from Sir Kevin Tebbit's minute of 10 July which has been published on the Hutton Inquiry website (reference MOD/1/0075).

Infantry Battalions

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) pursuant to his answer of 13 November 2003, Official Report, column 433W, on infantry battalions, which army battalions have made representations to his Department in relation to the forthcoming Defence White Paper; [139935]

(2) what discussions he has held with representatives of army infantry battalions prior to producing the Defence White Paper; [139936]

(3) what assessment his Department has made of the financial effects of restructuring Scottish army battalions; [139937]

(4) when he last held discussions with representatives of Scottish infantry battalions. [140018]

Mr. Ingram: No discussions have been held with representatives of Army Infantry Battalions prior to producing the Defence White Paper; nor have discussions been held with representatives of Scottish Infantry Battalions. No assessment has been made of the financial benefits of restructuring Scottish Army Battalions. No Army Battalions have made direct representations to the Ministry of Defence in relation to the forthcoming Defence White Paper. Representations have, however, been received from representatives of Army Battalions, for instance, from individuals in regimental associations.

Information Technology

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's (a) total managed expenditure, (b) total spending on information technology and (c) spending on information technology as a proportion of its total managed expenditure was in each financial year since 1997–98. [107179]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Joint Strike Fighters

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many joint strike fighters he intends to deploy on each future aircraft carrier; [139500]

(2) how many joint strike fighters would need to be purchased to support the deployment of 96 of such aircraft on the two future aircraft carriers; [139501]

(3) what maximum number of joint strike fighters could be simultaneously regularly deployed on the two future aircraft carriers, if the total purchase of joint strike fighters were reduced to 110 aircraft. [139502]

Mr. Ingram: While no final decisions have been taken, our current planning assumption is that we will acquire up to 150 Short Take Off and Vertical Landing variants of the Joint Strike Fighter aircraft which is sufficient to meet our Future Joint Combat Aircraft (FJCA) requirements.

FJCA is not meant solely to be deployed on our future carrier. It will be a truly joint aircraft capable of operating from both land and sea. The precise number of FJCA we would deploy on future carriers would be dependent on the mission to be undertaken, other rotary wing and surveillance assets being deployed, and other operations being undertaken concurrently.

Kenya

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Kenyan citizens paid compensation by the Department in July 2002 were paid at (a) Kenyan and (b) British compensation rates. [140001]

Mr. Ingram: When a claim from overseas is heard in the United Kingdom under both common law and Part III of the Private International Law (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1995 any aspect of damages to be regarded as quantitative will be governed by the law of the country where the case is heard. In the case of Kenyan tribespeople claiming compensation for injury allegedly caused by unexploded ordnance, the level of damages awarded were assessed according to English principles.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what procedures were used by the Department to investigate the claims of the Kenyan citizens paid compensation in July 2002. [140002]

Mr. Ingram: The investigation of a claim is tailored to meet the specific circumstances of each case.

In the case of Kenyan tribespeople claiming compensation for injuries allegedly caused by unexploded ordnance, the Ministry of Defence appointed a recently retired Brigadier and a serving Major to investigate the claims in both Kenya and the UK. In addition, a British Army surgeon was instructed to examine the medical evidence. Although the Ministry of Defence disputed liability in a number of cases, evidence based on inquest reports, Kenyan magistrates courts records, post mortem reports, police investigation reports, police post incident reports, certificates of death and medical reports indicated that some limited liabilities rested with the Department. A settlement was reached through mediation in July 2002.

Life Insurance

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) of 27 October 2003, Official Report, column 6W, on life insurance, how many (a) regular and (b) reserve personnel serving in the Gulf have cover; and how many do not. [139236]

Mr. Ingram: Commercial life insurance is not part of the benefits the Ministry of Defence provides. For those who die in Service or leave the Service due to injury, the MOD's support is provided by the War Pension Scheme, the Armed Forces Pension Scheme and (for reservists) the Reserve Forces (Attributable Benefits Etc) Regulations. Moreover, as personal insurance is a complex area and one that is becoming increasingly regulated by the Financial Services Authority, it is MOD policy not to endorse, sponsor or recommend any commercial insurance scheme. Therefore, while MOD encourages regulars and reservists to ensure that they are appropriately insured for their particular circumstances, the decision whether to purchase cover, and which scheme to join, must be a matter for the individual, and as such is not monitored by the Ministry of Defence.

Market Research

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on (a) opinion polling and (b) market research in the last financial year; and if he will make a statement. [139989]

Mr. Caplin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 28 April 2003, Official Report, columns 57–58W, by my hon. Friend the Member for Kirkcaldy (Dr. Moonie) to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow).

Market Testing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the estimated level of saving to the Department is from the use of market testing in 2002–03. [107756]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could not be compiled without disproportionate cost. Market testing has been subsumed into MOD's wider arrangements for evaluating differing acquisition options for services, including Public Private Partnerships.

Medical Downgradings

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of each service are medically downgraded; what percentage of the trained strength this represents; and if he will make a statement. [139273]

Mr. Caplin [holding 19 November answer 2003]: The fact that an individual is medically downgraded does not mean that they are not working. The vast majority of those downgraded will be working normally, albeit with their deployability limited by their medical condition. Those who are categorised as medically downgraded includes not only those who are ill, or injured and awaiting treatment, but also pregnant personnel, and personnel who are permanently downgraded because of a long-term condition, but are retained in the Services in recognition of their training, skills and experience.

The latest figures available are for July 2003, when the following numbers of trained Regular Service personnel were reported to be in a medically downgraded category.

	Total number of trained personnel in medically downgraded category	Percentage of trained strength, by Service, who are medically downgraded
Royal Navy	2,410	8.0
Royal Marines	590	9.2
Army[1]	10,600	12.5
Royal Air Force	4,470	9.2

[1] Figures are not currently available for Army Officers

Notes:

1. These figures exclude Full Time Reserve Service personnel (FTRS), Gurkhas, Royal Irish (home service) and reservists who have been mobilised for duty.
2. The Royal Navy and Royal Marines figures are based on their Medical Category, and are all those who are not categorised as P2 (Fit for worldwide service without restriction)
3. The Army figures are based on the PULHHEEMS standards, showing those who are not able to be graded Forward Everywhere (FE), which means that they are not employable in full combatant duties, in any area, in any part of the world. The figures include those who are temporarily and permanently downgraded.
4. The RAF figures are based on the Medical Employment Standard, and are all those who have a limitation against their "Ground" work capability.

As the Services each have a different method of determining who is medically fit for role, the figures are not comparable.

Military Aircraft

Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the number of (a) United States and (b) United Kingdom military aircraft flying over Scotland since 1 September. [138468]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 17 November 2003]: The information sought is not held in the required format. Details of the number of United States and British military aircraft flying over Scotland above 2,000 feet are not held centrally. However, all military aircraft flying within the United Kingdom low flying system, that is those that operate below 2,000 feet, are recorded. Low flying areas (LFAs) 14 and 16 most closely conform to the geographic boundaries of Scotland.

The numbers of aircraft that flew within these LFAs between 1 September and 7 November are as follows:

Aircraft type	Number of military aircraft
British Military Fixed Wing	3,510
British Military Rotary	361

Aircraft type	Number of military aircraft
US Military Fixed Wing	91
US Military Rotary	0
Total	3,962

Military Capabilities

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether it is his intention that a reduction in the size of the two future aircraft carriers will lead to no diminution of military capability. [139596]

Mr. Ingram: No final decisions have yet been taken on the main capability specifications for the Future Aircraft Carrier programme, currently in its Assessment Phase. The intention, as with any other new equipment project, has always been to use the Assessment Phase to refine the design in order to best meet our capability requirements and to ensure value for money.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what aspects of the designed capability of (a) Type 45 destroyers, (b) Astute-class submarines and (c) Joint Strike Fighters have been changed since 1998. [139597]

Mr. Ingram: The United Kingdom Type 45 destroyer programme began in late 1999, following completion of Phase 1 of the tri-national Horizon programme which was carried out in collaboration with France and Italy. Much of the designed capability under the Horizon programme is being developed further in the Type 45 programme and has increased in a number of areas. The most significant change from Horizon has been in the provision for growth so that equipments may be added later to meet future capability requirements. The Type 45 design also incorporates a number of features to enable it to support and deploy an Embarked Military Force of 60 troops. In addition, it includes improvements to the operational range in extreme environmental conditions and the development of an Integrated Electric Propulsion system, which will reduce through life costs.

The designed capability of the Astute class submarines has increased in some areas since 1998. These changes comprise: improved weapon handling and discharge; increased weapon stowage capacity, together with an additional torpedo tube; the fitting of Tomahawk missile capability; and the introduction of improved tactical data link capability, which allows joint operational planning to be conducted by co-operating forces and the UK HQ. Also under consideration are options for the inclusion of capability, such as improved navigation and data communications, in the first three boats which was originally planned for later submarines in the Class.

The Joint Strike Fighter project is currently in the Systems Demonstration and Development (SDD) phase. There has been no change in the designed capability of the aircraft since the contract for the SDD phase was let in October 2001. In the previous Concept Demonstration Phase, which began in 1996, the joint UK/US operational requirement was developed to arrive at an affordable solution to satisfy the needs of the UK and the three participating US Services.

Military Exercises

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 November 2003, Official Report, columns 51–52W, on military exercises (cancellation), how many military exercises were cancelled in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 to date; what savings were made from cancellations; and if he will make a statement. [139274]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 November 2003]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Military Vehicles

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many vehicles there are in the manoeuvre and support brigades' fleet; and how many of this fleet are (a) Saxons, (b) Land Rovers, (c) drawn from the 430 Series and (d) drawn from the Combat Vehicle Reconnaissance (Tracked) fleets. [139690]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Ministerial Meetings

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when since 1 January 1999 Ministers in his Department have held meetings with the Government of Qatar; which Ministers in his Department attended each of these meetings; and where each of these meetings was held. [123011]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

National Insurance

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost will be to public funds in 2003–04 of the rise in national insurance contributions on the salary bill of his Department. [107910]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Non-lethal Chemical Agents

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list out-of-country missions in the last 20 years when British forces have (a) carried with them and (b) used non-lethal chemical agents; and in each case what the agents were, in which amounts and which delivery devices were used; [128866]

(2) if he will make a statement on UK policy on the use of non-lethal chemical agents by UK forces abroad. [128865]

Mr. Ingram [holding answers 10 September and 11 September 2003]: The Chemical Weapons Convention prohibits the development, production and use of all toxic chemicals and their precursors, except where they are intended for purposes not prohibited under the Convention, as long as the type and quantities are consistent with such purposes. "Purposes not prohibited" includes protective purposes related to protection against chemical weapons, as well as "law enforcement including domestic riot control purposes". United Kingdom armed forces comply with the UK's obligations under international law. We therefore would only carry, and would only use, non-lethal chemical agents for protective purposes related to protection against chemical weapons and for "law enforcement including domestic riot control purposes".

Records of out-of-country operational deployments from 1983 to 2003 show only two deployments of 'non-lethal chemical agents' with UK Forces. These were to Bosnia in 1997, and to Kosovo between January and July 1999. UK troops in Bosnia and Kosovo were provided with CS or CR for activities relating to law enforcement activities. The delivery systems that could be used would be by shotgun cartridge or grenade.

CS has also been taken overseas for defensive training purposes. This includes, for example, NBC training in Germany and testing of respirators onboard Royal Navy vessels.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the sites on which intermediate level nuclear waste for which his Department is responsible is stored; and what volume is stored on each site. [139524]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 18 November 2003]: Information about the locations and amounts of MOD radioactive waste is regularly published in the National Inventory. This includes intermediate level nuclear waste. The latest edition (published on 22 October 2002) shows a snapshot in time as of April 2001. It describes all stocks of waste held in the UK including that from the Ministry of Defence at that date, together with predictions of wastes arising in the future.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost to the United Kingdom of (a) housing United States nuclear weapons and (b) the planned modernisation of storage facilities for United States nuclear weapons in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [139679]

Mr. Hoon: All costs associated with the United States visiting forces based in the United Kingdom are subject to confidential cost sharing arrangements between the UK and US Governments. I am therefore withholding the information requested under Exemption 1 (defence, security and international relations) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Official Properties

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the Department spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [134686]

Mr. Hoon: The Ministry of Defence provides accommodation for Service personnel (and for United Kingdom based civil servants serving abroad) as a condition of service. Within the Service Families Accommodation stock of some 75,000 properties worldwide are 37 properties known as Official Service Residences. These properties are maintained to a higher than normal standard, owing to the presentational role of the occupant and the requirement for them to host and sometimes accommodate guests of the most senior level, including representatives of overseas states, in their homes. The MOD is also responsible for costs associated with the Government-owned official residence assigned to the Secretary of State for Defence by the Prime Minister during 2002.

Costs for these 37 properties (excluding staff costs and income from charges paid), and those for the residence provided for the Secretary of State for Defence for the last two years are shown in the table. Data prior to this was not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Moonie: There was no delay in answering Parliamentary Question No 34033 of Session 2001–02. The reply was printed on 12 February 2003, Official Report, column 170W.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the performance targets that (a) his Department and (b) its agencies and non-departmental public bodies are required to meet; and if he will specify for each target (i) who sets it and (ii) who monitors achievement against it. [139781]

Submarines

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the projected size is of the nuclear submarine fleet excluding the SSBNs. [139598]

Mr. Ingram: In line with the 1998 Strategic Defence Review, current plans are that the Royal Navy's Swiftsure and Trafalgar class nuclear attack submarine (SSN) force level will reduce to 10 vessels by 2006. The Swiftsure and Trafalgar class vessels will be progressively superseded by new Astute class capability through a phased replacement programme towards the end of this decade.

After 2006, there will be variations each year in the number of SSNs, depending on the precise schedule of the decommissioning of in-service boats and the entry into service of the new capability. Final decisions on the overall size of the Astute class have yet to be taken.

Mr. Ingram: The Royal Navy does not seek to maintain continuous deployments of individual ship types, the only exception being the Vanguard class submarine. Instead, we aim to balance capability across the fleet against current and potential tasks. The modern Type 45 destroyers will have increased availability and improved capability beyond that of the Type 42s that they are due to replace.

Mr. Ingram: The Eurofighter Typhoon will be a multi-role aircraft and will have an initial ground attack capability. The enhancements are likely to cover datalink and avionics upgrades and integration of a range of air to ground weapons.

Recent assessments have included a usability study of the site's business to business information services. NM Rothschild and Sons Ltd

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on services provided to his Department by NM Rothschilds since 1997. [139966]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was established in May 2002 and there have been no contracts with NM Rothschild.

Office Costs

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the estimated cost of running his Departmental office was for each year since it was established, broken down by (a) telephone bills, (b) total staff costs, (c) press and communications, (d) entertainment, (e) alcoholic drinks, (f) non-alcoholic drinks, (g) stationery, (h) office refurbishment and (i) other; and what the estimate for the current year is. [121807]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 1 July 2003, Official Report, 260W.

The estimate cost of running the Deputy Prime Minister's Departmental Private Office for the current year is £408,000.

All expenditure incurred for running the Deputy Prime Minister's Departmental office is made in accordance with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in "Government Accounting".

Performance Monitoring

Mr. Flight: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the performance targets that (a) his Department and (b) its agencies and non-departmental public bodies are required to meet; and if he will specify for each target (i) who sets it and (ii) who monitors achievement against it. [137965]

Yvette Cooper: Key performance targets for the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are agreed as part of the Spending Review and the latest set were published in Spending Review 2002: Public Service Agreements 2003–06 (Cm 5571). The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister monitors progress towards the target along with HM Treasury and PMDU and progress is reported regularly.

Ministers set the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's executive agencies' key targets for 2003–04. These either were or will be announced to Parliament through written ministerial statements—details are as set out as follows. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister regularly monitors performance against each agency's targets. All of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's agencies publish an Annual Report and Accounts at the end of the financial year, which report on their performance against their targets.

I refer the hon. Member to the statements on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's agencies' targets as given on:

13 March 2003, Official Report, column 26WS: The Rent Service

11 April 2003, Official Report, columns 35–36WS: Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre

11 June 2003, Official Report, columns 47–48WS: Planning Inspectorate

The Fire Service College's targets are expected to be announced shortly. In addition, while Ordnance Survey is a department in its own right, with executive agency status, it reports to the Ministers of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. The statement on its targets for 2003–04 was given on 11 April 2003, Official Report, column 35WS.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister sponsors nine executive non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs); the Audit Commission, English Partnerships, four Housing Action Trusts (Castle Vale, Liverpool, Stonebridge and Tower Hamlets), the Housing Corporation, the Standards Board for England and Thurrock Urban Development Corporation.

Performance targets for executive NDPBs sponsored by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, including outputs to be achieved, are agreed by Ministers and set out in the published business or corporate plan of the NDPB. Copies of plans are available from the relevant body. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister monitors performance against these targets and progress is discussed with Ministers. The outputs and achievements of each executive NDPB are set out in its annual report, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister sponsors seven advisory NDPBs; the Advisory Panel on Beacon Councils, the Advisory Panel on Standards for the Planning Inspectorate, the Building Regulations Advisory Committee, the Community Forum, the Property Advisory Group, the Parliamentary Boundary Commission for England and Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Wales.

No performance targets are set for the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's advisory NDPBs. Each advisory body normally sets its own programme of work for each year within its remit to advise Ministers on the particular policy area and agrees this with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. No formal monitoring of performance takes place for these advisory bodies but outputs are set out in each body's annual report.

Periodicals

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the periodicals that (a) his ministerial office, (b) other ministerial offices within his Department, (c) non-departmental bodies, (d) executive agencies and (e) his Department have subscribed to since May 2002. [138119]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is available in the Library of the House. Weekly newspapers and tabloid-format periodicals that have the appearance of newspapers have been classed as "periodicals" and included in the list available in the Library of the House. The information relates solely to central procurement in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister Central. Information for the executive agencies, Non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) and the Government offices is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Planning Policy (Renewable Energy)

Mr. Best: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the forthcoming review of Planning Policy Guidance Note 22: Renewable Energy will include the consideration of land use planning as a means of reducing the UK's energy demands. [140348]

Keith Hill: The Government issued Draft Planning Policy Statement 22 (PPS22): "Renewable Energy" for consultation on 5 November. The document sets out the Government's new proposals for the handling of all types of renewable energy projects through the planning system. In addition, as promised in the Energy White Paper, this Government is currently examining, together with other government departments, how to bring consideration of the use of renewables and energy efficiency in developments more within the scope of the planning system.

Mr. Best: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with colleagues in the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs about the review of Planning Policy Guidance Note 22: Renewable Energy. [140349]

Keith Hill: Ministers in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister discussed the review of Planning Policy Guidance note 22: Renewable Energy at the 9 October meeting of the Ministerial Group on the Implementation of the Energy White Paper. This committee is jointly chaired by my right hon. Friend the Member for Derby South and my right hon. Friend the Member for Leicester West. My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister also sought written clearance on the consultation paper from ministerial colleagues. The ministerial activity has, at all stages, been underpinned by official level correspondence, discussions and meetings.

Private Parking Firms

John Mann: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what regulations exist to ensure transparency in local authority contracts with private parking firms which operate on local authority land. [140059]

Mr. McNulty: I have been asked to reply.

Local authority contracts in connection with provision of parking services are subject to the normal public procurement procedures for letting of any contract by an authority.

Rate Support Grant (Kirklees)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the (a) actual and (b) percentage increases in Government Rate Support Grant for Kirklees Metropolitan Council were in each year since 1997. [139699]

Mr. Raynsford: Revenue Support Grant is only one component of each year's local government settlement, and taken in isolation could give a misleading impression. The annual increases in formula grant (revenue support grant and redistributed business rates), adjusted to give a like for like comparison each year, are listed in the table.

	Formula grant increase (£ million)	Formula grant increase (percentage)
1998–99	7.8	3.5
1999–2000	9.7	4.2
2000–01	9.5	3.9
2001–02	8.0	3.2
2002–03	12.8	5.1
2003–04	19.7	7.3
2004–05[1]	15.4	5.3

Regional Co-ordination Unit

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many conferences staff of the regional co-ordination unit have attended each year since its establishment; what the cost was in each case; and how many were overseas conferences. [138106]

Yvette Cooper: Regional co-ordination unit staff attend a small number of conferences (none overseas) to help fulfil the RCU's role as the corporate centre of the Government Offices in the English Regions. However, the information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many conferences have been organised by the Regional Co-ordination Unit in each year since it was established; and what the cost was of each. [138107]

Yvette Cooper: The Regional Co-ordination Unit organises high-level meetings and a small number of other events involving its 10 sponsor Government Departments and other stakeholders, however, the detailed information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many publications have been issued by the Regional Co-ordination Unit in each year since its formation; and what the annual cost was. [138133]

Yvette Cooper: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Regional Resilience Forums

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the core membership of each regional resilience forum is. [140224]

Mr. Raynsford: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Rural Housing

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister for what reasons rural allocations have been made by the Housing Corporation to individual local authorities without specifying site location. [140279]

Keith Hill: The Housing Corporation normally seeks to allocate funds to registered social landlords for the development of schemes on identified sites. However, experience has shown that some of the rural schemes may not proceed as anticipated due to difficulties in obtaining planning permission and other development matters. To ensure continued delivery of affordable homes in rural areas, the Housing Corporation issues additional rural allocations to enable registered social landlords to bring forward schemes on sites which are identified during the year.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many allocations were made to rural housing providers in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04 to date. [140318]

Keith Hill: In 2002–03 the Housing Corporation approved through its Approved Development Programme 1,579 homes provided by registered social landlords in small rural settlements of 3,000 people or less. In 2003–04, approval has been given for 647 homes in small settlements up to the end of October 2003.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many allocations to rural housing schemes were made under transitional arrangements to replace local authority social housing grant in 2002–03. [140268]

Keith Hill: The Housing Corporation is currently collating the information requested. I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Social Housing

Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many social housing properties were (a) vacant and (b) constructed in each London borough in each of the last six years for which figures are available. [139931]

Keith Hill: The total numbers of local authority (LA) and registered social landlord (RSL) dwellings that were (a) vacant and (b) constructed in each London borough for each of the last six years are tabled as follows.

Supporting People Programme

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister for what reasons the Supporting People programme has been transferred within his Department to the Homelessness Directorate from the Housing and Care Support Division; and if he will make a statement. [140070]

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the reasons for the transfer of housing and support under the Supporting People initiative to the Homelessness Directorate. [140267]

Yvette Cooper: The transfer was an internal administrative decision to ensure that the appropriate skills and staff resources are invested in the Supporting People Programme.

Television

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) television licences and (b) satellite television subscriptions are held by (i) his ministerial office, (ii) other ministerial offices within his Department, (iii) non-departmental bodies, (iv) executive agencies and (v) his Department; and what the total cost has been in each case since May 2002. [138118]

Yvette Cooper: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Unauthorised Camping

Mr. Todd: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will publish the responses received to the Managing Unauthorised Camping Operational Guidance consultation paper. [137209]

Yvette Cooper: A copy of the responses received to the consultation paper on Managing Unauthorised Camping: Operational Guidance will be made available in the Libraries of the House.

I will write to my hon. Friend once this has been done.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will publish his response to the Managing Unauthorised Camping Operational Guidance consultation paper. [137210]

Yvette Cooper: Arrangements have been made for the analysis of responses to the consultation paper on 'Managing Unauthorised Camping: Operational Guidance', to be available on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Website.

The Guidance will be re-drafted to incorporate comments and will be published early next year.

Wind Farms

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will strengthen the Planning Policy Guidelines to create a presumption against the siting of wind farms in high value landscapes on the perimeter of National Parks. [139837]

Yvette Cooper: The Government issued Draft Planning Policy Statement 22 (PPS22): "Renewable Energy" for consultation on 5 November. The document sets out the Government's new proposals for the handling of all types of renewable energy projects through the planning system Additional safeguards are included for areas of important landscape and environmental sensitivity such as National Parks. However, local planning authorities should not create "buffer zones" around designated areas and apply blanket policies that prevent the development of renewable energy resources. Instead, planning authorities should set criteria based policies in plans to cover all parts of their area, including high value landscapes on the outside of National Parks. These policies should then be used for assessing any planning applications for renewable energy projects that are brought forward by developers.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ascension Island

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what rental contributions were paid by the United States Government to the Government for (a) the use of Wideawake Airport and (b) leasing of land owned by the Government on Ascension Island. [139767]

Mr. Rammell: Under the 1956 Bahamas Long Range Proving Ground Agreement between the United Kingdom and the United States, no rental contributions are paid from the United States to the United Kingdom Government or the Ascension Island Government for the use of Wideawake airfield or for the leasing of land on Ascension Island.

Iraq

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with (a) US authorities and (b) the Coalition Provisional Authority about the establishment in Iraq of a representative body similar to the Loya Jirga in Afghanistan to replace the Iraqi Governing Council. [138891]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had frequent meetings with US authorities and representatives of the Coalition Provisional Authority, at which a range of issues relating to Iraq are discussed. The formation of the future government of Iraq is a matter for the Iraqis. On 15 November, Jalal Talabani, President of the Iraqi Governing Council, announces a new plan for establishing a Transitional National Assembly formed through democratic caucus elections at provincial and local levels. At this point, the IGC will dissolve. There will also be an elected Constitutional Convention, leading to full national elections for a new representative Iraqi Government by the end of 2005.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are to alter the national flag of the Iraqi state. [139051]

Mr. Rammell: Any future alterations to the national flag of Iraq would be a matter for the Iraqis.

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the coalition administration in Iraq has maintained full income and expenditure accounts in respect of (a) sales of oil generated under the UN Oil for Food programme when it was in operation and (b) subsequent sales of oil on the world market; and if this information will be published. [134992]

Mr. Rammell: Maintaining accounts of Iraqi oil sales under the United Nations Oil for Food Programme is a matter for the United Nations. Sales of Iraqi oil on to the world market since the liberation of Iraq have been undertaken by the Iraqi State Oil Marketing Organisation, 95 per cent. of revenues from oil sales have been transferred immediately to the Development Fund for Iraq for use in the reconstruction of Iraq, and 5 per cent. has gone to the United Nations Compensation Commission as required under the terms of UN Security Council Resolution 1483. The accounts of the Development Fund for Iraq are subject to audit by the International Advisory and Monitoring Board (IAMB), comprising representatives of the World Bank, International Monetary Fund, United Nations and the Arab Fund for Social and Economic Development. The IAMB will make public all reports produced under its terms of reference.

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of whether UN Security Council Resolution 1483 permits the 100 per cent. purchase by foreign companies of all Iraqi economic sectors, excluding only natural resources. [135762]

Mr. Rammell: Resolution 1483 authorises the Coalition to undertake activities to promote economic reconstruction in Iraq, in co-ordination with the Special Representative of the UN Secretary General CPA Order 39 on Foreign Direct Investment permits up to 100 per cent. participation in a new or existing business in Iraq, but does not allow for foreign direct and indirect ownership of the natural resources sector involving primary extraction and initial processing. In addition, this Order does not apply to banks and insurance companies. Foreign direct investment is an important means of promoting employment opportunities and improving social welfare. This Order creates the conditions for much needed capital to enter the Iraqi economy.

The Government are therefore satisfied that Security Council Resolution 1483 provides a sound legal basis for the policy goals of the CPA Foreign Investment Order. We have also satisfied ourselves through UK officials working within the CPA, and the office of the UK Special Representative for Iraq that co-ordination with the UN has taken place, in consultation with the International Financial Institutions. The Order was approved by the Governing Council and had the support of the Minister of Finance.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what patrols UK Navy vessels are undertaking to prevent illegal smuggling of oil off the Iraqi coast; what progress has been made in stemming the trade; and if he will make a statement. [139681]

Mr. Straw: I will write to the right hon. and learned Member and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is on the method of election of the Government of Iraq. [140150]

Mr. Rammell: I will write to the hon. Member shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the conflict in Iraq on the war on terrorism. [140171]

Mr. Rammell: I will write to the hon. Member shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Uganda

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the progress made by the Government forces of Uganda against the Lord's Resistance Army; what assessment his Department has made of the probability of a military resolution to the civil war in Uganda; and if he will make a statement. [136639]

Mr. Mullin: Efforts by the Ugandan Government forces to defeat the rebel Lord's Resistance Army have so far been unsuccessful. While recognising the need for a security response, our assessment is that a military solution on its own is unlikely. We are encouraging the Government of Uganda to undertake parallel efforts at dialogue to resolve the conflict

Afghanistan

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens captured by Coalition forces in Afghanistan in 2002 remain in detention in Afghanistan. [139362]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We know of no British citizens captured by Coalition forces in Afghanistan in 2002, or at any other time since 11 September 2001, who remain in detention in Afghanistan.

Bechtel

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel for agencies responsible to his Department and its predecessor in each year since 1997, stating in each case (a) the nature of the work, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the duration of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [137888]

Mr. Rammell: The Wilton Park Executive Agency has not contracted with Bechtel during this period.

Border Controls

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what effects the European Constitution will have on United Kingdom border controls. [140277]

Mr. MacShane: I will write to the hon. Member shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Burma

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent action the Government has taken in relation to breaches of (a) human and (b) political rights in Burma. [139789]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 19 November 2003]: The UK has made regular representations to the Burmese authorities about the human rights situation in Burma, bilaterally, with our EU partners and at the United Nations. I regularly speak to EU partners and Burma's neighbours to press Burma on human rights issues.

In addition, the UK co-sponsored a resolution in the UN Commission on Human Rights (UNCHR) on 16 April 2003 and will be co-sponsoring a Burma resolution at this year's UN General Assembly concerning the abuse of all human rights in Burma.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to support the United States Government's stance on sanctions against Burma. [139790]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 19 November 2003]: Like the US, we believe that pressure on the regime is essential if we are to bring about democracy, national reconciliation, and respect for human rights in Burma.

With our EU colleagues we are currently discussing what further measures we may take to target those obstructing reform and progress in Burma, while ensuring that the ordinary people of Burma suffer as little as possible.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will reply to the letter to him dated 17 September from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mrs. Zubeda Islam. [133844]

Mr. Mullin: I can confirm that as a result of an administrative error, no reply was sent to my right hon. Friend to his letter to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, of 17 September about Mrs. Zubeda Islam.

The Foreign Secretary wrote to my right hon. Friend on 27 October on this case. I apologise for the delay in replying.

European Constitution

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will lay before Parliament a White Paper reproducing the texts of those proposed articles of the draft EU Constitution which are new and additional to those found within or included in the European treaties already in force, giving for each a statement of purpose and the reasons ministers have for supporting, amending or rejecting each and his assessment of whether each is (a) a new constitutional provision and (b) a tidying up. [137942]

Mr. MacShane: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

General Affairs and External Relations Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the outcome was of the General Affairs and External Relations Council held on 17 November; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement. [139942]

Mr. MacShane: The information is as follows:

Gibraltar

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his Spanish counterpart regarding Gibraltar in the last 12 months. [133208]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had a number of discussions with his Spanish counterpart on a range of issues in the last 12 months; the focus has not been Gibraltar.

Guantanamo Bay

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the meetings his Department has had with US officials and representatives in the last 12 months at which the issue of the Guantanamo Bay detainees has been formally raised. [139470]

Mr. Mullin [holding answer 19 November 2003]: Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers and officials have had regular discussions with the United States authorities in the last 12 months about the British nationals detained at Guantanamo Bay. The Government does not consider it appropriate to disclose detailed information about the dates of such negotiations since it would undermine the confidential nature of these diplomatic communications.

However, the Government's frequent contacts with my right hon. Friend the US Administration on this issue have included discussions between the Prime Minister and the US President and between UK and US Ministers, senior officials and lawyers. Since July, the Attorney General has led the UK in detailed discussions with the US Administration to resolve the position of all the British detainees held at Guantanamo Bay.

Indonesia

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when a permanent secretary or under-secretary in his Department has visited Indonesia since 1973; and what the purpose was of each visit. [133127]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [pursuant to my answer, 22 October 2003, Official Report, c. 615–16W]: An administrative error occurred in my answer of 22 October. The correct answer should read as follows:

4–5 July 2000 Permanent Secretary, to discuss bilateral and multilateral issues.

12–16 September 2000 Director General (Deputy Under Secretary) Wider World, familiarisation and to discuss bilateral and multilateral issues.

22–24 November 2000 Group Chief Executive (Permanent Secretary equivalent), British Trade International (a joint DTI/FCO Department), to discuss trade and investment issues.

30 July-3 August 2001 Director (Assistant Under Secretary) Asia/Pacific, to discuss bilateral and multilateral issues.

12–14 December 2001 Permanent Secretary (designate), as part of a programme of visits to familiarise himself with as many overseas posts as possible.

4–5 July 2002 Director (Assistant Under Secretary) Economic, to discuss economic and trade policy issues.

7–10 January 2003 Director (Assistant Under Secretary) Asia/Pacific, accompanying my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on his visit to Indonesia.

14 May 2003 Director (Assistant Under Secretary) Asia/Pacific (designate), to attend an ASEM senior officials meeting.

21–25 July 2003 Director (Assistant Under Secretary) Asia/Pacific, accompanying the Minister to the ASEM Foreign Ministers Meeting.

I regret that compiling the information requested for 1973–99 would involve disproportionate effort.

Iran

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) he and (b) members of his Department have had with representatives of the Russian Government on recent developments in Russian-Iranian negotiations concerning the repatriation of spent nuclear fuel; what impact an agreement will have on UK policy toward Iran; and if he will make a statement. [131529]

Mr. Rammell: This issue was most recently addressed in a wide-ranging discussion which my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary had with the Russian Foreign Minister Igor Ivanov at the United Nations General Assembly in New York in September.

Every opportunity is used to raise our concerns, both in ministerial and official contacts, about the negotiations between Russia and Iran on the return of spent nuclear fuel.

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he is having with Iran about bi-lateral relations. [132240]

Mr. Rammell: Ministers are in regular contact with Iranian leaders. The Foreign Secretary visited Tehran most recently on 21 October. Our policy towards Iran is one of constructive but critical engagement. We support reform in Iran, while continuing a robust dialogue on matters of concern such as Iran's nuclear programme, and policies on human rights, terrorism and the Middle East Peace Process.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the two UN working groups referred to in his 2003 Human Rights Report as planning visits to Iran to make them. [139705]

Mr. Rammell: The UN Human Rights Commission's Special Rapporteur on the Promotion and Protection of the Right to Freedom of Opinion and Expression visited Iran from 4–11 November The visit of the UN Working Group on Enforced Disappearances is currently scheduled for February 2004.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response the Government of Iran has made to the recommendations of the UN Working Group on Arbitrary Detentions. [139707]

Mr. Rammell: The Government of Iran has so far offered no formal or public reply to the recommendations of the UN Working Group on Arbitrary Detentions.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the EU to evaluate the outcome of the dialogue with Iran on improving human rights; and what assessment he has made of changes since the publication of his Department's Human Rights Report 2003. [139762]

Mr. Rammell: The EU regularly evaluates progress on the EU/Iran Human Rights Dialogue at both ministerial and official levels. At the October 2003 General Affairs and External Relations Council, EU Foreign Ministers reaffirmed their concern "about the human rights situation in Iran, including violations of civil and political rights, in particular the freedom of expression and the freedom of association, and systematic discrimination against women and girls, as well as against minorities". In the period since the FCO Human Rights Report was drafted, we assess that there has been some deterioration in the overall human rights situation in Iran.

Israel

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government will condemn (a) the Palestinian organisations engaged in suicide bombings of Israeli civilians and (b) the excessive use of force by the Government of Israel against Palestinians. [140120]

Mr. Rammell: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Market Research

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each item of market and opinion research commissioned since May 1997 by (a) his Department and (b) agencies and non-departmental public bodies for which his Department is responsible; what the purpose of each item was; and whether the results were published. [137015]

Mr. Rammell: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Library.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department spent on (a) opinion polling and (b) market research in the last financial year; and if he will make a statement. [139987]

Mr. Rammell: I will write to the hon. Member shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Middle East

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment the Government has made of the impact of the Israel Defense Forces Order Concerning Security Directives (Judea and Samaria) (No.378), 1970 Declaration Concerning Closing of Area Number s/2/03 (seam area) (Judea and Samaria) on (a) the Palestinian population of the area between the Green Line and the separation wall and (b) the prospects for a future Palestinian state to include the territory between the Green Line and the separation wall; and if he will make a statement. [139013]

Mr. Rammell: Initial reporting by the UN and other organisations indicates that the designation of a "Closed Zone" between the fence and the Green Line is severely hampering Palestinian daily life. Permits, issued by the Israeli authorities, are required for those Palestinians who live and work on land now designated as part of the Closed Zone.

We are concerned that a system of permits will not meet the legitimate needs of affected Palestinians. Other permit systems operated by the Israel Defence Forces can be unaccountable, inconsistent, unappealable and lack transparency. We understand that a number of permanent residents and Palestinians who work in the Closed Zone have been refused permits. Some permanent residents have received permits which are only valid for a limited period of time, and access for vehicles has been limited.

The effect has been to curtail the ability of Palestinians in the Closed Zone to travel and to access basic services. It has also hindered the cultivation and harvest of crops, and the care of livestock in this area. The designation of a Closed Zone is contributing to an already acute humanitarian situation. Staff from the ebassy and Consulate-General visited parts of the Closed Zone on 13 November to see the effect on Palestinians in the area.

We understand Israel's need to take steps, within international law, to protect itself from terrorist attack. But unilateral measures, such as the fence, will not provide lasting security. We are deeply concerned by the route taken by the fence, Its construction on occupied territory creates a further physical obstacle to a two-state solution. We have called on both sides not to take actions which pre-empt a final agreement.

My noble Friend, the Baroness Symons of Vernham Dean, raised our concerns about the Closed Zone between the fence and the Green Line on 22 October with the Israeli ambassador, and on 29 October with the Israeli Minister for National Infrastructure.

Moazzam Begg and Feroz Abbasi

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has received from the American Administration in support of their claim that they have the right to try Moazzam Begg and Feroz Abbasi as combatants; and if he will make a statement. [131805]

Mr. Mullin: The US authorities have made clear their view that the detainees at Guantanamo Bay are being held as enemy combatants. The question of the legal status of the detainees at Guantanamo Bay under international law depends on the facts relating to each individual detainee. The US, as the detaining power, has access to that information and in the first instance, the question of the status of the detainees is a matter for them.

Mr. Begg and Mr. Abbasi have been designated as eligible for Military Commissions, but have not yet been charged. Proceedings against them have been suspended pending the outcome of discussions between the British and US Governments.

Kenny Richey

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department had with US counterparts before the vote in the UN Security Council on the resolution condemning the building by Israel of the security wall in parts of the Occupied Territories; and for what reasons the UK decided to abstain in the vote. [133957]

Mr. Rammell: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy in the Library of the House.

NM Rothschild and Sons Ltd.

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on services provided to his Department by NM Rothschild since 1997. [139963]

Mr. Rammell: NM Rothschild was engaged in 1997 to provide consultancy advice on PFI options for a BBC World Service project to construct a relay station in Oman. The value of the contract was £88,125.

North Korea

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government has taken (a) to try to prevent North Korea from acquiring a nuclear weapon manufacturing capability, (b) to encourage the opening up of personal and transport communications between the peoples of North and South Korea and (c) to reduce human rights violations in North Korea. [140016]

Mr. Rammell: The Government continue to raise their concerns about North Korea's nuclear programmes directly with the DPRK authorities and encourages international efforts to resolve the issue peacefully. We support all efforts to improve the quality of communication between North and South Korea, and regularly urge DPRK to comply with the resolution adopted by the UN Commission on Human Rights earlier this year.

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to encourage amendments to the Non-Proliferation Treaty to enable (a) India, (b) Pakistan and (c) Israel to be admitted as nuclear states. [136702]

Mr. MacShane: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Weapons

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment (a) he and (b) his officials have made of the relevance to United Kingdom policies on non-proliferation of the study on disarmament and non-proliferation education study series number 30 (2003), produced by the United Nations Department for Disarmament Affairs for the United Nations Secretary General. [138060]

Mr. MacShane: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent report of the International Atomic Energy Authority on whether the Government of Iran has been proved to be holding (a) enriched uranium and (b) plutonium for the purposes of a nuclear weapons programme. [139418]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 19 November 2003]: The report of the Director-General of the International Atomic Energy Agency is confidential to the Agency's Board of Governors, who will discuss it at their next meeting on 20 November. I would not wish to pre-empt their discussions by making public statements about the report at this time.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the (a) US Administration and (b) UN representatives on the implications of the recent International Atomic Energy Authority Report on Iran. [139419]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 19 November 2003]: The Government have been engaged in intensive discussion with the US Administration, our EU partners and others about the report. We have worked closely with a range of partners on drafting a Resolution on Iran for discussion at the next meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency on 20 November.

Oil Sales (Iraq)

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the (a) expenditure on and (b) revenues generated by the sale of Iraqi oil on the world market since 1 May; and what projections have been made for the period from 1 November to 1 May 2004. [139855]

Mr. Timms: According to the Coalition Provisional Authority, to date $2.009 billion has been paid to the Development Fund for Iraq from the sale of oil since the conflict ended.

The Iraqi budget for 2004 includes a forecast of $12 billion for oil revenues. There is no available monthly breakdown.

The rehabilitation of the Iraqi oil industry is being undertaken and financed by the US government through The US Army Corps of Engineers. There is no detail on expenditure on post conflict rehabilitation projects available at this time.

Pakistan

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of Pakistan about its human rights record. [139358]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: On 4 November my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I met with Pakistani Foreign Minister Kasuri. One of the topics discussed was the issue of human rights in Pakistan. With our EU partners we regularly engage the Pakistani authorities on Human Rights issues. On 7 February 2003 EU member states delivered a comprehensive demarche underlining their concerns on a wide range of human rights related issues. These concerns were reiterated on 23 June 2003.

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his counterparts in (a) European Union member states and (b) other governments in connection with human rights in Pakistan. [139359]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has regular discussions on Pakistan with his counterparts in EU and other governments. Issues related to human rights are raised frequently.

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received of restrictions by the Pakistani Government on the freedom of movement of Mr. Shahbaz Bhatti, Chairman of the All Pakistan Minorities Alliance; and if he will raise the matter with the High Commissioner of Pakistan. [139360]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: On 14 October Mr. Shahbaz Bhatti, Chairman of the All Pakistan Minorities Alliance was placed on the Pakistan Interior Ministry's Exit Control List for reasons of national security. This means that Mr. Bhatti is restricted from leaving Pakistan. We understand that Mr. Bhatti has made a formal complaint to the Interior Ministry. Together with our EU colleagues we will be raising our concerns that this might be discriminatory use of the Exit Control List with the Government of Pakistan.

Russian Federation

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government is taking to ensure that the Russian federation authorities (a) do not extradite persons to any country where they would be at risk of the death penalty, torture or proceedings that fail to meet international fair trial standards, (b) immediately authorise the full publication of reports and recommendations made by the European Committee for the Prevention of Torture, (c) amend the law to combat terrorism to establish clear operational lines of accountability in anti-terrorist operations and ensure that those responsible for violating human rights in the context of such operations should be brought to justice and (d) adopt a law the primary concern of which is the best interests of children with mental disability. [140076]

Mr. Rammell: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Saudi Arabia

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the security (a) advice and (b) protection offered to employees of the British Council working in Saudi Arabia. [139753]

Mr. Rammell: The safety of staff and visitors is of paramount importance to the British Council. Their Security Committee in London meets regularly, and reviewed security arrangements for British Council operations in Saudi Arabia on 13 November.

The British Council's Security Adviser visited Saudi Arabia immediately following the 12 May terrorist attacks in Riyadh and reviewed security measures at British Council offices and staff accommodation throughout the country. His recommendations were fully implemented. A further security review is currently taking place.

The Director of the British Council in Riyadh is Cultural Attaché at the British embassy. The Embassy maintains close and regular contact with him and with his staff throughout the country, including through the Consulate General in Jedda and the British Trade Office in Al Khobar. In addition, the Embassy and its officers in Saudi Arabia raise security-related issues with the Saudi authorities on behalf of the British Council.

The Director of the British Council communicates to his staff the conclusions of security reviews and other advice related to security. All employees of the British Council in Saudi Arabia have access to the same advice as the FCO gives to all other British nationals, communicated through the FCO website and notes to or meetings with the community In our advice, we make clear that after the attack against the Muhayya residential compound in Riyadh on 9 November, we continue to believe terrorists are planning further attacks. We advise British nationals to take all necessary steps to protect their safety and make sure they have confidence in their individual security arrangements. We further advise British nationals to maintain a high level of vigilance, particularly in public places frequented by foreigners such as hotels, restaurants and shopping malls. They are advised to follow news reports and be alert to regional developments. We keep this advice under close review and up-date it regularly. The advice is available in full on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website.

Somalia

Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the facilities in Nairobi for Somalians applying for entry clearance in to the UK; and what plans he has to change the facilities. [139720]

Mr. Mullin: Our Visa Section at the High Commission in Nairobi is still unable to accept applications from Somali applicants without recognised identity documents. I recognise this problem and recently discussed it with staff at the High Commission during my visit to Nairobi in October.

As a response to a specific threat at our High Commission in December 2002 security restrictions were introduced affecting personal callers wishing to enter the High Commission compound. In line with these restrictions the Visa Section is still only able to accept applications for entry clearance from those who hold appropriate documentation confirming their nationality and identity. I recognise that these restrictions cause particular difficulties to Somali applicants. We are looking at ways to resolve this.

Sri Lanka

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what reports he has received from representatives of the UK Government in Sri Lanka concerning (a) President Chandrika Kumaratunga's declaration of a state of emergency on 5 November; and (b) Mrs. Kumaratunga's dismissal of the Sri Lankan Defence, Interior and Media Ministers; and if he will make a statement; [137707]

(2) when his Department will assess the impact of Sri Lankan President Chandrika Kumaratunga's declaration of a state of emergency on 5 November on the Sri Lankan peace process; what discussions he has had with (a) President Chandrika Kumaratunga, (b) Colonel Sumedha Perera, (c) Prime Minister Ranil Wickremesinghe, (d) representatives and members of the Government of India and (e) representatives and members of the Government of Japan; and if he will make a statement. [137708]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In my press statement on 6 November I said that we were following developments in Sri Lanka with increasing anxiety. A copy of the press release is available on the FCO website: www.fco.gov.uk/policy/news-press-releases. We have noted subsequent developments but remain particularly concerned for a speedy resumption of dialogue in a complex peace process. The UK strongly supports the peace process and hopes that the Sri Lankan President and Government will be able to resolve the current political uncertainties in a spirit of common commitment to the peace process.

Representatives of the British High Commission in Colombo meet regularly with Government and donor representatives. In the week beginning 3 November, the High Commissioner has met the President and a senior Government Minister and spoke to the Prime Minister; High Commission officials have met with representatives of the Indian and Japanese Governments and have spoken with representatives of the military.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Sri Lanka. [138826]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We welcome the reportedly cordial meeting between the President and Prime Minister of Sri Lanka on 12 November, and their decision to continue dialogue with all parties concerned and to meet again next week. It is most important that they quickly agree on how the peace process will again be taken forward. We also welcome the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam's continuing commitment to the peace process and ceasefire agreement. The continuing political uncertainties must not be allowed to jeopardise that process.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the declaration of a state of emergency in Sri Lanka and its effects on the civil rights of Sri Lankan citizens. [139050]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The state of emergency in Sri Lanka, declared on 5 November, was lifted on 7 November, before the official gazette notification had been issued, and before any action had been taken by the President under emergency powers. The civil rights of Sri Lankan citizens were not adversely affected by the state of emergency.

Thailand

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Thai authorities about Dr. Cynthia Maung's clinic in Mae Sot on the Thai-Burmese border. [140350]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what discussions he has held with the Thai authorities on delivery by non-governmental organisations of cross-border aid relief to internally displaced people in Burma; [140353]

(2) what recent representations he has made to the Thai authorities about access for Burmese refugees to refugee camps in Thailand. [140354]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Tibet

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to secure the release of the Tibetan religious leader, Tenzin Deleg Rinpoche, from prison in China. [140352]

Mr. Rammell: We have raised the case of Tenzin Deleg Rinpoche with the Chinese authorities on a number of occasions. At the latest round of the biannual UK-China Human Rights Dialogue held in Beijing on 10–11 November the Chinese again confirmed that he had appealed against his original sentence (death sentence with two year suspension) but that the original verdict had been upheld. We also raised our concerns about his welfare and medical treatment.

Treaty Ratification

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests the Government will make to the Crown prior to the introduction of a Bill relating to the ratification of a treaty consequent upon a final draft text of a constitution for the European Union; what requests were made to the Crown in respect of previous Bills necessary for ratification of treaties; and what replies were received. [140433]

Mr. MacShane: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

UN Arms Embargoes

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 16 September 2003, Official Report, column 681W, if he will (a) commission a report on the impact of traditional tribal demarcations on the effectiveness of UN arms embargoes; and if he will (b) discuss the matter with NGOs. [138610]

Mr. Rammell: The Government have no plans to commission a report on the impact of traditional tribal demarcations on the effectiveness of UN arms embargoes; and have no plans to discuss the matter with NGOs.

UN Sanctions

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 6 October 2003, Official Report, column 1118W, on UN sanctions, what progress the Government have made in considering whether or not to re-initiate proposals for an independent sanctions monitoring mechanism. [138611]

Mr. Rammell: The UK and France floated informally our proposal for a semi-permanent monitoring mechanism on sanctions in the context of discussions within a Working Group of the Security Council which met in 2000 and 2001 to consider various aspects of UN sanctions regimes. Unfortunately our proposal failed to generate sufficient support among other members of the Security Council. We will consider whether to revive the proposal in 2004, when we have informally canvassed the views of the new members of the Council.

Visas

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the visa fees were for (a) 2001, (b) 2002 and (c) up to August 2003. [139813]

Mr. Mullin: The fees charged by Visa Sections worldwide for entry clearance are detailed in the following table. The fees charged to visa applicants remained unchanged from 1997 until they were increased in July 2002. There have been no increases since. Both sets of fees are detailed.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the geographical validity of European Union visas will become a matter for qualified majority voting under the European constitution. [140278]

Mr. MacShane: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether European visas issued by the consulates of other member states will be valid for entry to the UK under the European constitution. [140264]

Mr. MacShane: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Working Holidays

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 29 October 2003, Official Report, column 277W, on working holidaymakers, if he will break down by country of origin the numbers of applications (a) received, (b) issued, (c) refused and (d) outstanding for visas for working holidays. [137815]

Mr. Mullin: I have placed in the Library of the House figures of the working holidaymaker visa applications received, issued and refused in the financial year 2002–03 by our entry clearance posts.

TREASURY

Civil Registration

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will make a statement on the reasons for ending face to face civil registration services; and what plans he has to retrain registrars for their new remote role; [140260]

(2) what procedures will be put in place to prevent fraud after the move to remote civil registration; [140261]

(3) what plans he has to compensate local authorities for any funding shortfall arising from the move to remote civil registration; [140262]

(4) what assessment has been made of the risk of competition between local authorities following a move to remote registration. [140263]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. David Drew, dated 20 November 2003:

As Registrar General for England and Wales, I have been asked to reply to your four recent questions on the move to remote civil registration. (140260, 140262, 140263, 140264)

In January 2002, the White Paper 'Civil Registration: Vital Change' was published which set out the Government's intention to reform the civil registration service. The White Paper offers the public a choice in how to register births and deaths in person (at any Register Office), by telephone or via the internet.

These proposals appear in more detail in the consultation document 'Civil Registration: Delivering Vital Change' which was published in July 2003. The document can be downloaded from the General Register Office website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/registration/whitepaper/default.asp

The document is the first stage in the use of the order-making powers of the Regulatory Reform Act 2001. This is being used to bring about the legislative changes that are needed to implement the White Paper reforms. The consultation period ended on 24 October. Currently the responses are being analysed.

It would be inappropriate at this stage to comment on the final shape of the proposals to be included in the Regulatory Reform Order. Issues such as funding, retraining and security are being fully considered during the passage of the civil registration regulatory reform order and, in the event of legislation change, prior to implementation.

Economic Activity (Airdrie and Shotts)

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the economic activity rate in the Airdrie and Shotts constituency was in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 1997; [140371]

(2) what the employment rate in the Airdrie and Shotts constituency was in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 1997; [140372]

(3) what the rate of (a) unemployment, (b) long-term unemployment and (c) youth unemployment in the Airdrie and Shotts constituency was in (i) 2002–03 and (ii) 1997; and how many individuals this represented in each case. [140373]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mrs Helen Liddell, dated 20 November 2003:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Questions about economic activity, employment and unemployment rates in Airdrie and Shotts constituency. I am replying in his absence. (140371, 140372, 140373)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles statistics of economic activity, employment and unemployment from the Labour Force survey (LFS) following the internationally standard International Labour Organisation definitions.

Table 1 gives estimates of economic activity and employment rates in the Airdrie and Shotts constituency for the twelve month periods ending February 1998 and February 2002. These estimates are from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) annual local area databases. Comparable information for the twelve month period ending February 2003 is not yet available. The LFS sample size is too small to give reliable estimates of unemployment in the Airdrie and Shotts constituency.

ONS also compiles statistics of those claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) for local areas including Parliamentary constituencies.

Table 2 gives, for the periods specified, the total number of JSA claimants, the number of those claiming JSA for over 12 months, and the number of claimants aged 18–24 in the Airdrie and Shotts constituency. Claimant count rates for local areas are expressed as proportions of the 2001 mid-year working-age population estimates which are based on the 2001 Census, following the withdrawal from National Statistics in January 2003 of the previous workplace based rates. Table 2 shows the rates, on this basis, for the Airdrie and Shotts Constituency.

Air Passenger Taxes

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, how much revenue was raised from air passenger taxes in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [140387]

John Healey: The information is not available in the format requested. Revenue figures for air passenger duty are collected for the UK as a whole and are not broken down by devolved region. Air passenger revenue duty receipts for the UK as a whole are published in table 1.20 of Financial Statistics published by the Office for National Statistics.

Household Incomes

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the average weekly income of households in each council tax band. [140006]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 20 November 2003:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking for the average weekly income of households in each council tax band. (140006)

Estimates in the following table are based on the analysis "The effects of taxes and benefits on household income 2001–02" produced by the Office for National Statistics and published on 21 October 2003 on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/taxesbenefits.

The analysis includes measures of income inequality for the United Kingdom as a whole based on data from the Expenditure and Food Survey (EPS), formerly the Family Expenditure Survey (FES). This is a sample survey covering about 7,500 households in the UK and sample sizes for each council tax band are only sufficient to give approximate estimates. The Family Resources Survey would have been an alternative source with a larger sample size, but the taxes and benefits analysis has been used for consistency with answers to other recent parliamentary questions.

The table shows the average weekly gross income received by households in Great Britain in houses in each council tax band. Council tax is not paid in Northern Ireland. The sample size is only sufficient to allow a breakdown to be given for households living in bands G and H combined. A small number of households in properties which did not have a separate council tax valuation have been excluded from the analysis. Gross income includes income from earnings, occupational pensions and investments and cash benefits such as state retirement pensions and income support. It does not take account of deductions for taxes.

Aviation Kerosene taxation

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the cost of not taxing aviation kerosene in financial year 2002–03. [140200]

John Healey: Aviation turbine fuel (AVTUR), is a heavy hydrocarbon oil used in virtually all aircraft on scheduled flights within the UK, and the majority of international commercial flights.

Although AVTUR is not currently taxed, the UK recognises that there is a case for taxing fuel used in international aviation and supports action through the International Civil Aviation Organisation to remove the current worldwide exemption.

Assuming no decrease in demand from a higher fuel price, levying duty on 2002–03 quantities of aviation turbine fuel would have raised the following amounts of revenue:

£ billion

Duty levied	Revenue raised
If the rebated kerosene duty rate were levied	0.4
If the ULSD duty rate were levied	5.8
If the heavy diesel duty rate were levied	6.6

Child Support Agency

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what re-examination of the Office of Government Commerce Gateway review process he has undertaken as a result of the implementation of the Child Support Agency's reform programme. [140039]

Mr. Boateng: There has been no re-examination of the OGC Gateway Review Process as a direct result of the implementation of the Child Support Agency's reform programme.

Child Trust Fund

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of families in Airdrie and Shotts constituency who will benefit from the Child Trust Fund. [140378]

Ruth Kelly: All children born since 1 September 2002 in families awarded Child Benefit will receive a Child Trust Fund (CTF). Based on census data for children under five living in the constituency of Airdrie and Shotts, about 900 children a year will benefit from the initial endowment. As an indication of the eventual position, 9,870 families were receiving Child Benefit for 16,585 children as at 30 November 2002, in the constituency of Airdrie and Shotts

The CTF is intended to encourage parents and children to develop the savings habit. It will ensure that every child, whatever their family background, will have access at the age of 18 when they begin their adult life, to a stock of assets which they can invest in their future.

It will also help children and their parents to understand the benefits of saving and investment and how to engage with financial institutions.

Customs and Excise

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the cost was of specialist asset recovery teams in Customs and Excise used for the recovery of assets from directors involved in fraudulent companies in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; how many staff were deployed in these teams in (i) 2001–02 and (ii) 2002–03; and what assets were realised by these teams in (A) 2001–02 and (B) 2002–03; [140183]

(2) how many staff were employed in Customs and Excise debt management units in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; and how many new staff were recruited in (i) 2001–02 and (ii) 2002–03; [140184]

(3) if he will set out the Customs and Excise National Standards time limits for handling recoverable debt cases; and what the outturn against target was of debt management units in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; [140185]

(4) how much debt was owed to Her Majesty's Customs and Excise on 31 March (a) in total and (b) broken down by type of debt; how much debt was owed as a percentage of the total amount of taxes and duties collected by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise; and what the change was in the number of unresolved debts between 31 March 2002 and 31 March 2003; [140269]

(5) what the value of new debt owed to Her Majesty's Customs and Excise notified to the debt management units in 2002–03 is; and how much of that new debt was represented by VAT missing trader fraud; [140270]

(6) how much missing trader fraud debt owed to Her Majesty's Customs and Excise was outstanding at the end of 2002–03. [140271]

John Healey: 20 staff were employed in Customs' asset recovery teams in 2001–02 and 25 in 2002–03. They secured £23.5 million in assets in 2001–02 and £17.8 million in 2002–03. It is not possible to identify the overall cost of operating these teams. 929 staff were employed in debt management in Customs in 2001–02 and 892 in 2002–03. This includes staff involved in security, insolvency, civil recovery and other debt management work outside the debt management units. There was turnover of staff within these figures, with individuals moving into and out of the function, but it is not possible to identify the number of new staff recruited in those years.

The National Standards for debt management did not include timescales for handling recoverable debt in either 2001–02 or 2002–03. Current standards require a positive outcome on recoverable debt within three months for first time and occasional defaulters, or six months for persistent defaulters recruited in those years.

Total debt owed to Customs at the end of the 2002–03 accounting period was £2,311 million. This was 1.5 per cent. of the total amount of taxes and duties collected by Customs, and included £1,159 million suspended debt and £1,152 million recoverable debt. The number of unresolved debts was not measured in 2001–02, but Customs had 344,983 cases on hand at the end of the 2002–03 accounting period.

During 2002–03 £4,974 million in new debt was advised to debt management units. Of this £824 million resulted from MTIC fraud, although some of this figure related to cases opened in previous years.

At the end of 2002–03 £546 million in missing trader fraud debt was still owed to Customs.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff were deployed by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise to tackle VAT missing trader fraud in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; what the cost of deploying such staff was in each case; and what other costs there were in pursuing the VAT missing trader fraud strategy in each case. [140272]

John Healey: The number of staff deployed to tackle VAT missing trader fraud can be found in "Tackling Indirect Tax Fraud" (November 2001), a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

The figure for 2002–03 will be published later this year.

Customs does not maintain information about the costs in the format requested and it could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 6 November 2003, Official Report, column. 800W, with regard to Customs, whether the prohibited firearm was (a) produced to Customs from (i) the person and (ii) baggage, (b) loaded with ammunition and (c) ready to fire; for how long Customs exercised their control over the firearm; and by what means it left the United Kingdom. [140446]

John Healey: The records still available show that the importation referred to in my earlier answer was correctly declared in accordance with established regulations and procedures, and that there were no irregularities.

Some of Customs' records relating to regulatory controls on importations of firearms at Farnborough in 1999 have been destroyed under Customs' obligations in relation to the Data Protection Act 1998 and the Public Records Acts, as they relate to legitimate movements and are no longer required for administrative purposes. Following further investigation of the remaining records, I have now been informed that the single importation referred to in my previous answer related to four firearms and a quantity of ammunition, rather than a single firearm, and I regret that inadvertently this was not made clear to the hon. Gentleman. These firearms were surrendered by one or more passengers on a flight which arrived at Farnborough in March 1999.

The additional information requested is no longer available, and Customs cannot say with certainty how the items were taken into control, how long the firearms were in Customs' control or how and when they were re-exported from the United Kingdom.

Financial Services Authority

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the membership of the Financial Services Authority Financial Capability Steering Group is. [139430]

Ruth Kelly: The membership of the Financial Services Authority Financial Capability Steering Group has been published in an FSA press notice issued on the 20 October 2003 and is as follows:

John Tiner, Chief Executive, Financial Services Authority (Chairman)

Luqman Arnold, Chief Executive, Abbey National plc

David Clementi, Chairman, Prudential plc

John Gummer, Chairman, Association of Independent Financial Advisers

David Marker, Chief Executive, Citizen's Advice

Deirdre Mutton, Chair, National Consumer Council

Digby Jones, Director General, Confederation of British Industry

Ruth Kelly, Financial Secretary to the Treasury; and Ron Sandler, chairman, Personal Finance Education Group

Media figure to be announced shortly.

Income Tax

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, to how many people the 10 pence tax rate has applied in each constituency since its introduction. [140425]

Dawn Primarolo: All income tax payers benefit from the 10 pence starting rate. It would be possible to provide a reliable breakdown by constituency only at disproportionate cost.

Inland Revenue

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who set the criteria for payment of performance-related pay to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue regarding the duties they have had with respect to Project ASPIRE and its antecedents in the period 1999–2000 to 2002–03. [140447]

Dawn Primarolo: Under the pay arrangements common to all members of the Senior Civil Service, the Commissioners of Inland Revenue individually agree their performance criteria with the Chairman. The Chairman agrees his performance criteria with the Permanent Secretaries Remuneration Committee.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what the total budget approved for the market-making exercise in support of Project ASPIRE was in each year from 2000–01 to 2002–03; and what the actual expenditure recorded against budget was in each case. [140448]

Dawn Primarolo: Expenditure on the market making exercise fell only in the 2001–02 and 2002–03 financial years. No separate budget was allocated to the Market-making exercise, which was funded as part of the general budget for the ASPIRE project.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, when Sir Nicholas Montagu KCB took the Chair of the Superintending Group overseeing Project ASPIRE; who Sir Nicholas's predecessors in that role had been since 1997; and when each took office. [140449]

Dawn Primarolo: The ASPIRE Project formally commenced on 31 October 2001. The first meeting of the ASPIRE Superintending Group was held on 5 February 2002. Initially, the Superintending Group was chaired by Tim Flesher who was, at that time, the Deputy Chairman of the Inland Revenue. When he moved to a new post in another Government Department, Sir Nicholas Montagu KCB replaced him. Sir Nicholas chaired his first meeting of the ASPIRE Superintending Group on June 2003.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what the authorised establishment for professional grades was in 2000–01 for Inland Revenue International Division, Business Tax Group broken down by (a) Deputy Director's Office, (b) Policy Team and (c) Advisory/Casework Team; what the corresponding actual manning by unit was on 31 March 2001; and how many (i) transfers in and (ii) transfers out were recorded by unit in 2000–01. [140450]

Dawn Primarolo: It would be inappropriate to disclose the information requested as it would facilitate the identification of individual members of staff of the Inland Revenue. Exemption 8 (a) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information applies in this case.

Iraq

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost of the war in Iraq to the Exchequer has been to date; and if he will make a statement on his current forecast of the likely total cost. [139823]

Mr. Boateng: So far MOD has drawn down £1 billion in last year's spring Supplementary Estimate and Parliament will be invited to make any further provision for 2003–04 in this year's winter and spring Supplementary Estimates.

The Chancellor announced in the Budget that £3 billion is set aside to cover the cost of operations in Iraq. It would be premature to anticipate the total costs of the military operation at this time.

Lyons Review

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what progress has been made with the Lyons Review; and if he will make a statement. [137536]

Mr. Boateng: Following publication of his interim report on 9 September, Sir Michael Lyons has been assessing relocation proposals submitted by Government Departments. Departments have identified the scope for relocating 20,000 posts, but further work is needed to develop the proposals. The Chancellor and Deputy Prime Minister have extended the review to allow Sir Michael time for further discussion with Departments. His final report will be published early next year.

More details are on the Lyons Review website at www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/lyonsreview

Mortgage Finance

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research he has commissioned on the effect on debt levels of the use of mortgage finance as a source of credit for purposes unrelated to home improvement. [140124]

Ruth Kelly: Box B8 in Annex B of the Budget 2003 discussed mortgage equity withdrawal.

NM Rothschild and Son Ltd.

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on services provided to his Department by NM Rothschild since 1997. [139959]

Mr. Boateng: Since 1997, HM Treasury has engaged NM Rothschild on two projects. The firm has supplied advice on the creation of Partnerships UK and their on-going business issues, and on the sale of a number of HM Treasury's residual shareholdings.

Parliamentary Questions

Richard Burden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will answer the questions tabled on 27 October 2003 by the hon. Member for Birmingham, Northfield, concerning tax credits, reference numbers 135413 to 135416. [139920]

Dawn Primarolo: I have already done so.

Petrol Tax

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of petrol tax rises on volunteers who claim petrol expenses. [139992]

John Healey: Volunteers who receive motoring expenses are liable to tax only if the amounts received exceed actual expenditure and so they make a profit. Drivers for organised volunteer car schemes who are paid a mileage allowance may choose to calculate any profit by using tax free mileage allowances published by the Inland Revenue. These allowances are intended as a fair estimate of the costs of providing a car, including the costs of fuel.

Postal Service (VAT)

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 12 June 2003, Official Report, column 984W, on postal service (VAT), whether his policy on VAT on stamps has changed; and if he will make a statement. [140179]

John Healey: The Government remain opposed to VAT on stamps, and has made this clear in negotiations on the European Commission's proposal to amend the provisions of the Sixth VAT Directive concerning the VAT arrangements applicable to postal services.

Premature Deaths (Wales)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many premature deaths there were in each local authority area in Wales in each of the past 20 years. [140440]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated 20 November 2003:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question concerning how many premature deaths there were in each local authority area in Wales in each of the past 20 years. I am replying in his absence. (140440)

ONS does not have a standard definition of premature deaths. Figures provided in the tables below show total numbers of deaths under age 65 and under age 75. Numbers are provided from 1990, the earliest year for which they can be readily allocated to consistent current unitary authority boundaries.

Seasonal Agricultural Workers

Ian Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the estimated (a) national insurance contributions and (b) tax revenues would be of the 50,000 seasonal agricultural workers recommended by the Curry Report over their period of employment. [140190]

Dawn Primarolo: People working under the Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme are entitled to earn up to the single personal allowance tax free. Most are students engaged during their vacation periods and this is sufficient to remove them from any UK tax liability. SAWS students are not EU nationals and the majority are engaged in agricultural or similar courses in their home countries. This means there is no National Insurance liability for the first 52 weeks of their stay in the UK. It is therefore unlikely that there would be any additional tax or NICs revenue arising from proposals to increase the number of SAWS students.

Tax Credits

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the availability to the public of the Code of Practice 26 leaflet concerning what to do in the case of overpayments of tax credits. [140136]

Dawn Primarolo: The code can be found on the Inland Revenue website (www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/taxcredits).

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have received a tax credit overpayment of more than (a) £1,000 and (b) £5,000; what plans there are for these sums to be repaid; and over what timescale. [140243]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) on 12 November 2003, Official Report, column 394W.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the advice that has been given to those people who have received a tax credit overpayment of over £5,000; and what alternative methods of repayment have been suggested to them. [140244]

Dawn Primarolo: Advice on the recovery of overpayments of tax credit is provided by the Inland Revenue's code of practice 26 "What happens if we have paid you too much tax credit?", which is on their internet site www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/taxcredits. A copy of the code has also been placed in the House Library.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, how many people benefited from the working family tax credit in each parliamentary constituency in the United Kingdom, listed in descending order. [140390]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Tyne Bridge (Mr. Clelland) on 13 January 2003, Official Report, column 412W.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, how many people are in receipt of the disabled person's tax credit in Airdrie and Shotts constituency. [140379]

Dawn Primarolo: Disabled Person's Tax Credit was replaced by Working Tax Credit in April 2003.

The number of families who received Working Families' or Disabled Person's Tax Credit in each local authority appears in "Working Families' and Disabled Person's Tax Credit Statistics. Geographical analyses".

The number of families who receive the new tax credits appear in "Child and Working Tax Credit Statistics—Geographical Analyses" and analyses of the disabled elements appear in "Child and Working Tax Credit Quarterly Statistics".

All three publications are available on the Inland Revenue website at http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/menu.htm.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what steps are being taken to increase the take up of child tax credit in Airdrie and Shotts constituency. [140380]

Dawn Primarolo: There are now 5.9 million families benefiting from the Child and Working Tax Credits meaning that, after just seven months, we have reached 98 per cent. of those families we expected to reach over a whole year. National Statistics show that, as at 11 July, there were 5,800 families in Airdrie and Shotts receiving Child or Working Tax Credit, including 5,700 families with children, containing 9,800 children.

A high-profile publicity campaign has been running since September 2002 to alert people to their entitlement to Child Tax Credit (and Working Tax Credit) and to encourage them to claim.

The campaign has so far included national television advertising, local radio advertising across the UK, adverts in the national press as well as on-line publicity and the use of direct mail.

Teenage Pregnancies

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many teenage pregnancies there were in each constituency in each of the past 20 years. [140426]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated 20 November 2003–11–21:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many teenage pregnancies there were in each constituency in each of the past 20 years. I am replying in his absence. (140426)

Figures are not available prior to 1988. Figures since that date would only be available at a disproportionate cost. Figures for ward, local authority and health authority areas are produced annually.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many births to girls conceiving under the age of 16 years there were in each local authority area in Wales in each of the past 20 years. [140435]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated 20 November 2003

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many births to girls conceiving under the age of 16 there were in each local authority in Wales in each of the past 20 years. I am replying in his absence. (140435) Prior to 1987, the method used for calculating mother's age at conception was not comparable to that used in later years.

Figures shown in the attached table are for 1987 to 2001, the latest year available.

Unemployment (Wales)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many households without work for two years or more there were in each local authority area in Wales in each of the past 20 years; [140439]

(2) how many children were living in workless households in each local authority area in Wales in each of the past 10 years. [140444]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated 20 November 2003

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent questions about (i) households that have been without work for 2 years or more and (ii) children living in workless households. I am replying in his absence. (91600)

The tables overleaf give the available information from the Labour Force Survey (LFS). These estimates are for the three-month period ending May of each year from 1999 to 2003. Comparable information is not available at local authority level for earlier years. The LFS sample size is too small to give reliable estimates of workless households for some local authorities in Wales.

VAT (Tourism)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, (1) how much VAT revenue was raised from tourism in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; [140386]

(2) how much income was raised from tourism in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [140388]

John Healey: The information requested is not available.

Work-related Stress

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases of work-related stress have been reported in his Department in each of the last three years; how much compensation has been paid to employees; how many work days have been lost due to work-related stress, and at what cost; what procedures have been put in place to reduce work-related stress, and at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [136843]

Ruth Kelly: The number of cases of work-related stress is not held by the Chancellor's Departments, and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

The amount of compensation paid due to work-related stress in each of the last three years is however held, and is as follows:

	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Inland Revenue	6,531	82,836	51,000
Customs and Excise	1,500	Nil	60,000
Treasury	Nil	Nil	Nil

The Chancellor's Departments have taken a range of preventative and protective measures against work-related stress, including addressing long working hours, adopting flexible and family friendly policies, (such as job sharing and home-working), and phased return to work to aid the rehabilitation of staff returning from long-term sick leave. Each Department has an in house Staff Welfare Service which operates independently of the management chain.

The Chancellor's Departments are mindful of the obligations under Health and Safety at Work legislation to ensure that staff are not exposed to unacceptable risks in the workplace. Also, the Chancellor's Departments remain committed to reducing the number of working days lost generally to work-related injuries and illnesses in support of the Government's Revitalising Health and Safety initiative and its long-term occupational health strategy Securing Health Together.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Benefit

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many families are in receipt of child benefit in the Airdrie and Shotts constituency; and how many children that includes. [140377]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

9,870 families were receiving child benefit for 16,585 children as at 30 November 2002 in the Airdrie and Shotts constituency.

Housing Benefit Costs

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the (a) gross and (b) net housing benefit costs were (i) pre and (ii) post whole stock transfer for those local authorities which have carried out large scale voluntary transfers of all their council stock in each year since 1995. [139798]

Mr. Pond: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Benefits Application Forms

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action he is taking to ensure that only the latest edition of benefit application forms is available for downloading and completion electronically. [140020]

Mr. Pond: Benefit application forms are not available for downloading and completion electronically. A review of Department for Work and Pensions PDF forms that can be completed on a computer, but not returned electronically, is underway.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the annual cost to his Department of (a) income support fraud and (b) Jobseeker's Allowance fraud in the last three years. [138390]

Mr. Pond: Our estimates of levels of fraud and error in Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance are contained in the following reports which are available in the Library.

Year ending March 2000—National Statistics report: The Results of the Area Benefit Review and Quality Support Team from April 1999 to March 2000, Table 4.1 National Levels of Fraud and Customer Error in IS, Table 5.1 National levels of Fraud and Customer Error in JSA.

Year ending March 2001—National Statistics report: The results of the Area Benefit Review and Quality Support Team from April 2000 to March 2001, Table 2.1 National levels of Fraud, Customer Error and Official Error in IS, Table 2.2 National levels of Fraud, Customer Error and Official Error in JSA.

Year ending March 2002—National Statistics report: Fraud and Error in Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance from April 2001 to March 2002, Table 2.1 National Results Overpayments.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what measures his Department takes to ensure that benefit claimants who enquire about using a bank account to receive their benefits are informed of all available options, including the use of Post Office card accounts; [140099]

(2) what assessment he has made of (a) the tone and content of his Department's literature and (b) the impartiality of its advice on the relative merits of (i) bank accounts and (ii) Post Office card accounts as a means to receive benefit payments. [140094]

Mr. Pond: Already 87 per cent of all customers have access to a bank account that can receive Direct Payment. All staff, including front line, Call Centre and Information-line staff, have been provided with information on all of the account options available to the customer. It will be up to the customers themselves to decide which type of account they wish to have their money paid into. The role of DWP staff is to provide factual information in response to enquiries made.

The Department's information campaign, to support the move to Direct Payment, provides customers with factual information on the banking options available to them, including information on the Post Office card account.

This information campaign has been produced in consultation with the Post Office and a range of other stakeholders.

Customer information material is tested on groups of customers before it is issued. This helps to ensure that customers are supplied with all the information they need to choose the account option that is right for them and that they can understand that information.

The Department will continue to monitor and evaluate the effectiveness of its customer information material and will make further changes if necessary.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the amount of unclaimed (a) income support broken down by (i) pensioners and (ii) non-pensioners, (b) housing benefit broken down by (i) local authority and (ii) private tenants, (c) council tax benefit broken down by (i) local authority tenants, (ii) private tenants and (iii) owner occupiers, (d) family credit broken down by (i) couples and (ii) single parents, (e) disability living allowance and (f) attendance allowance in each Welsh constituency in each of the past 10 years; and if he will estimate the total amount of unclaimed benefit broken down by (A) local authority and (B) constituency in Wales in each year. [140432]

Mr. Pond: The information requested is not available.

National estimates of unclaimed amounts of Income Support, Housing Benefit, Council Tax Benefit, income-based Jobseeker's Allowance and Family Credit for different population groups are presented in the DWP publication series entitled "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-up". Copies of the publication can be found in the Library.

Call Centres (Outsourcing)

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether his Department plans to outsource call centre work to premises outside the United Kingdom. [132101]

Mr. Browne: The Department has no plans to outsource to countries abroad work performed by DWP staff in call centres.

Child Support Agency

Diana Organ: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how long an individual in Gloucestershire will have to wait for reassessment by the Child Support Agency as a result of job loss following the introduction of the new system of calculation. [134210]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mike Isaacs to Diana Organ, dated 20 November 2003:

In replying to your recent Parliamentary question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked how long an individual in Gloucestershire would have to wait for re-assessment by the Agency following the introduction of the new system of maintenance calculation.

The Agency is unable to break down clearance times separately for the Gloucester area.

If the client has been assessed under the old child support scheme they will be re-assessed under that scheme. They will only be re-assessed under the new scheme when the Government decides that it is working sufficiently well to move the existing caseload to it.

If the client was assessed under the new scheme (i.e. since 3rd March 2003) they will be re-assessed under the new scheme. While the Agency aims to clear those re-assessments as quickly as possible, such re-assessments have been relatively few with the result that information on clearance times is not yet available.

Child Trust Funds

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether child trust funds will affect eligibility for Jobseeker's Allowance. [140381]

Mr. Pond: We are currently considering the precise impact on benefits; however, for most capital held in trust for children, money is disregarded when considering parents' eligibility for benefits.

Correspondence

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library copies of his Department's correspondence since November 2001 with the Chief Rent Officer for London. [139110]

Maria Eagle: There is no post of Chief Rent Officer for London. The Rent Service, which is an executive agency of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, has an Area Manager for London; a post that was created in April 2002, following an internal reorganisation of the Rent Service. The Department has not corresponded directly with the Rent Service's Area Manager for London.

CSA

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) in how many cases since 1 January the Child Support Agency has incorrectly cancelled existing deductions from earnings orders; and if he will make a statement; [135211]

(2) in (a) how many and (b) what percentage of cases in the last 12 months a maintenance enquiry form to the non-resident parent was not issued within (i) one month, (ii) two months and (iii) three months of an application being made to the Child Support Agency by the parent with care. [135212]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 20 November 2003

In replying to your recent Parliamentary questions about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As heis currently on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked in how many cases since 1st January the Child Support Agency has incorrectly cancelled existing deductions from earnings orders.

You also asked in how many and what percentage of cases in the last 12 months a maintenance enquiry form to the non-resident parent was not issued within (a) one month, (b) two months and (c) three months of an application being made to the Child Support Agency by the parent with care.

I am afraid that the information, which you requested, is not available. There has been no requirement to collect it under the old Child Support scheme and computer system.

As you are aware the new Child Support scheme and computer system were introduced for new applications on 3rd March this year. It is our intention to collect information of the type, which you have requested, and we are working with EDS, the new system providers, to develop the functionality we need to do this.

It is worth pointing out that under the new scheme we are conducting as much of our work as possible by telephone, directly with both parents. Consequently, most maintenance enquiry forms are completed by our staff through telephone interviews with the non-resident parent. Only where we are unable to trace a telephone number for the non-resident parent do we issue a clerical form for his/her completion.

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whether, in determining the maintenance liability of self-employed parents, the Child Support Agency is obliged to take into account reductions in taxable income arising from capital depreciation and other allowances; [136774]

(2) whether the Child Support Agency is required to use the level of taxable income declared to the Inland Revenue as the basis for determining the maintenance liability of a self-employed parent. [136775]

Mr. Pond: No. The Child Support Agency is not obliged to take into account capital depreciation and other allowances or to use the level of taxable income declared to the Inland Revenue in establishing the earnings of self-employed parents. Regulations allow the use of information submitted to or provided by the Inland Revenue or of information relating to the parent's business expenses.

Departures and variations may be available in cases where the calculation of child support liability does not produce a fair rate.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost was to his Department for (a) ministerial cars and drivers, (b) taxis, (c) train travel, (d) the use of helicopters, (e) airline tickets and (f) chartered aeroplanes in each year since 1997. [123087]

Maria Eagle: For information on ministerial cars and drivers I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Cabinet Office (Mr. Alexander) on 13 November 2003, Official Report, columns 397–98W.

The amount spent for official use of taxis could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The amount spent for official use of UK rail travel is[1] as follows:

1997–98	Information not available
1998–99	Information not available
1999–2000	7,442,100
2000–01	6,606,657
2001–02	7,621,545
2002–03	11,919,783

Note:
There has been no use of helicopters, at Departmental expense, since 1997.

The figures for air travel (UK and Overseas)[1] are as follows:

1997–98	Information not available
1998–99	Information not available
1999–2000	2,860,718
2000–01	2,879,011
2001–02	3,550,538
2002–03	5,306,126

Note:
There has been no use of chartered flights, at Departmental expense, since 1997.

[1] Figures relate to the former Department of Social Security and the Department for Work and Pensions from 2001.

Since 1999, the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. Copies of the lists covering the period 2 May 1997 to 31 March 2003 are available in the Library.

All official travel in the Department is undertaken in accordance with the rules contained in the Cabinet Office Management Code. All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the 'Ministerial Code' and 'Travel by Ministers'—copies of which are available in the Library.

Departmental Energy Use

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much (a) electricity and (b) other energy his Department has used in each year since 1997 (i) in total and (ii) per square metre; what the projected use is for each of the following years for which forecasts are made; what plans he has to reduce usage; and if he will make a statement. [135060]

Mr. Pond: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary at the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, Mr. Ben Bradshaw on 3 November 2003, Official Report Vol 412, Cols. 404w-408w. The Department for Work and Pensions supports and actively contributes to the UK Strategy For Sustainable Development and the Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate.

A key element to the Department's overall strategy for Sustainable Development is effective energy management. A cross-Government target is being developed to achieve an ongoing reduction in carbon equivalent emissions from buildings against 1999–2000 levels, and DWP will contribute to this. This will be achieved by continuing to improve energy efficiency throughout the estate and by implementingspend to save investment schemes where viable. An ongoing strategy to raise staff awareness will also continue aimed at promoting good housekeeping and eliminating the wasteful use of energy in the workplace.

Energy performance is monitored against the Government's 'good practice' benchmarks and remedial action taken in buildings where excessive energy use is identified.

Departmental Filestores

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when (a) he, (b) a minister in his Department and (c) the Permanent Secretary at the Department last visited a departmental filestore (i) in the North West and (ii) elsewhere; and if he will make a statement. [131207]

Maria Eagle: The Department operates from over 1,800 offices and a significant number of these have some file storage facility, many of these will have been visited by a Minister or the Permanent Secretary of this Department. However, we have no record of any Minister or Permanent Secretary visiting our sites used solely for the purpose of file storage.

Disabled Access

Joyce Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what information he has collated on variations in the provision of ramps for the disabled between local authorities. [139894]

Keith Hill: I have been asked to reply.

The disabled facilities grant programme helps to fund a wide range of housing adaptations, including facilitating access to and from the property. This is a mandatory grant available to eligible applicants in order to help them to continue to live independently in their own homes, funded by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and administered through local authorities.

Some councils also provide ramps under Community Care legislation.

The Government does not collect information on numbers, or the nature of ramps provided by local authorities under these programmes.

Disabled People (Discrimination)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to give disabled people the same legislative protection from discrimination as those facing sex and race discrimination. [138376]

Maria Eagle: We have been working to ensure that the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (DDA) provides comprehensive civil rights for disabled people. Most recently, the Disability Discrimination Act (Amendment) Regulations 2003 and the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (Pensions) Regulations 2003, which come into force in October 2004, have improved protection for disabled people in the field of employment and vocational training. Later this year, we will publish a draft Disability Bill which will include further measures to extend disabled people's civil rights. However, it is inappropriate to attempt exact comparisons between the DDA and the Race Relations and Sex Discrimination Acts, not least because the DDA includes the unique concept of reasonable adjustments.

Exceptions Service

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how the Exceptions Service will operate in respect of people in debt whose benefits are being used to pay off debts to their bank under the right of set-off. [139151]

Mr. Pond: There are a wide range of accounts available which are free to operate and do not offer overdraft facilities. Account providers make their customers aware of the features of individual accounts and leaflets provided to benefits customers and pensioners also set out which types of accounts offer overdraft facilities.

Detailed arrangements for the exceptions method of payment are not finalised yet, but it is anticipated that it will be a cheque-based solution. The small number of customers who cannot operate an account will be able to pay their benefit or pension into an account of their choice, or access their cash at Post Office branches.

Health and Safety

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of Health and Safety inspectors who will be employed in each of the next three financial years. [135786]

Mr. Browne: Estimates of the number of Health and Safety inspectors who will be employed in each of the next three financial years have not yet been made.

The Health and Safety Commission (HSC) is now consulting on a new strategy for the years 2004—2010. The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) is carrying out pilot studies in new ways of working to free up resource which can be used to deliver its mission to protect peoples1 health and safety by ensuring risks to health and safety from the changing workplace are properly controlled. Responses to the draft strategy and the results of the pilot studies will be taken into account when deciding on the appropriate mix and number of staff (including inspectors) within HSE.

While regulation and enforcing compliance with the law remain vital elements of HSE's work, they are not the only means of achieving health and safety improvements. HSE plans to put more effort into educating, influencing and working in partnership with others (at all levels) who can help achieve further improvement in health and safety performance.

Housing Benefit

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on housing benefit for residents of (a) houses in multiple occupation, (b) the rest of the private rented sector, (c) council housing and (d) other social housing in the last year for which figures are available; and what the average cost per person was in each case. [140362]

Mr. Pond: The available information is in the tables.

Identity Cards

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the use of ID cards to reduce benefit fraud. [134932]

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimates he has made of the savings that his Department will gain through the introduction of a compulsory identity card. [138969]

Mr. Pond: I refer the hon. Members to the oral answer given to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) on 17 November 2003, Official Report, column 469.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement concerning JobCentre Plus' Vision for London plan, with reference to (a) the number of (i) permanent and (ii) temporary posts, that will be moved out of London, (b) the timescale for the moves, (c) the expected impact on services for JobCentre Plus clients (i) in general and (ii) those from minority ethnic communities without English as a first language, (d) the extent to which those staff providing services for London JobCentre Plus clients from out of London will be expected to have a related knowledge of the jobs market (A) in the different parts of London geographically and (B) in the different parts of London's economy and (e) the impact of the move on the likely numbers of JobCentre Plus staff from minority ethnic backgrounds. [136831]

Mr. Browne: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. Andrew Dismore, dated 20 November 2003:

As Jobcentre Plus is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the Jobcentre Plus Vision for London and it's impact on our customers and staff. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

It may be helpful if I explain that like the rest of my Agency, London region has embarked on a process of incremental change to deliver modern, effective and responsive services to our customers. Our priority is to provide the best possible service to our customers. The Jobcentre Plus London Vision is a generic title that encompasses a range of Department of Work and Pensions, National Jobcentre Plus and Regional change initiatives to achieve this aim. In general terms and by 2006, I aim to have in place a network of new modernised offices and support services which:

enhance access and provide improved service to a much larger customer base; ensure better value for money through delivery of more efficient processes, and provide more satisfying and rewarding jobs for staff in more pleasant and professional working environments.

Part of the change programme which is included in the London Vision, includes initiatives that, over time, will offer wider choice to our customers about how they access support and services. I envisage, for example, that by 2006 many more of those who can will be able to access appropriate services remotely, via Jobseeker Direct, Employer Direct and our network of First Contact Centres for new claims to benefit. To provide the best possible service to our customers within our finite resource a number of our non customer facing roles will be delivered outside of London. The extent and numbers of jobs that will be relocated will be clearer in the new year, once some key decisions are taken about our backroom benefit processing roles. I would however stress that we plan to retain local capacity to provide face-to-face service for customers who cannot take advantage of other means of accessing the help and support they need.

You may be aware of the Department of Work and Pensions Departmental Plans. These plans show that the Department will see a reduction in the number of staff it employs from 130,000 in 2002 to 112,000 in 2006 as part of the Spending Review undertaken in 2002. Jobcentre Plus in London (including existing London region staff based in Scotland and North West England) will see a reduction in the level of full time staff providing services to London Customers from 12,318 in April 2002 to 10,769 in March 2006 according to our latest planning assumptions. Underlying these headline numbers is the ongoing impact of London's dynamic labour market. The region is currently looking to recruit up to 700 new staff into London this year and has a proven track record of recruiting ethnic minorities. I am confident further recruitment will be needed next year.

The introduction of the new Jobcentre Plus services will change the sorts of jobs available to staff in London. By 2006, more of my staff in London and other regions, will be providing face-to-face services to those customers who most need this form of help. It is true that over time the type and location of work will change, but I am confident that there will be jobs for everyone currently working in London.

I know that the London Field Director, Sheelagh Keyse, is keen to assess all aspects of her change programme. Consultation on individual initiatives takes place in the normal progress of business. In addition, and in order to assess the overall strategy, Sheelagh has commissioned a review of the entire London Change Programme led by DWP consultants. This review is due to report in December and further information will be available in January 2004, and I would like to offer you the opportunity to meet with Alan Brown who will be taking over as the Field Director for London to discuss the impact of changes on our London workforce.

I hope this is helpful.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of unemployed people of working age in receipt of an occupational pension not qualifying for jobseeker's allowance. [140343]

Mr. Pond: The information requested is not available. However, as at May 2003 there were 11,100 people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance who were not receiving any benefit and who had an income from an occupational or personal pension.

Loans

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 18 September 2003, Official Report, column 910W, on loans for those on low incomes, what the average time taken is for (a) applications, (b) decisions and (c) first payments to arrive for crisis loans. [135107]

Mr. Pond: Crisis loans are available to anyone, whether or not they are receiving a benefit, who is facing an emergency or disaster which is threatening their health or safety or that of a member of their family, and who has either no resources or insufficient resources to meet the need.

During 2002–03, 96.7 per cent. of crisis loans applications were processed and paid on the day they were made. Crisis loans are usually paid immediately by girocheque in a Jobcentre Plus or Social Security office. As most payments are for essential items, those made by post are sent first class.

New Deal

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 5 November 2003, Official Report, column 673W, on the New Deal, how many New Deal personal advisers there were in each year since 1997. [138392]

Mr. Browne: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. Nick Gibb, dated 20 November 2003:

As Jobcentre Plus is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how many New Deal Personal Advisers there were in each year since 1997. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Regrettably, the information you have requested is not available. It is the policy within Jobcentre Plus and other parts of the Department for Work and Pensions to collect staffing information by grade/location and not job role.

Non-resident Parents

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether non-resident parents are required to pay child support when paternity is in dispute; and whether the non-resident parent pays the cost of testing to establish paternity, in the first instance. [135993]

Mr. Pond: If parentage is disputed at the outset, in certain circumstances the Child Support Agency can make a presumption of parentage and proceed to enforce a maintenance calculation. Parentage can be presumed where, for example, the alleged father was married to the mother at the time of the child's conception or birth, or where an alleged parent refuses to take a DNA test.

If parentage is questioned after a calculation has been made, the calculation will remain in force. If the alleged non-resident parent turns out not to be the parent of the child the agency makes a full refund of maintenance.

The agency can offer access to DNA tests at a discounted rate. The alleged non-resident parent pays for the test but if they are found not to be the parent of the child the fee is refunded. Where the alleged non-resident parent is unable or unwilling to pay for the test the agency may, in some cases, pay for it in advance. However if the test is positive, the full non-discounted fee will be charged.

Parliamentary Questions

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will answer the questions tabled on 28 October by the hon. Member for Birmingham, Northfield, concerning the operation of the Social Fund, reference numbers 135577 to 135580, 135582, 135583 and 135616 to 135620. [139919]

Mr. Pond: I have given answers today.

Paternity Pay

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Airdrie and Shotts have benefited from statutory paternity pay since its introduction. [140375]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I have been asked to reply.

Statutory paternity pay is a new entitlement for fathers whose babies were born or expected on or after 6 April 2003. There are no take up figures available yet.

Pension Credit

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are aged 60 and over in each parliamentary constituency in England, according to 2001 Census data; and how many are claiming Pension Credit. [139811]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the number of people aged 60 and over from the 2001 Census, and the number of pensioner households and individuals receiving Pension Credit as at 17 October, 2003 by English parliamentary constituencies has been placed in the Library.

Malcolm Wicks: As at 17 October, 2003 the number of pensioner households receiving Pension Credit in Perth constituency was 2,530.

Malcolm Wicks: As at 17 October, 2003 the number of pensioner households receiving Pension Credit in Airdrie and Shotts constituency was 3,665.

1.97 million households in Great Britain (around 2.3 million individuals) are already receiving Pension Credit with 1.2 million households, (around 1.4 million individuals receiving more money than they did before. The average award is £47.10 per week.

Pension Schemes

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will introduce a legal requirement on employers to fund pension schemes that would ensure assets do not fall below the discontinuance funding ratio. [137917]

Malcolm Wicks: Government proposals for regulating occupational pension schemes are set out in the documents "Simplifying the taxation of pensions: increasing choice and flexibility for all" (published in December 2002) and "Working and Saving for Retirement: Action on Occupational Pensions" (published in June 2003). Where a scheme with a solvent sponsoring employer is winding-up the Government believe that the employer should ensure the scheme has sufficient funds, as assessed on a discontinuance basis, to secure scheme members' expected benefits in full. We therefore propose to introduce a requirement to ensure that, in this situation, the debt on the sponsoring employer will be calculated on a full buy-out basis.

More generally, we propose to replace the minimum funding requirement (MFR) for defined benefit schemes with scheme specific funding requirements. Under our proposals it will be the responsibility of each scheme's trustees, working with the sponsoring employer and the scheme actuary, to develop a funding strategy aimed at ensuring that the scheme is able to meet its long-term pension commitments. Where a scheme is not winding-up we do not believe it would be appropriate to introduce a requirement for its funding to meet any prescribed minimum level as assessed on a discontinuance, or any other, basis.

Improving member protection is a Government priority, which is why we are introducing the new Pension Protection Fund. It will enhance protection for pension scheme members and improve confidence in pension provision in general, by ensuring that members of defined benefit schemes will still receive a meaningful retirement income if their sponsoring employer goes bust and the scheme is under funded.

Printer Cartridges

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment the Health and Safety Executive has made of the impact on employees health of refilling and re-using printer cartridges. [139215]

Mr. Browne: The toner used as part of the printing process is an extremely fine powder which in itself is not classed as a substance hazardous to health. However, any dust in substantial concentration may be classed as hazardous as it may cause respiratory tract irritation. In these circumstances the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations (COSHH) place a duty on users of substances hazardous to health to carry out a risk assessment of their activity and to put in place appropriate control measures based on that assessment. Suppliers of substances for use at work also have a duty under the Chemicals (Hazard information and Packaging for Supply) Regulations (CHIP) to provide a safety data sheet with information to help users work with the substances safely.

Public Employees (Essex)

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many part-time workers were employed by Jobcentre Plus in Essex on 1 September. [139517]

Mr. Browne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 28 October 2003, Official Report, column 209W.

Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what statutory investigatory powers the Department has; which ones will be superseded by use of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000; and what plans he has for removing these legacy powers. [136117]

Mr. Pond: Use of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 will not supersede the statutory powers available to the Department. There are no plans to remove existing statutory powers from departmental or local authority authorised officers.

Social Fund

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what proportion of applications for assistance from the Social Fund in the last financial year were unsuccessful, broken down by departmental sub-region; [135577]

(2) what proportion of applications for assistance under the Social Fund from Birmingham, Northfield were unsuccessful in the last financial year. [135578]

Mr. Pond: The available information is in the table.

Proportion of unsuccessful initial applications
April 2002 to March 2003

Percentage

	Community care grants	Budgeting loans	Crisis loans
Great Britain	58.3	26.3	21.9
Birmingham, Northfield—
April 2002 to August 2003	55.1	25.0	9.1
All Birmingham Districts	56.2	25.3	15.8

Notes:

1. An application is defined as unsuccessful if no award is made.
2. Figures refer to initial decisions only.
3. Social Fund data are held by Departmental District. It will not be available by Government Office Region until the migration of all work to Jobcentre Plus Districts is completed.
4. In September 2002 the Birmingham Northfield Social fund district amalgamated with other districts to become part of the Jobcentre Plus Birmingham and Solihull District.
5. The area covered by the Birmingham, Northfield site is not co-terminus with the Birmingham, Northfield parliamentary constituency.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the average timescale was for reviews of unsuccessful applications for assistance under the Social Fund to be considered and determined by the Independent Review Service in the last financial year broken down by departmental sub-region; [135579]

(2) what the average timescale was for reviews of unsuccessful applications from Birmingham, Northfield for assistance under the Social Fund to be considered and determined by the Independent Review Service in the last financial year. [135580]

Mr. Pond: The operational performance of the Independent Review Service (IRS), an independent statutory body, is a matter for the Social Fund Commissioner who informs me that:

In the financial year 2002–03, the national average timescales for reviews dealt with by the IRS were 11.1 days for community care grants; 10.23 days for crisis loans for items; 7.64 days for budgeting loans; and 5.12 hours for urgent crisis loans, such as those for living expenses (express cases), respectively.

In the financial year 2002–03, the average timescales for reviews dealt with by the IRS from Birmingham, Northfield were 12.32 days for community care grants; 10 days for crisis loans for items; 7.25 days for budgeting loans; and 1.88 hours for urgent crisis loans, such as those for living expenses (express cases), respectively.

Tables setting out this information, which also give the average timescales by Government Office Region and Jobcentre Plus District have been placed in the Library.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what proportion of applications for assistance under the Social Fund from Birmingham, Northfield were unsuccessful at independent review in financial year 2002–03; [135582]

(2) what proportion of applications for assistance under the Social Fund were unsuccessful at independent review in financial year 2002–03, broken down by departmental sub-region. [135583]

Mr. Pond: The operational performance of the Independent Review Service (IRS), an independent statutory body, is a matter for the Social Fund Commissioner who informs me that:

In the financial year 2002–03, the proportion of applications for assistance under the Social Fund from Birmingham Northfield which were unsuccessful at independent review were 32.1 per cent. for community care grants; 33.3 per cent. for crisis loans for items; 100 per cent. for budgeting loans; and 100 per cent. urgent crisis loans, such as those for living expenses (express cases), respectively.

In the financial year 2002–03, nationally the proportion of applications for assistance under the Social Fund which were unsuccessful at independent review were 31.4 per cent. for community care grants; 46.7 per cent. for crisis loans for items; 89.2 per cent. for budgeting loans; and 68.3 per cent. urgent crisis loans, such as those for living expenses (express cases), respectively.

Tables setting out the information, which also give the proportions which were unsuccessful at independent review by Government Office Region and Jobcentre Plus District, have been placed in the Library.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the average time periods achieved were in the last 12 months for which figures are available for (a) reaching decisions on applications from residents of Birmingham, Northfield for assistance from the Social Fund and (b) passing these decisions to applicants; [135616]

(2) what the average time period was in the last 12 months for which figures are available for reaching decisions on applications for assistance from the Social Fund, broken down by departmental sub-region; [135618]

(3) what the target time periods were in the last 12 months for which figures are available for (a) reaching decisions on applications for assistance from the Social Fund and (b) passing these decisions to applicants, broken down by departmental sub-region. [135620]

Mr. Pond: For the last 12 months the Jobcentre Plus Key Management Indicator for clearing applications for Social Fund Community Care Grants has been an average of nine working days. As an additional aid to monitoring performance, Jobcentre Plus aim to clear applications for Budgeting Loans within an average of eight working days and 95 per cent. of all Crisis Loan applications on the day of receipt. All decision letters, irrespective of the outcome of the decision, are sent by first class mail.

The available information is in the table.

Average clearance times for applications in days for the 12 months to September 2003

	Great Britain	Birmingham, Northfield
Community Care Grants	8.1	6.8
Budgeting Loans	2.6	4.6
Crisis Loans	1.2	1.1

Notes:

1. Social Fund data is not at present available by Government Office Region, but will be from the completion of the migration of work to Jobcentre Plus Districts.

2. For grants, the clearance time is defined as the time from receipt of the application to making the decision.

3. For loans, the clearance time is defined as the time from receipt of the application to making the decision if an offer is not made or not responded to; if an offer is made, the clearance time is the time from receipt of the application to the decision to make an offer plus the time from the receipt of the accepted offer to the recording of that acceptance.

4. When a Crisis Loan application is received and the offer of acceptance is recorded on the same day that counts as a clearance time of one day.

5. Clearance times are measured in whole working days, but average clearance times have been given to one decimal place.

6. In September 2002 the Birmingham Northfield Social Fund district amalgamated with other districts to become part of the Jobcentre Plus Birmingham and Solihull District.

7. The area covered by the Birmingham Northfield office is not co-terminus with the Birmingham Northfield parliamentary constituency.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what the average time periods were for the last 12 months for which figures are available for (a) reaching decisions on reviews of unsuccessful applications from residents of Birmingham, Northfield for assistance from the Social Fund and (b) passing these decisions on to the applicants; [135617]

(2) what the (a) target and (b) average time periods were in the last 12 months for which figures are available for (i) reaching decisions on reviews of unsuccessful applications for assistance from the Social Fund and (ii) passing these decisions to applicants, broken down by departmental sub-region. [135619]

Mr. Pond: If a person is dissatisfied with their Social Fund decision, they may apply for a review of that decision; in the first instance reviews are carried out locally by a reviewing officer. If the applicant is still unhappy with the decision, they may apply for a further review by an independent Social Fund Inspector.

While there is no specific target for internal reviews of discretionary Social Fund decisions, Jobcentre Plus aim to reduce the average time taken to clear applications to 10 working days; all decision letters, irrespective of the outcome of the decision, are sent by first class mail.

As a result of staffing problems, arrears of work accrued over a period of some months in the Birmingham, Northfield office. Additional resource has been allocated to clear the backlog, and this should be achieved before the end of the year.

The operational performance of the Independent Review Service (IRS), an independent statutory body, is a matter for the Social Fund Commissioner who informs me that:

The IRS time targets for reviews are absolute targets rather than average clearance targets. They are: Routine Cases—95 per cent. in 12 working days; Complex Cases—90 per cent. in 23 working days. Against these, in the last financial year the IRS achieved 98.1 per cent. and 94.8 per cent. respectively. For the purposes of responding to your questions, the information has been compiled by averages.

For the 12-month period ending 30 September 2003, the average time periods for reviews dealt with by the IRS from Birmingham, Northfield were 12.99 days for community care grants; 11.5 days for crisis loans for items; 8.41 days for budgeting loans; and 1.59 hours for urgent crisis loans, such as those for living expenses (express cases), respectively.

For the 12-month period ending 30 September 2003, the national average time periods for reviews dealt with by the IRS were 12.4 days for community care grants; 11.35 days for crisis loans for items; 7.95 days for budgeting loans; and 4.75 hours for urgent crisis loans, such as those for living expenses (express cases), respectively.

The IRS passed all decisions to applicants by first class post as soon as the decisions were completed. At the same time, the IRS passed a copy of the decisions to the Jobcentre Plus and they are responsible for making any payments that are due.

Tables detailing the performance of the Independent Review Service, which show the average time periods by Government Office Region and Jobcentre Plus District, and show the average national, regional and district times for cases that fall within the IRS 12 and 23 day targets have been placed in the Library.

HEALTH

Genetically Modified Food

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what direct tests have been conducted on humans to determine whether the GM foods approved in Europe may be allergenic. [138816]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Each genetically modified food approved to date in Europe has been assessed on a case-by-case basis. The assessment includes an evaluation of allergenicity in accordance with internationally agreed guidelines on testing of novel and genetically modified foods. Direct testing on human subjects is not part of this protocol.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what monitoring of groups potentially vulnerable to the effects of consuming GM crops (a) has been undertaken and (b) is planned by the Government. [138817]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Each genetically modified (GM) crop is assessed on a case-by-case basis. This includes a consideration of whether products from the crop, if approved, are suitable to be consumed by all sectors of the population. The Food Standards Agency has not therefore undertaken, nor is planning, any monitoring of groups potentially vulnerable to the effects of consuming GM crops.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from companies on the proposed sale of genetically modified sweetcorn in supermarkets. [138814]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Food Standards Agency has not received any such representations on the proposed sale of genetically modified sweetcorn.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has carried out on the safety of genetically modified sweetcorn. [138815]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Food Standards Agency (FSA) funds two extensive research programmes that underpin the safety assessment of genetically modified foods. The FSA does not commission specific research into the safety of individual genetically modified foods that are being proposed for authorisation.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the benefits of medical experiments on primates, particularly in relation to (i) the prediction of side effects, (ii) the alternative of non-invasive techniques, (iii) vitro studies and (iv) computer simulations designed to mimic human metabolism; and if he will make a statement. [138880]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department has not commissioned or evaluated any recent research on the benefits of using non-human primates in scientific procedures. The Animal Procedures Committee, which advises the Home Secretary on matters concerned with the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, published a report in July 2003 on the use of primates in scientific research. The report recommends that the Government should convene a stakeholders' forum on the care and use of primates in experiments, to progress the issues raised in the report. The Government have agreed that a forum should be set up. Every effort will continue to be required to minimise primate use and find alternatives where practicable.

"Choice, Responsiveness and Equity"

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which patients' organisations were sent the consultation document, "Choice, Responsiveness and Equity", and when; and if he will make a statement on the time taken from publication to writing to hon. Members on 21 October to inform them of the consultation. [136988]

Mr. Hutton: Dissemination of the consultation support pack to patient organisations, and others, has been ongoing since publication on 1 September 2003. A list of patients' organisations that we have contacted directly has been placed in the Library. When the House returned in October, I sent right hon. and hon. Members a summary of the consultation document that we had developed following requests from local organisations to support their local events.

Accident and Emergency Admissions

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the proportion of admissions to accident and emergency is directly related to the individual's use of alcohol. [139247]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government's latest estimate of the proportion of alcohol-related attendances at accident and emergency was prepared by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's strategy unit as part of their project to develop an Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy for England. This work indicated that 41 per cent. of all accident and emergency attendances were alcohol related, rising to 70 per cent. between midnight and five a.m. on Saturday night.

These estimates were prepared using specially commissioned research, and were published as part of the strategy unit's interim analysis on the harms associated with alcohol misuse on 19 September 2003.Agency Staff

Agency Staff

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost of (a) agency nurses and (b) agency doctors has been to the NHS in London in each year since 1997. [133749]

Mr. Hutton: The table shows expenditure for the six financial years, 1997–98 to 2002–03, on agency nurses[1] and agency doctors[2] for the health authorities, national health service trusts and primary care trusts within the London region.

The NHS is now treating more patients then ever before and this increase in activity is reflected in greater spending on agency staff in the NHS.

Alcohol Strategy

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated in respect of the cost of alcohol abuse to the national health service; and when he expects to publish his Alcohol Strategy. [138778]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government's latest estimate of the costs accruing to the national health service as a result of alcohol misuse was prepared by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's strategy unit as part of their project to develop a alcohol harms reduction strategy for England. The strategy unit's interim analytical report on the harms associated with alcohol misuse, which was published on 19 September 2003, indicated that costs to the health service in England lay between £1.4 billion and £1.7 billion. These estimates were prepared using both existing and specially commissioned research.

The Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy for England will be published in and implemented from 2004, in line with the commitment given by the Government in the NHS Plan.

Bechtel

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the contracts for consultancy and other work carried out by Bechtel for agencies responsible to his Department in each year since 1997, stating in each case (a) the nature of the work, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the duration of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [137882]

Ms Rosie Winterton: None.

Cancer

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many trained cancer specialists are practising in England; how many cancer specialist students began training in each year since 1997; how many cancer specialists qualified in each year since 1997; and what his assessment is of the optimum number of cancer specialists required by the national health service. [138918]

Mr. Hutton: As at 30 June 2003, there were 4,096 consultants in the cancer specialties (trained cancer specialists) working in the national health service in England.

As undergraduates, medical students do not undertake training in specific specialties, their medical training is of a general nature at this stage of their course. Specialty specific training begins in hospital at postgraduate level. Information on the number of doctors beginning and completing speciality training each year is not collected centrally.

The number of postgraduate doctors in training and consultants in the cancer specialties for each year since 1997 is shown in the table.

The Cancer Plan gives a commitment to increase the number of cancer consultants working in the NHS by 1,000 by 2006.

Since 1999 the number of cancer consultants has increased by 734, or 22 per cent. This means that the NHS is on track to hit the Cancer Plan target. The National Cancer Director works closely with cancer networks, professional organisations and workforce development confederations to ensure that national decisions about workforce planning reflect the needs of the service.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ring-fence spending for cancer services. [138338]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 13 November 2003]: We do not believe ring-fencing money for a specific programme is the way forward. Our overall approach is to set a national strategic direction, underpinned by targets and to devolve greater freedom to front line staff and organisations to give them the freedom to innovate and improve care for patients based on local needs and circumstances.

On 22 May 2003 the National Clinical Director for Cancer published a report that showed that the new money for cancer services announced as part of the NHS Cancer Plan is reaching those services.

On 28 October 2003, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health, announced that this tracking exercise would be repeated for cancer funding allocated in 2003–04.

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of cancer patients received their first definitive treatment within 62 days of referral in each month of the last three years, broken down by cancer type. [138632]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The NHS Cancer Plan sets out our strategy to reduce waiting times for cancer patients. A maximum two-month wait from urgent referral to treatment was introduced for breast cancer in December 2002. Data on performance of this target are collected quarterly and were first published for quarter one, 2003–04 (Apr—Jun 2003), where 97 per cent. of women received their treatment within a month of urgent referral. This target will be in place for all other urgent cases of cancer by 2005. Targets of one month from urgent referral to first treatment were introduced in 2001 for testicular cancer, acute leukaemia and children's cancers. Data on NHS Cancer Plan waiting times targets are published on the Department's website at: www.doh.aov.uk/cancerwaits.

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been allocated by his Department to cancer prevention in each of the last three years; and how much was spent in each year. [136731]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department funds an extensive health improvement and prevention programme aimed chiefly at preventing cancer and coronary heart disease, which are the two main causes of mortality. Funding for programmes on tobacco control and smoking cessation, improving nutrition and diet and increasing physical activity all contribute not only to cancer prevention, but also to preventing coronary heart disease. It is not possible to identify the amount of funding in these programmes that contributes solely to cancer prevention.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to establish dedicated Positron Emission Tomography camera facilities to diagnose lung cancer and evaluate the success of treatment in sites across all strategic health authorities. [140112]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We are aware of the potential benefits Positron Emission Tomography (PET) scanning can offer patients with lung cancer. The Department is working with national health service specialised commissioners, the PET clinical community and research stakeholders to create a framework to enable the NHS to develop a clear national policy position. This will set out, from the evidence, which tumour groups would benefit from PET scanning, likely future demand, and the optimal configuration and location of PET scanners.

Cardiology

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many trained cardiologists are practising in England; how many cardiology students began training in each year since 1997; how many cardiologists qualified in each year since 1997; and what assessment he has made of the optimum number of cardiologists required by the National Health Service. [138919]

Mr. Hutton: As at 30 June 2003, there were 618 consultants in cardiology (trained cardiologists) working in the National Health Service in England.

As undergraduates, medical students do not undertake training in specific specialities, their medical training is of a general nature at this stage of their course. Specialty specific training begins in hospital at postgraduate level. Information on the number of doctors beginning and completing specialty training each year is not collected centrally. The number of postgraduate doctors in training and consultants in cardiology in each year since 1997 is shown in the table.

The coronary heart disease care group workforce team advises on workforce requirements to deliver the CHD national service framework and NHS Plan. It is required to make annual recommendations to the workforce numbers advisory board. In its 2003 report, it recommended that there was a need to continue to substantially increase the number of cardiologists. Future growth requirements are being refined and will depend on growth in activity demands and on changes in clinical practice and ways of working.

Care Homes

Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the (a) demand for and (b) supply of places in residential homes and nursing homes in England; and what forecast he has made of change in (i) demand and (ii) supply in the next 10 years. [139476]

Dr. Ladyman: I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible, and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) residential, (b) nursing and (c) elderly mentally infirm (i) homes and (ii) places were available in London in each of the last 10 years, broken down by (A) local authority, (B) private sector and (C) charity and voluntary providers; and what percentage of capacity in each sector was used in each year. [138666]

Dr. Ladyman: Tables 1 and 2 show the number of residential and nursing homes and places in London at 31 March for the years 1993 to 2001 by sector. Tables 3 and 4 show the number of homes and places in care homes for elderly mentally infirm people. Data are not available for the percentage of capacity used each year.

Dr. Ladyman: The table shows the number of care home places available in Birmingham and West Midlands, broken down by type of accommodation, as at 31 March for the years 1998 to 2001.

The National Care Standards Commission has collected figures for later years but comparable details broken down by local authority and region are not available.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he collates on staff turnover in (a) nursing homes and (b) residential care homes for elderly people in (i) the public sector, (ii) the voluntary sector and (iii) the private sector; and if he will make a statement. [139751]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department does not collect information on staff turnover. Information is available from the 2002 Social Services Workforce Analysis, conducted by the Employers' Organisation on behalf of the Social Care and Health Workforce Group. This data is soon to be published and will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many inspections and approvals have been undertaken of (a) residential care homes, (b) nursing care homes, (c) residential care home managers and (d) nursing care home managers since the National Care Standards Commission was established; and if he will make a statement. [139554]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is shown in the table.

Only homes which have an approved registered manager are registered and entered into the service register.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many managers of nursing care homes assessed by the National Care Standards Commission since its inception, had (a) at least first level registered nurse qualifications and (b) no nursing qualifications; [139555]

(2) how many nursing care homes have published their registered managers' qualifications and experience since the National Care Standards Commission was established; [139556]

(3) how many (a) requests of statement of purpose have been refused by nursing care homes and (b) residents' care plans of nursing care homes have been assessed and approved since the National Care Standards Commission was established. [139559]

Dr. Ladyman: The National Care Standards Commission does not record this information on its central registration and inspection database.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of (a) the number of residents and (b) the ratio of nurses to residents in nursing care homes in England in the last year for which figures are available. [139557]

Dr. Ladyman: The estimated number of occupied beds in nursing homes, private hospitals and clinics in England in 2000–01 was 152,100 beds.

Childhood Obesity

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has commissioned into the effect on childhood obesity of access to healthy foods. [138729]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department carries out research and development activity related to diet, nutrition, physical activity and obesity, including the recently completed research initiative on nutrition funded through the Department's policy research programme. Research includes the systematic reviews about the uptake of physical activity and healthy eating by children and young adults.

As part of the Five-a-Day programme, research was undertaken to test the feasibility and practicalities of evidence-based community approaches to improve access to fruit and vegetables. Evaluation of the National School Fruit Scheme will also assess the impact on children's diet.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children have been treated by the NHS in each of the last 10 years for illnesses (a) directly caused by and (b) aggravated by childhood obesity. [138730]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The number of finished in-year admission episodes for 0–15 years old children in National Health Service hospitals over the last 10 years, where obesity is the primary diagnosis, is shown in the table.

Chiropody

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the cost of compiling the KT23 chiropody statistics was in 2002; [139878]

(2) which organisations were consulted on the proposed abolition of the annual KT23 chiropody statistics; and, of those consulted, which were (a) in favour of abolition and (b) opposed to it; [139879]

(3) if he will make a statement on the future of KT23 chiropody statistics. [139880]

Dr. Ladyman: As part of the initiative to reduce the burden of bureaucracy on the national health service, the need for all departmental returns, including the KT23 chiropody statistics return, is being re-examined. An internal review is currently in progress. No decision has yet been made with regard to the KT23 return. In the event of a recommendation to amend or abolish the return, formal consultation with interested parties, including the relevant professional organisations, would take place before final decisions were taken.

Information about the cost of compiling the KT23 chiropody statistics is not available centrally.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of variations in provision of NHS (a) chiropody and (b) podiatry in different regions of England; [140180]

(2) what plans he has to encourage the greater use of podiatric surgeons; and if he will make a statement. [140181]

Dr. Ladyman: It is for primary care trusts to assess the health needs of their local community, and the need for particular services in their locality, and to make such arrangements as they consider appropriate using the resources which are made available to them for this purpose.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the long-term health impacts of discharging NHS (a) chiropody and (b) podiatry patients who are deemed to be low risk. [140182]

Dr. Ladyman: It is for clinicians in the first instance to assess and take account of the clinical implications of their decisions.

Computer Games

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contracts his Department has awarded to external computer game companies broken down by (a) the company to which the contract was awarded and (b) the date and total cost of the contract; what the purpose was of each contract; what has been delivered to date on each contract; and what remains to be delivered. [139580]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not awarded any contracts to external computer game companies.

Condover Hall School

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what health care support services are given to children attending Condover Hall School, Shropshire; [135256]

(2) if he will estimate the cost of upgrading the building of Condover Hall School to meet national care standards; [135286]

(3) what assessment has been undertaken of the effect on the mental health of children at Condover Hall School of its closure; [135290]

(4) what the total health care cost to public funds was of children attending Condover Hall School in 2002-03; [135295]

(5) if he will make a statement on the compliance of Condover Hall School with the National Care Standards. [135297]

Margaret Hodge: Non-maintained special schools such as Condover Hall have a general duty in law to supervise and care for the health of their pupils. The school must employ or otherwise secure the attendance of suitably qualified people, including professionals with expertise and experience relevant to the individual health needs of the children there.

Health care will be provided either by the Primary Care Trust (PCT) local to the school or by the child's "home" PCT, contracting with a NHS Trust providing community child health services where necessary. It is not possible to specify the health care support services received by pupils at Condover Hall School, since these will depend on each child's health needs. However, part of the school's continuing duty towards the health of its pupils is to arrange with the Primary Care Trust for periodic medical and dental inspections and for any treatment that may be needed.

Given that health care costs will be dependent on the health needs of each child it is not possible to make overall calculations of the health care costs of children attending Condover Hall School. My Department does not keep central records of the health needs of individual children in schools, including Non-maintained Special Schools; that is the responsibility of each individual school.

Condover Hall School offers 52 week per year placements to pupils and is therefore required to register as a Children's Home with the National Care Standards Commission (NCSC). We understand from the Shrewsbury office of the NCSC that Condover Hall School was inspected at the end of April 2003 and that the report has not yet been finalised. It is, therefore, not possible for me to comment on the school's compliance with the National Minimum Standards for Children's Homes.

As the controlling charity, the Royal National Institute of the Blind (RNIB) would have responsibility for any assessment regarding the impact of the school's closure on pupils' mental health. I understand that RNIB have carried out a full consultation with pupils, parents and staff regarding their plans to close the school.

Consultant Appointments

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the average waiting time for a first consultant appointment in London in each year since 1997. [133741]

Mr. Hutton: The average waiting times for first consultant outpatient appointments following general/dental practitioner written referral in London since 1997 is shown in the table. Progress on reducing maximum waiting times do not necessarily translate into a reduction in the median waiting time, because of shifts in low waiting time bands. Over this period the number of people in London waiting over 26 weeks for their first outpatient appointment fell from 15,100 at end March 1997 to 6 at end March 2003. The equivalent figures for England are over 70,000 to 18 (counting only patients that are the responsibility of NHS Commissioners).

Waiting times for 1st consultant outpatient appointment following G(D)P referral: London

Year	Median Waiting time (weeks)
1996–97	6.1
1 997–98	6.3
1998–99	6.9
1 999–2000	7.4
2000–01	7.2
2001–02	7.3
2002–03	7.5

Notes:
1. Data pre 2002/3 is based on London Regional Office boundaries, data for 2002/3 is based on London strategic health authority boundaries
2. The medians in the table are based on aggregate data, categorised into waiting time bands, and do not reflect shifts in the waiting time profiles within these bands, only between bands.

Department of Health form QM08

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Oxford, West and Abingdon (Dr. Harris) of 14 October 2003, Official Report, column 214W, on consultant numbers, exactly how many consultants were planned in the substantial expansion; and exactly how many more new consultants the NHS Plan target provided. [138194]

Mr. Hutton: Subject to the necessary resources becoming available, the National Health Service was aiming to provide around 5,000 additional consultants between 1999 and 2004. The NHS Plan put in place the necessary funds and plans to deliver up to 7,500 new consultants between 1999 and 2004.

A range of initiatives has addressed the need for additional growth to achieve this target, including: speeding up specialist registrar to consultant conversion, encouraging the NHS to become a more flexible and diverse employer, increasing investment in training, investing in child care, attracting back returners and running national and international recruitment campaigns.

Contingency Planning

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made towards (a) vaccinating 350 health care staff in the UK against smallpox and (b) the other measures outlined in the written statement of 2nd December 2002 on contingency planning. [130201]

Mr. Hutton: To date, 280 frontline healthcare workers across the United Kingdom have been vaccinated with the smallpox vaccine.

Implementation of the smallpox interim guidelines is being co-ordinated by the Health Protection Agency (HPA) regional leads. The HPA has established interim guidelines and on existing local emergency plans and arrangements.

Smallpox vaccine stocks have been substantially increased with the announcement of the Government's intention to secure a contract with Aventis Pasteur in June this year. This means that we have sufficient stocks to vaccinate the whole of the UK, if needed, with new second generation, cell-derived smallpox vaccine.

Dementia

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the availability of the anti-dementia drug Ebixa. [140111]

Dr. Ladyman: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) will appraise Memantine (Ebixa), for the treatment of moderate to severe dementia, as part of the eighth wave of its work programme. The anticipated publication date of its recommendations is May 2005.

Until NICE has made its recommendations it is for local areas to make decisions about availability on the national health service having taken account of published evidence.

Dentistry

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the mean number of decayed, filled and missing teeth for five-year-old children in (a) England, (b) each region and (c) each strategic health authority in each of the last six years. [138185]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The British Association for the Study of Community Dentistry carry out a survey every second year of dental caries among five-year-old children.

Information showing the average number of decayed, missing and filled teeth in children aged five in England, by region and health authority in 1997–98 and 1999–2000 and by region and strategic health authority for 2001–02, has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of five-year-old children had no caries in (a) England, (b) each region and (c) each strategic health authority in each of the last six years. [138186]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The British Association for the Study of Community Dentistry carry out a survey every second year of dental caries among five-year-old children. The information showing the percentage of five-year-old children with no caries in England, by region and health authority in 1997–98 and 1999–2000 and by strategic health authority for 2001–02, has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) mean and (b) maximum waiting times for elective admissions for dental treatment were in (i) England and (ii) each region in each of the last six years. [138410]

Mr. Hutton: The table shows the number of patients waiting over 12 months for elective inpatient admission in dentistry specialties (oral surgery, restorative dentistry, paediatric dentistry and orthodontics) and the average waiting times for those specialties.

[1] Dentistry specialties include oral surgery, restorative dentistry, paediatric dentistry and orthodontics.

[2] Data is incomplete for September 2003 due to issues arising in Cheshire and Merseyside HA, this may affect data for England, Greater Manchester HA and Cheshire and Merseyside HA.

Data prior to 2002/3 is based on England and Regional Office area, after that it is based on England and Strategic Health Authority.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the effects of the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Bill on dentistry patients. [139684]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government are committed to rebuilding and restoring national health service dentistry to improve the oral health of the nation. The proposals in the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Bill, currently before Parliament, represent the most radical reform of NHS dentistry since 1948. Proposals in the Bill will underpin a modernised high-quality primary dental service properly integrated with the rest of the NHS, providing better access and improved patient experience.

Primary care trusts (PCTs) will have a duty to secure the provision of primary dental services to meet all reasonable requirements either through contracts with individual practices or by providing services themselves. PCTs will have a duty to publish information about the primary dental services for which it makes provision. With these new responsibilities will go the £1.2 billion financial resources currently held centrally so that the NHS can secure services locally and develop them in line with local needs.

PCTs will be given directly conferred functions in relation to dental public health, including oral health promotion, surveys and school screening to make a real contribution to reducing oral health inequalities in relation to specific conditions or client groups.

PCTs will be able to commission specialist dental services, such as orthodontics or minor oral surgery from experienced "'high street" dentists operating in readily accessible settings, located for the convenience of patients.

Under proposals in the Bill, dental charges will no longer be related to the dentists' remuneration. The new arrangements will apply nationally and are intended to ensure there is greater clarity about the cost of treatment for both dentists and the public.

Diabetes

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to ensure that better information is provided to (a) general practitioners and (b) diabetic patients about (i) the effects of diabetes on safety when driving and (ii) the control of such effects. [139824]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department for Transport publishes a booklet called the "At a Glance Guide to Medical Standards of Fitness to Drive", which gives details of all the United Kingdom medical standards, including diabetes. This guide is now available for general consumption on the internet and is updated every six months following advice from the Secretary of State's honorary medical advisory panels.

Amendments to the "At a Glance" guide are distributed to medical practitioners in hard copy form and can also be obtained on EMIS Knowledge-Based Systems (Egton Medical Information Systems), which is available in all general practitioners' surgeries.

The document provides the basis on which members of the medical profession advise individuals on whether any particular condition could affect their driving entitlement.

Diet and Nutrition

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will break down by sex the percentages of children who were found by the most recent National Diet and Nutrition Survey to be consuming less than the lower reference nutrient intake for (a) calcium, (b) magnesium and (c) vitamin A. [137057]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested is shown in the table.

Doctors' Conference

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of the recent Doctors' Forum event held at the Novotel Hotel in Hammersmith; and what the (a) objectives and (b) programme for the event were. [138934]

Mr. Hutton: The cost of the 2003 Improving Working Lives for Doctors' Conference was £125,000. The event was open to all doctors and to those working in national health service human resource departments as an opportunity to network and share good practice on progress towards our aim of improving the working lives of medical staff. The principal objective was to support our commitment to the development of well-managed, supportive and flexible working environments by showcasing achievements and providing an opportunity to discuss areas where more work is needed. The conference was also a platform to support and promote the work of the doctors' forum, which was established following the first IWL for doctors' conference in 2002. Those who were unable to attend the event can find out more from the summary information on the Department's website at: http://www.doh.gov.uk/conferences/improvingoct03.htm

Domiciliary Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the standards governing the delivery of domiciliary care for the elderly and the arrangements for monitoring compliance with them. [140107]

Dr. Ladyman: Regulations and National Minimum Standards governing domiciliary care were published in January 2003, to come into force from 1 April 2003. Their content followed wide consultation with groups representing service users, care providers, and local authorities. I am satisfied that they support good, professional practice.

The National Care Standards Commission (NCSC) is an independent inspection body. Its role is to ensure compliance with the regulations as part of the conditions for registration of domiciliary care agencies. From 1 April 2004, the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) will take over this role. I am satisfied that the NCSC currently, and the CSCI from April 2004, have the powers they need to monitor compliance and to raise standards.

Drug Budgets

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the change in cost to the national health service drug budget resulting from the focus on priority therapeutic areas, as outlined in the new general practitioner contract. [137361]

Mr. Hutton: The Quality and Outcomes Framework which is part of the new General Medical Services Contract is just one of a variety of related policy initiatives that will impact on the national health service drug budget in the future. The publication of national services frameworks and determinations by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence are other examples. The NHS will take these and other factors into account when modelling future resource provision.

Drug Research

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the impact of implementing EU Directive 2001/20/EC on non-commercial drug research in the United Kingdom. [138989]

Miss Melanie Johnson: As part of the consultations on the UK regulations, a partial regulatory impact assessment (RIA) was provided revealing potential increased costs. Universities, national health service trusts and charities were invited to submit estimates on recurring and non-recurring compliance costs for non-commercial trials. The comments received revealed the difficulty of estimating costs with so much uncertainty surrounding the Commission Directives.

The Government have taken further steps to attempt to influence the Commission in its consideration of a Commission Directive on Good Clinical Practice and also in reviewing guidance that the Commission published earlier this year with a view to avoiding any unnecessary costs. This work is continuing.

In another initiative designed to reduce the cost impact, the Department and the Medical Research Council are working with experts to find practical solutions to the issues identified in the partial impact assessment. Details of the project can be found at www.ncchta.org/eudirective/index.asp.

Further information on the partial regulatory impact assessment and the proposed United Kingdom implementing regulations is available on the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) website at www.mhra.gov.uk and in the MHRA Consultative Documents: MLXs issued in 2003, MLX 287.

Drug/Alcohol Misuse

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the amount of Government funding for (a) drug misuse treatment and (b) alcohol misuse treatment in (i) England and (ii) each strategic health authority in each of the last six years. [138755]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The pooled drug treatment budget was £195.7 million in 2002–03 and this increased to £243.6 million in 2003–04. It is estimated that the pooled treatment budget is matched with an additional 200 million of mainstream funding. Figures are not available prior to 2002–03 when the majority of drug treatment was funded through mainstreamed health monies.

Figures are not available for each strategic health authority. However, the table shows pooled treatment budget allocations for each National Treatment Agency region.

£ million

Region	2002–03	2003–04
London	43.80	55.20
East Midlands	12.96	16.42
West Midlands	19.20	24.61
Eastern Region	17.15	20.07
North East	11.72	14.87

£ million

Region	2002–03	2003–04
North West	25.90	32.93
South East	25.44	29.23
South West	15.47	18.19
Yorkshire and Humber	19.57	24.57

Responsibility for funding alcohol treatment services lies with primary care trusts, who commission these services in line with local needs. The Department does not hold centrally collected information on expenditure on alcohol treatment services, but we estimate that around £95 million is spent annually on these services, with the bulk of this funding being drawn from Government sources.

Fluoridation

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much has been spent in each of the last five years for which figures are available on research (a) directly funded by the Department of Health and (b) funded through the Medical Research Council into the effects of fluoridation on people suffering from kidney disease; [139744]

(2) how much has been spent in each of the last five years for which figures are available on research (a) directly funded by the Department of Health and (b) funded through the Medical Research Council into the effects of fluoridation on people suffering from thyroid disease. [139745]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The research we have commissioned has been on the general effects of fluoridation on health. "A Systematic Review of Fluoridation", carried out by the Centre for Reviews and Dissemination of the University of York in the year 2000, cost £79,648.00 and the study of the bio-availability of fluoride, which has just been completed by the University of Newcastle, cost £47,934. In addition, the Medical Research Council (MRC) undertook the study "Water Fluoridation and Health", which was published in 2002, under concordat arrangements with the Department. York identified three studies of goitre and two of cancer of the thyroid gland, none of which showed a statistically significant association with fluoridation. The MRC also noted that attention has been given to cancers of the stomach, kidney and thyroid, because fluoride is usually absorbed in the stomach and can be concentrated in the kidneys and thyroid, but concluded that,

> "the evidence available does not suggest that fluoridation of water increases the risk for cancer in general or for any particular type of cancer."

Foundation Trusts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what role he envisages for political parties in the elections to the governing boards of foundation hospital trusts. [138514]

Mr. Hutton: None. The Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Bill, as amended at Lords Report, includes a power that regulations may make provision as to the conduct of elections for membership of the board of governors of a national health service foundation trust. The regulations may include the obligations on nominees to declare their interests.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether limits to candidates' expenditure are to be imposed in the elections to the governing boards of foundation hospital trusts. [138520]

Mr. Hutton: The Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Bill, as amended at Lords Report, includes a power that regulations may make provision as to the conduct of elections for membership of the board of governors of a national health service foundation trust. The regulations may cover election expenses and publicity.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from (a) NHS trusts and (b) others concerning the electoral systems which may be used in elections to the board of governors of NHS foundation trusts. [139116]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 18 November 2003]: None. The Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Bill now requires regulations to set out procedures for elections. While officials are in dialogue with national health service foundation trust applicants and expert bodies about how the secondary legislation might allow for elections to take place, we have not received any representations from NHS trusts or others suggesting electoral systems which may be used to elect members of an NHS foundation trust to its board of governors.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the proposed public register of members of an NHS foundation trust will allow for members to be listed as patients or carers. [139118]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 18 November 2003]: Subject to Parliament, it is the Government's intention that a national health service foundation trust would be allowed, but not required, to distinguish between members who are patients and those who are carers in the register of members.

General Practitioners

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether it is his policy that the same value of minimum practice income guarantee should be offered to GPs if the number of patients on their rolls falls below the 2002–03 figures. [138586]

Mr. Hutton: The minimum practice income guarantee will ensure that any gap between the global sum and the practice's previous income for global sum equivalent items will be met for as long as is necessary. Practices that have a lower global sum allocation than their previous income from global sum equivalent items will receive a correction factor to the value of this difference. The correction factor will be determined and fixed at the first quarter of 2004–05 and will continue to be paid on top of the global sum allocation for as long as is needed. It will be uplifted along with the uplifts in the global sum.

A practice that has a falling list will continue to receive the correction factor as determined in the first quarter of 2004–05, but its calculated global sum allocation will fall as a result of the falling list size. This avoids the situation where a practice may be providing services to a small list, but is receiving income protection based on earnings received for providing services to a much larger list.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to ensure that the new GP funding formula will not result in less money than the previous formula being offered for general practitioners, with particular reference to GPs in Brent. [138587]

Mr. Hutton: The new minimum practice income guarantee will ensure that practices do not lose out on their global sum allocation formula compared with their previous global sum equivalent income. This arrangement will remain in place for as long as is needed.

Practices' global sum equivalent income will be calculated in the first quarter of 2004–05 and compared with the global sum allocation. If the global sum equivalent is higher than the global sum the practice will receive a correction factor to make good this difference. This correction factor will be paid monthly to practices for as long as is necessary.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to ensure that access to high-quality sexual health services is (a) made a priority and (b) resourced as part of the new general practitioner contract; [139467]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that general practitioners will meet the Level 1 and 2 service provision set out in the National Strategy for Sexual Health and HIV as part of the new general practitioner contract. [139468]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 18 November 2003]: "The National Strategy for Sexual Health and HIV" set out an increasing role for primary care services, recognising that general practice plays a crucial role in the delivery of sexual health services. The new general medical services contract includes a new patient services guarantee to ensure patients have access to at least the range of services they currently enjoy, with a guarantee that will see investment in primary care increase by one-third by 2005–06.

All practices will provide essential services. Contraceptive services will be delivered as an additional service which practices have a preferential right to provide, and will normally do so.

Patients will not only continue to receive a family planning service, including screening for sexually transmitted infections where necessary, but primary care trusts will also be able to commission more specialised sexual health services that conform with the National Strategy for Sexual Health and HIV.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to ensure that the new GP contract does not act as a financial disincentive for GPs to take on new patients. [138601]

Mr. Hutton: The new general medical services contract aims to ensure that resources reflect more accurately a contractor's workload and the costs of delivering high quality care to the local population. Those general practitioners who choose to take on new patients will be properly rewarded for doing so.

Geriatricians

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) consultant geriatricians and (b) geriatricians below the level of consultant were employed in each NHS hospital trust in each year since 1997. [138154]

Mr. Hutton: Information on consultants in geriatric medicine and geriatricians below the level of consultant who were employed in each national health service hospital trust in each year since 1997 has been placed in the Library.

The number of consultants in geriatrics has increased by 25 per cent, between September 1997 and June 2003.

Health and Safety

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what help he is giving to local hospitals to achieve health and safety standards. [139048]

Mr. Hutton: Compliance with health and safety legislation is the responsibility of National Health Service Trust Chief Executives and Boards.

The Department of Health publishes health and safety guidance to aid NHS trusts in complying with current legislation. The Department will be publishing comprehensive new guidance in February 2004 and is currently consulting on the first national NHS occupational health and safety strategy.

Health Tourism

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has commissioned into the (a) extent and (b) cost of health tourism in England; and if he will make a statement. [139579]

Mr. Hutton: Officials in the Department of Health have been conducting a review of the operation of the National Health Service hospital charging arrangements for overseas visitors for some time, and a consultation exercise on proposed amendments to the NHS (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Regulations 1989 ended on 31 October. No specific external research was been commissioned as part of this review.

NHS trusts are not required to submit data on the costs of providing treatment for overseas visitors, many of whom may well be entitled to free treatment under the provisions of the charging regulations.

Health Visitors

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the effects on the efficiency of health visitor services of health visitors serving (a) general practitioner surgeries and (b) geographical areas independent of GP surgeries. [138606]

Mr. Hutton: It is for local organisations and health visiting teams to determine how they should best be deployed to meet local needs and circumstances. As primary care trusts have reviewed their services in the light of the national health visitor development programme and the primary care nursing framework, "Liberating the Talents", different models have emerged as most appropriate to the local situation. In some areas, health visitors have found that geographical working enables them to focus more readily on health determinants within the community and work with a range of partners to address these.

Geographical working may be particularly appropriate in some inner city areas where a number of general practices serve the same geographical population. In other places, where the general practitioner practice population corresponds more readily to a geographical area, health visiting teams have valued the close relationship with other primary health care team members that attachment or alignment with general practice can bring.

Heroin

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies have been carried out to determine the effectiveness of buprenorphine in the treatment of heroin addiction. [140054]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Buprenorphine has recently been established as a potential effective alternative substitution treatment for some patients by a number of studies, such as those concentrating on effective doses, including Johnson et al., 1995, Ling et al., 1998 and Strain et al., 1994. Specific differences from methadone have been highlighted in other studies, including Walsh et al., 1994, Reynaud et al., 1998, Bickel & Amass, 1995, Reisinger, 1997 and Barnett P. G. et al., 2001, and trials in Europe have been reviewed by Chapleo et al., 1997. Also, see Uehlinger, C et al., 1998 and Fischer, G et al. 1999 for published studies.

The Cochrane review of buprenorphine maintenance for opioid dependence in August 2002 concluded, "Buprenorphine is an effective intervention for use in the maintenance treatment of heroin dependence, but it is not more effective than methadone at adequate dosages".

HIV/AIDS

Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people suffered from HIV/AIDS in England in the last five years for which figures are available. [139474]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The annual survey of prevalent HIV infections diagnosed collates data on individuals who attend statutory services for HIV-related treatment and care each year. The annual totals for England for the last five years are shown in the table.

HIV/AIDS: Annual total for England for the last five years

	Prevalent diagnosed cases
1998	16,306
1999	18,392
2000	20,855
2001	24,269
2002	29,044

Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre, Health Protection Agency.

Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what resources his Department has allocated to HIV/AIDS (a) treatment and (b) prevention in financial year 2003–04; and if he will make a statement. [139475]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department of Health no longer holds central records of the resources allocated to HIV treatment and prevention by primary care trusts (PCTs). The last year for which this data was available was 2001–02, when £276 million was allocated for HIV treatment and care, and £55 million for HIV prevention. From 1 April 2002 the ring-fence was removed from these allocations and they were added to National Health Service baselines, allowing PCTs the flexibility to determine spending priorities for maximum effectiveness.

In addition to the significant amount of work commissioned and funded at local level, national targeted HIV prevention work for those groups most at risk of infection is undertaken by the Department through contracts with voluntary sector organisations, to the value of almost £4 million (including helpline provision) in 2003–04.

Home Care Services

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people within the London Borough of Havering in receipt of home care services provided by the council were charged for those services in the (a) 12 months before and (b) after the introduction of Department of Health guidance, "Fairer Charging Policies for Home Care"; [133265]

(2) if he will assess the impact of Department of Health guidance, "Fairer Charging Policies for Home Care", on service users within the London Borough of Havering; and if he will make a statement. [133267]

Mr. Hutton: Information is not held centrally on the number of people within the London Borough of Havering, who were in receipt of home care services and were charged in the 12 months before and after the introduction of the guidance "Fairer Charging Policies for Home Care" and other non-residential Social Services. The impact of the Department of Health guidance on the London Borough of Havering's charging policies is a matter for the local council to assess.

The Department of Health issued statutory guidance to local councils for home care charges in November 2001. This guidance does not seek to change councils' power to charge, or not, but seeks to ensure that, where council's do charge, this will be based on fairer well designed charging policies. An important principle of the guidance is that charges should not reduce a person's income below basic levels of income support or the guarantee credit of pension credit plus a 25 per cent, buffer.

Hospital Beds

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) general and (b) acute beds were open overnight in each English region in each of the last 10 years; [137364]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 November2003]: The NHS Plan set a target of 2,100 extra general and acute beds. By 2002–03, an additional 1,600 were in place representing over three quarters of the target set out in the NHS Plan.

Information on the number of available beds by ward classification is collected from each National Health Service trust. An available bed is one that is open and staffed at midnight. Figures for beds in wards classified as acute and geriatric (general) for England for the last ten years are shown in the table.

Year	Acute	Geriatric
1993–94	109,713	37,440
1994–95	108,008	36,795
1995–96	108,296	34,328
1996–97	108,869	31,646
1997–98	107,807	30,240
1998–99	107,729	28,697
1999–00	107,218	27,862
2000–01	107,956	27,838
2001–02	108,535	28,047
2002–03	108,706	27,973

Information for the period 1993–94 to 1999–00 aggregated to the 8 Regional Office areas is available in Summary of Bed Availability, England copies of which are in the Library. Information for 2000–01 is available from the Department of Health website http://www.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity. Any information on beds published after the abolition of regional offices in April 2002 is not available at a regional level.

Hospital Wards

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which hospital wards he has visited in the last 12 months. [134260]

Ms Rosie Winterton: My right hon. Friend has visited 10 hospitals since becoming Secretary of State on 12 June 2003; they are listed below. As part of his visits, he saw numerous wards while meeting staff and patients.

Date	Venue
23 June	Great Ormond Street Hospital
27 August	Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Birmingham
	Selly Oak Hospital, Birmingham
28 August	St James's Hospital HQ, Leeds
	Leeds General Infirmary
29 August	Whiston Hospital, Prescot
	St Helen's Hospital, London
2 September	St Mary's Hospital, London
1 October	Royal Bournemouth Hospital
28 October	The Royal Marsden NHS Trust, London

Indian Community

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the health of England's Indian community. [138200]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Members of black and minority ethnic communities, including the Indian community, are not a homogeneous group for health status, disease patterns or health behaviour. A number of studies, including Sir Donald Acheson's 'Independent Inquiry into Inequalities in Health', have shown that there are significant health inequalities among people from black and minority ethnic communities. These inequalities relate to differences in disease prevalence, differential access to services and differential delivery and take-up of services.

According to the Health Survey for England (1999), Indians experience higher rates of heart disease, diabetes and strokes. Women born in India have a 40 per cent. higher suicide rate than those born in England and Wales. The survey also found that oral cancer has a very high prevalence among the South Asian community (Indian, Bangladeshi, Pakistani and Sri Lankan), and rates of uptake of cervical screening among South Asian women are less than half those amongst the general population.

The Department of Health's strategy for meeting the needs of minority ethnic communities is to set action on race equality within the overall framework for planning and delivering the Department's priorities.

The NHS Plan recognises that we live in a diverse society and that ethnicity can be a key factor in health inequalities. The plan sets out as core principles that the national health service will shape its services around the needs of the patient, be responsive to the needs of different groups and individuals within society, including challenging racial discrimination.

In October 2003 the Department published "Delivering Race Equality: A Framework for Action" as a consultation document on black and minority ethnic health setting out what those planning, delivering and monitoring local primary care and mental health services for people from black and minority ethnic communities.

The Department is committed to transforming the NHS so that it produces faster, fairer services with equity of access for all. The creation of more equal access for black and minority ethnic people is an integral and vital aspect of the Department's programme of investment and reform.

Infection Control

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department monitors hospital and community clinicians' attendance at infection control training; and if he will make a statement. [138190]

Mr. Hutton: For nurses, midwives and other non-medical health professionals, it is for local employers to determine their training needs linked to local service plans. Access to training is affected by whether funding is available, staff can be released, training interventions are appropriate, flexible and convenient and mentors/assessors are available. It would not be practical for the centre to be prescriptive on this.

Acute trusts have to provide education on infection control as part of the controls assurance standard. Recently published guidance from the National Institute for Clinical Excellence on infection control in primary and community care includes recommendations on training.

For doctors, the content and standard of postgraduate medical training is the responsibility of the United Kingdom competent authorities, the specialist training authority for specialist medicine and, for general practice, the joint committee on postgraduate training for general practice, which will both be replaced by the postgraduate medical education and training board. Their role is that of custodians of quality standards in postgraduate medical education and practice. They are independent of the Department. In addition, the General Medical Council's education committee has the general function of promoting high standards of medical education and co-ordinating all stages of medical education to ensure that students and newly qualified doctors are equipped with the knowledge, skills and attitudes essential for professional practice.

All of these bodies have a vested interest in ensuring that doctors are equipped to deal with the issues they will encounter in practice—including where appropriate, those relating to infection control. However, it is neither practicable nor desirable for the Government to prescribe and monitor the exact training that any individual doctor will receive.

Injuries Compensation

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total cost of compensation paid by the NHS to employees who have been injured at work was in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [138179]

Mr. Hutton: Personal injury cover for national health service employees is provided by trusts' and primary care trusts' membership of the Liabilities to Third Parties Scheme, a non-clinical risk pooling scheme operated by the NHS Litigation Authority. This was introduced in April 1999 as an alternative to purchasing commercial insurance for non-clinical risks. The table shows the total amount of compensation claims paid in each year since April 1999. Information on claims prior to 1999 is not available.

Total amount of compensation claims paid in each year since April 1999

	Number of claims handled	Compensation paid (£)
1999–2000	810	2.4 million
2000–01	1,839	5.3 million
2001–02	2,435	3.9 million
2002–03	2,450	1.1 million
2003–04	1,572	43,000

These figures do not represent the full cost of compensation claims, however, as many small claims which fall under the standard excess of £10,000 are handled directly by NHS trusts and information on these is not reported.

Insulin

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of patients use (a) animal and (b) GM-produced human insulin; what assessment has been made of the (i) likely changes in those figures over the next 10 years and (ii) continuing availability of animal insulin; and if he will make a statement. [139904]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data on the number of people using animal and genetically modified produced human insulins are not collected and there has been no assessment or forecast made of the numbers of people likely to be using these insulins in the future. The table shows the number of prescription items that were dispensed in the community in England, and their cost, in the 12 months ended June 2003.

Number of prescription items and net ingredient cost of insulins that were dispensed in the community in England for the 12 months ending June 2003

	Number of prescription items (thousand)	Net ingredient cost (£000)
Highly purified animal insulin	128.1	4,217.2
Human sequence (GM insulin)	3,522.0	150,528.8
All insulins	3,650.0	154,746.0

Notes:

1. The data is from the Prescription Cost Analysis (PCA) system which covers all prescription items that are dispensed in the community in England. This does not include drugs dispensed in hospitals or private prescriptions.
2. Insulins are those defined in the British National Formulary (BNF) paragraph 6.1.1, "Insulins". Insulin drugs have been grouped into highly purified animal and human sequence (GM) insulin in line with the British National Formulary (BNF).
3. Doctors write prescriptions on a prescription form. Each single item written on the form is counted as a prescription item. The net ingredient cost refers to the cost (which the dispenser is reimbursed) of the drug before discounts and does not include any dispensing costs or fees.

Intermediate Care

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many intermediate care beds there were in each year since 1999; [137935]

(2) how many people received intermediate care services in each year since 1999. [137938]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is shown in the tables.

Number of intermediate beds each year, as at 31 March

	Number of IC beds
1999–2000	4,242
2000–01	[illegible]
2001–02	7,021
2002–03	7,407

Number of people who have received intermediate care

	Number of people receiving IC services
1999–2000	132,447
2000–01	[1]—
2001–02	246,034
2002–03	276,184

Inventures

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will instruct Inventures to expedite their dealings with the Church Grange Satellite Surgery at Park Village, Basingstoke, in respect of a land transaction; and if he will make a statement on the reasons for delays in Inventures completing this business. [138484]

Mr. Hutton: The new surgery at Park Village, Basingstoke forms an integral part of a much larger residential development and the Village Centre project for which Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council are currently considering a detailed planning application.

The sale and development of the new surgery is linked to that of the larger development. The sale of the larger development site is anticipated to be completed shortly.

The Department is aware of the need for the new surgery to be constructed as soon as practical and is working to achieve this. Drafting Guidelines are attached to the PQ Reference Guide.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to receive the National Audit Office report on the sale of Inventures and NHS property; and whether he plans to publish it. [138835]

Mr. Hutton: We understand that the National Audit Office is close to finalising its findings in relation to the sale of Inventures and national health service property.

No decision has yet been taken with regards to publication of any report.

Clinical Incident Investigations

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to encourage local trust management to establish an open culture for reporting and examining clinical incidents. [140008]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government established the National Patient Safety Agency (NPSA) to improve the safety of patients by promoting a culture of reporting and learning from clinical incidents in the National Health Service. The NPSA has developed a new National Reporting and Learning System (NRLS) to collect reports which will be rolled out across NHS organisations in England and Wales. The NRLS will store anonymous data used to identify national trends and patterns of errors and system failures so that the NPSA can develop practical solutions to address them.

The NPSA is working on a range of tools and has appointed a regional network of 31 patient safety managers to support NHS managers in developing a more open and fair culture and in responding effectively when things go wrong locally. As the NRLS is rolled out, the NPSA will offer root-cause analysis training to every NHS organisation to encourage thorough and objective investigations and support local learning. Further information is available at www.npsa.nhs.uk.

The recently published Chief Medical Officer's (CMO) report, 'Making Amends', makes 19 recommendations to reform the way in which clinical negligence claims are handled in the NHS. The CMC's proposals include the introduction of a duty of candour for everyone working in health care, and measures to encourage staff to report adverse incidents and so improve patient safety.

Junior Doctors

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many junior doctors have been working longer than (a) 72 hours, (b) 56 hours and (c) 48 hours per week in the last month for which figures are available. [137765]

Mr. Hutton: Data currently collected on junior doctors' hours does not allow detailed analysis against the levels requested and simply indicates whether or not posts comply with the New Deal weekly limit of 56 hours a week. Initial figures from monitoring carried out in September 2003, suggest that 95 per cent. of junior doctors are working under 56 hours.

Kaiser Permanente

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what Kaiser Permanente facilities he visited on his recent trip to the US; whom he met; and what officials accompanied him. [138496]

Dr. John Reid: I visited a Kaiser Permanente facility in central Washington DC and met leading staff, including:

Marilyn J Kawamura—(president, Kaiser Foundation Health Plan of the Mid-Atlantic States)

Stanley J Kramer MD DABP FAAP—(area medical director, DC and Suburban Maryland Mid-Atlantic Permanente Medical Group)

Susan McDonagh MS RD CDE—(director, Regional Diabetes Program Mid-Atlantic Permanente Medical Group)

Robert M Crane—(senior vice president, Research and Health Policy Mid-Atlantic Permanente Medical Group)

Lyda Karm MD—(primary care centre lead, West End Medical Centre Mid-Atlantic Permanente Medical Group)

I was accompanied by a number of Departmental officials.

Living Wills

Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice his Department gives to (a) hospital trusts and (b) primary care trusts about the validity of living wills. [139721]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Health professionals cannot be required by living wills, or advance directives, to provide particular treatments, since they may not be appropriate. However, advance refusal of treatment may be valid. Guidance on the validity of advance refusals is included in the Department of Health's "Reference Guide to Consent for Examination or Treatment" published in March 2001. The reference guide is available at www.doh.gov.uk/consent.

Locums

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost per year in the NHS was of employing a locum for (a) heart disease care and (b) medical emergencies in the last year for which figures are available. [137149]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 11 November 2003]: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether NHS trusts are able to pay unlimited amounts for replacement locums for suspended consultants. [137374]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 12 November 2003]: National Health Service bodies are encouraged to use only commercial agencies listed in the National Medical Locum Agency Framework Agreement for the recruitment of locums. This is a list approved by the Department, with agreed quality standards and costs to help obtain value for money. Information on the amounts paid by trusts and the reasons for locums being employed are not held centrally.

National Service Framework for Long Term Conditions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) consultant neurologists, (b) physiotherapists and (c) speech and language therapists he estimates are needed to implement the National Service Framework for Long Term Conditions from 2005; how many of each group are in post; what action he is taking to make up any shortfall; and if he will make a statement. [140114]

Dr. Ladyman: The national service framework (NSF) for long term conditions will focus on improving the standard of neurology services across England. It will also address some of the generic issues that are important to people with non-neurological disabilities, such as access to rehabilitation services; provision of good quality information; support for carers; and, access to community equipment, assistive technology and wheelchairs.

We recognise the important role that doctors, allied health professionals and other professionals play in providing appropriate services and support for people with long term conditions, their families and carers. We are increasing the numbers of these professionals as part of the NHS Plan commitment to increase the national health service work force.

As at 30 June 2003, there were 407 consultants in neurology, representing an increase of 33 per cent. since September 1999. We are working towards increasing their numbers further and in 2003–04 have provided central funding to support implementation of a further 10 specialist registrar posts in neurology. Trusts will also have the opportunity to create up to an additional 20 locally funded specialist registrar training opportunities.

We are also increasing the numbers of speech and language therapists and physiotherapists entering training each year. There are now 140 more (an increase of 31 per cent.) training places for speech and language therapy and 811 more (an increase of 60 per cent.) for physiotherapy.

Additionally, as part of the process of developing the NSF work is in hand to consider relevant work force issues such as the need for increased numbers of staff but also for new ways of working, including skill mix, role extensions and multi-disciplinary working, based around patient needs. We expect that the group looking at these workforce issues will make recommendations on the future supply of professionals and development of new ways of working to inform national workforce planning processes.

Maintenance Costs

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the backlog maintenance cost to reach estate code condition was in each English region for (a) NHS trusts and (b) mental health trusts in the last six years. [137367]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 November 2003]: The backlog of maintenance should be seen in the context of a National Health Service estate in England comprising 25 million square metres, with a book value of £24 billion and a replacement cost of around £72 billion. Current record investment of £4 billion in 2003–04, rising to over £6 billion in 2005–06, will regenerate the NHS estate and reduce maintenance because by 2040, 40 per cent. of the estate will be less than 15 years old.

The information requested is shown in the tables.

Backlog maintenance covers a wide variety of conditions, including that which is just below compliance standard. The figures provided do not indicate levels of risk to patients. Trusts manage high-risk deficiencies as a priority in order to ensure that premises are intrinsically safe and not of concern to local enforcement bodies.

Notes:
1. The figure provided for All Trusts include those given for Mental Health Trusts.
2. Owing to changes in structure at all levels in the NHS during the period of the question, direct comparison at regional level between years is not always possible even for organisations with the same name.
3. The figures provided for Mental Health Trusts derive only from those designated by the Department of Health as being exclusively Mental Health and exclude any trusts where Mental Health services only form part of the Trust's defined functions.

Health Care (Manchester)

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what adjustment he will make to the funding of (a) primary health care trusts and (b) other health trusts in Manchester following the adjustment to the census figures for Manchester made by the Office of National Statistics on 4 November. [137224]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 November 2003]: Revenue allocations for the provision of health care, made to primary care trusts for 2003–04 to 2005–06, were announced on 11 December 2002.

Any changes in population figures will be used for the next round of allocations. Preparatory work will begin early next year.

Market Research

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department spent on (a) opinion polling and (b) market research in the last financial year; and if he will make a statement. [139982]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A list of expenditure incurred on opinion polling, and market research in the last financial year could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

A list of research projects carried out by the Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies for the financial year 2002–03 is available in the Library. These lists may not include all research projects, as some information is not centrally available.

We are committed to consulting and involving the public to help inform both policy formulation and the delivery of better quality public service. Responsive public services are an important part of the Modernising Government initiative.

We only conduct or commission market or opinion research when it is justified by the needs of the policy programme and is the most economical, efficient and effective way to achieve the purpose.

Medical Research

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what impact assessment the Department has made of the adoption of the EU Clinical Trials Directive (2001/20/EC) on the UK non-commercial medical research sector. [136417]

Miss Melanie Johnson: As part of the consultations on the UK regulations, a partial regulatory impact assessment (RIA) was provided revealing potential increased costs. Universities, national health service trusts and charities were invited to submit estimates on recurring and non-recurring compliance costs for non-commercial trials. The comments received revealed the difficulty of estimating costs with so much uncertainty surrounding the Commission Directives.

The Government has taken further steps to attempt to influence the Commission in its consideration of a Commission Directive on Good Clinical Practice and also in reviewing guidance that the Commission published earlier this year with a view to avoiding any unnecessary costs. This work is continuing.

In another initiative designed to reduce the cost impact, the Department and the Medical Research Council are working with experts to find practical solutions to the issues identified in the partial impact assessment. Details of the project can be found on www.ncchta.org/eudirective/index.asp.

Further information on the partial regulatory impact assessment and the proposed UK implementing regulations is available on the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency's website at www.mhra.gov.uk in the MHRA Consultative Documents: MLXs issued in 2003, MIX 287.

Mental Health

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the extent to which and reasons why people with mental health problems self-fund their (a) medication, (b) treatment and (c) care. [140108]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department of Health has made no assessment of the extent to which and the reasons why people with mental health problems seek treatment and care within the independent sector.

However, we are concerned to ensure that all those who are assessed as needing treatment and care should be able to receive it within the national health service at the appropriate time.

This is why we have made mental health a priority for reform and have increased investment in mental health services. It is also why we welcomed the report published by Mind, entitled "The Hidden Cost of Mental Health", as a helpful contribution to our understanding of the needs of people with mental health problems and why we are engaged in an extensive public consultation to consider what more we can do to improve choice, responsiveness and equity in services.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of seasonal affective disorder there were in each winter since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [139869]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department of Health does not capture central information about the numbers of people with depression that varies seasonally. Diagnosis of depression is a matter for the responsible clinician taking into account all the various factors that may contribute. Although seasonal affective disorder is not listed in the International Classification of Mental and Behavioural Disorders (ICD-10), we do understand that there are a number of people that appear to be affected in this way. Whatever the causes, and we do not fully understand them all, serious depression is a matter of great concern to those delivering mental health services. Improving mental health services is a priority for the Government.

Mersey Regional Ambulance Service

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place a copy of the occurrence log kept by Mersey Regional Ambulance Service for the weekend of 1–2 November in the Library. [137780]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 11 November 2003]: The information requested is not held centrally.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures have been put in place by the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service to ensure that information from patient report forms is (a) collated effectively and (b) used as part of the clinical audit process. [138435]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Mersey Regional Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust has introduced a revised procedure which ensures that the collation of data from the patient report form is audited daily by the station officer to ensure both completion and quality of documentation. The patient report forms are also sorted into the correct clinical areas and delivered on time and to the central audit department. In addition a random selection of all patient report forms are checked against a set standard.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the salary is of the communications manager at the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service; and if he will place a copy of the job description for this post in the Library. [138437]

Miss Melanie Johnson: A copy of the job description for the post of communications manager at Mersey Regional Ambulance Service has been placed in the Library.

The salary information requested is not available.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place a copy of the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service lone worker policy in the Library. [138714]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 17 November 2003]: A copy has been placed in the Library.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes have been introduced by the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service to ensure that all staff, including those in stations outside Liverpool, receive staff bulletins. [139074]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Mersey Regional Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust has a new communications strategy in place. This ensures that all staff have access to the right information, at appropriate times and places.

Midwifery

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 18 September, reference 127592 on midwives administering, if he will list the non-medical products midwives can supply; what the criteria are for such supply; and what financial arrangements apply, with particular reference to the right to reclaim costs incurred. [133328]

Mr. Hutton: There is no list of inclusions or omissions regarding the non-medical products that may be used by midwives within the course of their clinical practice. Such decisions are taken locally by employing organisations. There are no special financial arrangements in place outside normal budgetary procedures.

Those midwives trained as nurse prescribers will be able to prescribe these products, including compression hosiery, listed in Part IX of the drug tariff.

Migraine

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what proportion of migraine sufferers being treated in the NHS fall within the target of a maximum 16-week wait between referral and first out-patient appointment; [139876]

(2) what proportion of migraine sufferers treated in the NHS were (a) misdiagnosed and (b) inappropriately treated in 2002. [139877]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not collected centrally.

We are taking steps to improve services for patients with headache. In April 2003, for example, we published guidelines for the appointment of general practitioners (GPs) with special interests in the delivery of clinical services in headache. This should help to raise the profile of headache and migraine with health professionals.

The Modernisation Agency will be managing a project over the next two years to improve access to neurology services. The project will work closely with professionals, patients and other stakeholders, and will complement other initiatives already under way within the Modernisation Agency, the Department of Health and the national health service.

Since 1 April 2003, the NHS aims to see all patients within 21 weeks of a GP referral and, once on an inpatient waiting list, patients should be admitted within 12 months. From 1 April 2004, waiting times will further reduce to a maximum waiting time for a first outpatient appointment of 16 weeks. The maximum waiting time for an inpatient appointment will be cut from 12 months to nine months.

These maximum waiting times will fall on a staged basis each year to three months (for outpatients) and six months (for inpatients) by 2005. The Government aims to reduce the maximum wait for any stage of treatment to three months by 2008 (subject to recruitment and reform).

Minor Operations

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to set up units to carry out minor operations in Buckinghamshire. [140003]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have no plans to set up units to carry out minor operations in Buckinghamshire. It is our policy, within the framework set out in the NHS Plan and the 'Shifting the Balance of Power' initiative, to devolve funding decisions to the front line. It is now for primary care trusts, in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders, to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services. They are in the best position to do this because of the specialist knowledge they have of the local community.

I am informed by Thames Valley SHA that the development of out of hours arrangements in Buckinghamshire will include emergency minor injury work across the area. Current development of general practitioners with special interests in ear, nose and throat, orthopaedics and plastics will work in the community undertaking minor operations/injuries.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many units to carry out minor operations have been set up in Buckinghamshire since 1997. [140004]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally.

Mothers' Milk

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department collects on trends in respect of the presence of (a) brominated flame retardants and (b) phthalates in mothers' milk; and if he will make a statement. [139213]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that the Government has no current representative data on the levels of brominated flame retardants or phthalates in human breast milk.

MRSA

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of MRSA in hospitals have been reported in each of the last five years; in which areas; and if he will make a statement on action his Department is taking to address MRSA. [139401]

Miss Melanie Johnson: These data are not collected centrally. The national mandatory surveillance system for methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections (bacteraemias), started in April 2001. Information from this is published in the Communicable Disease Report Weekly and is available at http://www.hpa.org.uk/cdr/PDFfiles/2002/cdr2502.pdf and http://www.hpa.org.uk/cdr/PDFfiles/2003/cdr2503.pdf

The Chief Medical Officer's long-term strategy to prevent and reduce healthcare associated infections in the national health service, announced earlier this year, will set out actions to control all health care associated infections, including MRSA. This builds on our current programme of work and will be published shortly.

National Adoption Register

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what performance target was set for placements resulting from the National Adoption Register; [117271]

(2) how many children have been placed with new families as a result of the introduction of the National Adoption Register; [117272]

(3) what has been the total expenditure by his Department on the National Adoption Register since August 2001. [117273]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

No performance targets were set for the Adoption Register for England and Wales. It is expected that the Register will help us achieve our target to increase the number of adoptions from care by 50 per cent. by 2006. We have already increased adoptions by 25 per cent. and are on course to meet our target. Given the complexities governing the placement of children with adoptive families, we did not feel it would be appropriate to set a target for the Register. Our aim of course is to provide children with placements that meet their assessed needs. The needs of the children must be paramount in the process and it is vital that the Register provides viable links for suitable families who may be able to deal with the children's often very complex needs.

In just one year the Register has become an established part of the adoption process with a national co-ordinating role. The register has generated 1,250 viable links across England and Wales that were agreed as worth exploring in detail by adoption agencies. At the end of October there had been 48 matches made between children and families. This means that there are 48 children who have found families as a result of links generated by the Register.

The Register is being operated by Norwood under a three year contract with the Department of Health and National Assembly for Wales at a total cost of £633,333 plus VAT per annum. The current contract is due to end in August 2004. We will be reviewing the impact of the Register on the delivery of adoption services over the coming months.

NHS Catering Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the central contracts to provide catering services for the NHS. [138184]

Mr. Hutton: There is no central contract for the national health service for catering services, due to the diversity of requirements throughout the NHS. In December 2003, the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency is due to release a procurement guide for catering services that will include information on the catering services market and suppliers, and will give advice on the different types of service available to national health service trusts. This guide will be available from Corporate Affairs, NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency, 80 Lightfoot Street, Chester CH2 3AD.

NHS Estate

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 3 November 2003, Official Report, column 520W, on the NHS Estate, what information he collates on the definition of patient-occupied floor space. [138193]

Mr. Hutton: Information is collected from national health service trusts on the gross internal floor area of all hospital departments which provide patient care and where patients are exposed to risk and the percentage of it (if any) that is not compliant with statutory health and safety and fire safety requirements.

NHS Expenditure

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much capital expenditure there has been in the NHS in England in each of the last five years; and how much of that spending was attributable to private finance initiative projects. [137091]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 November 2003]: The information requested is shown in the table.

Dr. Jack Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what per capita expenditure was on the NHS in (a) England and (b) Cumbria in (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 2002–03; what projections he has made for future years; and if he will make a statement. [138469]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 17 November 2003]: The information requested is shown in the tables.

NHS Live 2004

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on plans for the NHS Live 2004 event; what the budget for the event is; and who is responsible for organising the event; [138488]

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the projected costs of the NHS Live event are; and if he will make a statement. [139246]

Mr. Hutton: NHS Live is a long-term programme of action, designed to accelerate the pace of change and improvement throughout the National Health Service and social care. It will involve patients at every stage of its development and will actively embrace an ever increasing number of staff in delivering a patient centred service offering greater choice.

In addition, the NHS Live programme will be closely linked to the three year planning process starting in October 2004.

With the full support of senior teams throughout the Service, NHS Live is the first programme of its type to engage staff across the NHS and social care.

The annual focal point will be an event and tradeshow. The first will be held at ExCeL, in the London Docklands between 5–7 July 2004. It will reflect on the changes and challenges of the past, learn from them and push forward healthcare improvement.

The final budget for NHS Live, which has not been finalised yet, will match the amount generated through sponsorship and exhibition revenue.

NHS Live will be managed by officials on behalf of the Department's board. In common with other major Department of Health events, external suppliers will be appointed as necessary.

NHS Reorganisation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list occasions when NHS trusts and their predecessor NHS bodies spent money on publicising the benefits of an anticipated reorganisation of the NHS in advance of the necessary legislation being enacted; and if he will make a statement; [137504]

(2) what the cost was of each reorganisation of the NHS since 1977. [137564]

Mr. Hutton: Detailed information on the costs, including publicity costs, of reorganisations in the national health service since 1977 is not collected centrally. Any resultant savings at the local level are put toward patient care.

National Institute for Clinical Excellence

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on (a) where responsibility for implementing National Institute for Clinical Excellence guidelines lies and (b) recent performance in implementation. [138986]

Ms Rosie Winterton: National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) clinical guidelines are prepared for the guidance of national health service clinical staff and their employing bodies, who are responsible for their implementation. NICE has published seven major clinical guidelines, beginning in December 2002. At this early stage we have made no formal assessment of progress towards implementation.

NM Rothschild and Sons Ltd.

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on services provided to his Department by NM Rothschild and Sons Ltd. since 1977. [139968]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The financial records of the Department do not show any services being provided to the Department of Health by NM Rothchild and Sons Ltd.

Nurses

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) hospital and (b) community full-time equivalent nurses were employed by (i) Taunton and Somerset NHS Hospital Trust and (ii) Taunton Deane Primary Care Trust in each year since 1997. [137379]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of hospital and community full-time equivalent nurses employed by the Taunton and Somerset National Health Service Hospital Trust and Taunton Deane Primary Care Trust are shown in the table as well as the number in Somerset Coast PCT and Mendip PCT.

4. In 2002 Taunton and Somerset NHS Trust transferred further staff to Taunton Deane PCT.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the National Health Service spent on hiring agency nursing staff in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [136871]

Mr. Hutton: Provisional figures for 2002–03 are shown in the table.

Expenditure on Agency Nurses in England—2002–2003

Agency nursing staff	£
National Health Service Trusts	553,065,986
Strategic Health Authorities	21,579
Primary Care Trust	73,685,708
Total	626,773,273

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) district nurses and (b) health visitors there were by (i) headcount and (ii) whole-time equivalent in (A) England and (B) each region in each of the last six years. [138351]

Mr. Hutton: District nurses and health visitors are part of the qualified community nursing workforce. Between 1997 and 2002, the qualified community nursing workforce has increased by 17 per cent. Information on the community nursing workforce is shown in the table by national health service regional office area between 1997 and 2001 and by Government offices for the regions and strategic health authority area in 2002.

Olympus Optical Co. (UK) Ltd

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will meet the hon. Member for West Chelmsford and a representative of Olympus Optical Co (UK) Ltd, a constituent. [139997]

Mr. Hutton: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible, and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Paddington Health Campus

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the estimated patient capacity is of the proposed Paddington Health Campus; and how much that has increased from the estimate in 2000. [131866]

Mr. Hutton: The Paddington Health Campus will have provision for 1088 inpatient beds. This is an increase of 80 beds in comparison with the current total for equivalent services at St Mary's and the Royal Brompton and Harefield National Health Service Trusts. The original forecast projected bed numbers was approximately 1,000. The campus that is now planned is 20 per cent. larger in size and will treat a higher number of acutely ill patients.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place a copy of the contract between the Paddington Health Campus project and Christow in the Library. [132572]

Mr. Hutton: Christow, a public relations consultancy, has been appointed on an interim basis, pending selection of permanent communications advisers via formal procurement. An advertisement was sent to the Official Journal of the European Union on 10 October 2003.

It is normal practice for such contracts to be commercially confidential, as releasing this information would entail disclosing a third party's commercial confidence. Exemption 13 of the Open Government Code of Practice therefore applies.

Painkillers

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many painkillers available over the counter contain codeine phosphate. [140053]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave him on 18 November 2003.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will answer the Question from the hon. Member for Cotswold tabled on 22 October, ref.134548. [140015]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I replied to the hon. Member's question on Wednesday 19 November.

Patient Advice and Liaison Services

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS trusts and primary care trusts in England have functioning patient advice and liaison services. [140085]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect data on the number of patient advice and liaison services (PALS). Strategic health authorities (SHAs) are responsible for monitoring the implementation of PALS and in February 2003 they reported to the Department that 98 per cent. of NHS trusts and primary care trusts (PCTs) had an active PALS. In responding to the recent Health Select Committee Public Expenditure Inquiry in October 2003, the SHAs established that, of the 15 NHS trusts and PCTs that did not have an active PALS at the time of the February report, 14 now have a PALS in place. The remaining trust currently provides a limited service, which is expected to be fully operational by December 2003.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out the Department's definition of an active Patient Advice and Liaison Service. [140105]

Ms Rosie Winterton: An active Patient Advice and Liaison Service (PALS) is a service identified by its trust as working to deliver the published core PALS service standards.

NHS trusts and primary care trusts are responsible for establishing PALS that deliver the core PALS service standards published by the Department. Trusts are responsible for deciding how to deliver the service in a way that responds to local needs and strategic health authorities monitor trust performance against those standards.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will (a) collate and (b) publish information on the implementation of patient advice and liaison service, including (i) the percentage of NHS trusts and primary care trusts that have an active PALS and (ii) monitoring of the national PALS standards. [140113]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect data on the number of patient advice and liaison services (PALS). Strategic health authorities (SHAs) are responsible for monitoring the implementation of PALS and in February 2003 they reported to the Department that 98 per cent. of NHS trusts and primary care trusts (PCTs) had an active PALS. In responding to the recent Health Select Committee Public Expenditure Inquiry in October 2003, the SHAs established that, of the 15 NHS trusts and PCTs that did not have an active PALS at the time of the February report, 14 now have a PALS in place. The remaining trust currently provides a limited service, which is expected to be fully operational by December 2003.

SHAs are responsible for monitoring trust performance against the published standards. The Department published the core PALS service standards in January 2002 ("Supporting the implementation of patient advice and liaison services: A resource pack"). These were reviewed and revised in July 2003.

Patient Surveys

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 17 July 2003, Official Report, column 631W, to the hon. Member for Oxford West and Abingdon (Dr. Harris), on patient surveys, if he will place a copy of the analysis commissioned by his Department in the Library. [138350]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Following publication of the National Cancer Patient Survey in July 2002, the Department of Health commissioned a further analysis of the data to inform the development of future surveys. This was an exploratory piece of work to see if there were any inter-dependencies that might affect the patient experience. The output will not be a formal report but rather a series of detailed statistical tables. These will be made available to the Commission for Health Improvement, which has taken over responsibility for the national patient survey programme.

Patients' Forums

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will introduce legislation to rename patients' forums as patient and public involvement forums. [140083]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No. The Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health decided to re-brand patients' forums as patient and public involvement forums to help the public understand their roles. There is no statutory bar to their doing this.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the (a) number and (b) rate of vacancies within patients' forums on the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement on progress to meet the minimum number of staff in each patients' forum. [139863]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As at 19 November 2003 the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health (CPPIH) had received 4,254 applications from people to fill the 4,018 patients' forum places available for 1 December 2003. This is the total for the minimum number of seven members needed for all 574 forums in England. Inevitably some forums have attracted greater interest than others. However, CPPIH is still recruiting and applications are being received throughout the country on a daily basis.

Patients' forums cannot employ staff because they are unincorporated organisations. However arrangements have been in place since September for each patients' forum to receive staff support from local network providers.

Physiotherapy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether there are restrictions on the number of domiciliary visits by physiotherapists to individual patients. [138993]

Mr. Hutton: There are no centrally imposed restrictions in England.

Private Diagnostic and Treatment Centres

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library correspondence between his Department's officials and the Oxford Strategic Health Authority about private diagnostic and treatment centres. [131909]

Mr. Hutton: The procurement of independent sector treatment centres is being managed under strict Official Journal of the European Commission process. Contracts are not yet at financial close and therefore the correspondence with Thames Valley Strategic Health Authority is commercial in confidence and its release would have an impact on the next stage of negotiation.

Private Finance Initiative

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list NHS PFI projects valued at more than £50 million for which approval has been granted by the Department; what the projected cost is of each of these projects; what net impact each project will have on the cost base of the NHS trusts involved; and what the projected completion date is for each project. [136893]

Mr. Hutton: Information on private finance initiative (PFI) schemes which have been given approval with their capital value; the revenue consequences of schemes that have signed contracts; and the projected completion dates for those who have yet to reach financial close have been placed in the Library. It is not possible to include details of the unitary payments for schemes yet to reach financial close as they are not finalised and are commercially sensitive.

Nor is it possible to give the net impact on the cost base of the National Health Service trusts without examining all the individual business cases and thereby incurring disproportionate costs.

For schemes which have not reached financial close, that is still in development, the capital cost is estimated based on highest costed option.

Prostate Health

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government is taking to raise public awareness about the prostate and its functions. [138994]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 17 November 2003]: The Department wants men to know what their prostate gland is, what is does and what can go wrong with it. However, it is important not to scare men. We therefore need to raise awareness in a responsible way.

The Prostate Cancer Advisory Group has formed a sub-group to take forward work on information for the general public and public awareness of prostate cancer. General prostate health awareness is likely to form part of this work.

In addition the Department has provided funding for the following public awareness projects:

Prostate Cancer Charity—increasing the information available about prostate cancer

Prostate Cancer Charity—improving awareness of the risks and symptoms of prostate cancer in African and Afro-Caribbean men in Britain

The Database of Individual Patient Experiences in prostate cancer.

Rickets

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the incidence of rickets in children. [136216]

Dr. Ladyman: Hospital episode statistics indicate that the incidence of rickets in children is very uncommon, as the table shows.

Primary diagnosis (ICD-10 E55.0) vitamin D deficiency—Rickets, active[1]

	Count
Age on admission 0–17 years—count of finished admission episodes NHS hospitals, England 2001–02	57

[1] Excludes—Rickets: coeliac, Crohn's,
inactive,
renal,
vitamin D resistant.

Notes:
1. Admissions—Admissions are defined as the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.
2. Diagnosis (Primary Diagnosis)—The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.
3. Grossing— Figures have not (yet) been adjusted for shortfalls in data (ie the data are ungrossed).

Safety Incidents

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the latest statistics on safety incidents within the NHS from the National Reporting and Learning System, including regional breakdown. [139241]

Mr. Hutton: The National Reporting and Learning System for adverse events is being developed by the National Patient Safety Agency (NPSA) and it will be implemented across the National Health Service in England and Wales by December 2004. Once the system is established, statistics will be published by the NPSA on a regular basis.

The NPSA published a report on the data collected as part of a pilot for the new system on 8 May 2003. This report is available as part of the NPSA's 2003–04 business plan at http://www.npsa.nhs.uk. The NPSA also plans to publish a report on information collected during a further testing and development phase early in 2004, once analysis of the figures is completed.

Sandwich Contract

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the tender for the public private partnership contract to provide sandwiches for the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [138183]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service contract for sandwiches was not a public private partnership. After a joint exercise by the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency and the Office of Government Commerce buying solutions, the NHS contract was extended to all public sector contracting authorities from 1 August 2003. Copies of the tender document are available from Corporate Affairs, NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency, 80 Lightfoot Street, Chester CH2 3AD.

Smog

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the (a) mortality and (b) morbidity caused by smog (i) in England and (ii) broken down by local authority area in each year (A) since 1997 and (B) to 2006. [139186]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Estimates of numbers of deaths brought forward and respiratory hospital admissions associated with air pollution in England for certain years between 1997 and 2002 are shown in the table. These are based on the methodology published in the 1998 report by the Department's Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants—"Quantification of the Effects of Air Pollution on Health in the United Kingdom"—updated for more recent pollution levels. A projection to 2005 is also given.

Heaths effects of air pollutants in England (deaths brought forward and respiratory hospital admissions)

Year	Particles (PM^{10}) deaths brought forward	Particles (PM^{10}) respiratory admissions	Sulphur dioxide deaths brought forward	Sulphur dioxide respiratory admissions	Nitrogen dioxide respiratory admissions[2]
1997	7,000	6,900			8,300
1998	6,500	6,300	1,700	1,300	7,400
1999	6,200	6,100			7,100
2001	5,900	5,800	1,100	800	6,400
2002	5,600	5,500			5,200
2005[1]	5,[illegible]00	5,300	800	600	4,800

Notes:

[1] Projections based on current policies.

[2] More uncertain—figures rounded to the nearest 100.

Estimates exclude effects of particles on cardiovascular admissions and effects on life expectancy as a result of long term exposure to particles. It is unclear whether the results for different pollutants can be added together.

Estimates for deaths brought forward and respiratory hospital admissions for ozone are not available for the requested time period.

Estimates are not available by local authority area. The uncertainties will increase when estimates are based on smaller areas.

Social Care Director

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for (1) what reasons the Department's Social Care Director is not a member of the Department's Board; [139142]

(2) what (a) accountabilities and (b) reporting lines the Social Care Director will have in respect of staff in the Department of (i) Health and (ii) Education and Skills. [139143]

Dr. Ladyman: The national director for social care at the Department of Health will be accountable for strengthening the relationships the Department has with social care in local government and elsewhere and for ensuring that all policy development in the Department starts by thinking about the whole health and social care system.

The national director will report to the director of strategy, a member of the Department's management board. All board members will have responsibilities for aspects of social care, through the teams they manage. No other national director is a board member. The national director will work closely with the Department for Education and Skills and other Government Departments but will be accountable only to the Department for Health.

Social Services (Somerset)

Mr Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total cost to Somerset Social Services for children in care was in each year since 1999–2000. [136552]

Margaret Hodge: The gross expenditure on children looked after as reported by Somerset is as follows:

Year	Expenditure £
1999–2000	7,031,000
2000–2001	7,125,000
2001–2002	6,946,000

2001–02 is the latest year available.

St. George's Hospital

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many public service agreement targets St. George's Hospital, London has. [139040]

Mr. Hutton: Local public service agreements are voluntary agreements between central Government and a council to deliver better services for local people. Wandsworth council, the local council in the area in which St. George's Hospital is based, is currently in the process of agreeing its local public service agreements targets.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what help St. George's Hospital, London will be given to achieve waiting list targets. [139042]

Mr. Hutton: St. George's Healthcare National Health Service trust expects to achieve the waiting list targets for the year ending 2003–04. I am informed that the NHS Modernisation Agency has been invited by the trust to help develop improved waiting list management systems and a more efficient service for patients. The trust has also participated in the London patients' choice initiative; and has been awarded funds to support "Action On" projects in urology and plastics.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting list times for St. George's Hospital, London were in (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000 and (c) 2001–02. [139047]

Mr. Hutton: Information on median waiting times for St. George's Healthcare National Health Service Trust is shown in the following table.

Average waiting times for elective inpatient admission at St. George's Healthcare NHS Trust

Year ending	Median waiting times (months)
March 1999	2.74
March 2000	2.95
March 2002	3.05

Source:
Department of Health form KH07.

The figures shown are estimates based on aggregate data, categorised into waiting time bands, and do not reflect shifts in the waiting time profiles within these bands, only between bands. The median is not very sensitive to reductions in maximum waiting times, and it is possible to see a rise in the median, while reducing maximum waiting times because of shifts in low time bands. Short-term progress on delivering maximum waiting times (including in-year tail-gunning) will not necessarily translate into a reduction in the median waiting time. Our policy, therefore, is to focus attention on the number of patients waiting the longest, and in each waiting time band.

Staff Exclusions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of possible savings to the NHS if all staff exclusions were dealt with in six months. [140007]

Mr. Hutton: The National Audit Office in its report "The Management of Suspensions of Clinical Staff in NHS Hospital and Ambulance Trusts in England" has made an assessment of the possible savings.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to respond to findings by the National Audit Office on staff exclusions, with particular reference to (a) practice by trusts in following procedural guidelines, (b) the provision of cost information and (c) the use of confidentiality clauses in settlements. [140009]

Mr. Hutton: We are currently considering how the findings of the National Audit Office (NAO) report relate to the new framework for exclusion, which we are discussing with the British Medical Association. The NAO report will be discussed at a Public Accounts Committee hearing in the New Year, and the Government will respond formally to any recommendations that the committee decides to make.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to ensure that trusts (a) support excluded clinical staff and (b) enable them to continue their professional development. [140017]

Mr. Hutton: We are discussing with the British Medical Association a new framework for exclusions, including the provision of support: mechanisms for those staff subject to exclusion.

Staff:Patient Ratios

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the staff to patient ratio in the NHS hospitals in Havering is. [137331]

Mr. Hutton: Figures on staff to patient ratios are not collected centrally. Information on the number of staff and activity at Barking, Havering and Redbridge National Health Service Trust is shown in the tables.

Mr. Hutton: This information is not collected centrally.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on the use of televisions with stand-by units within NHS premises. [139196]

Mr. Hutton: Televisions are in use throughout National Health Service premises. The vast majority of modern stand-alone televisions in use will have stand-by units incorporated within the sets.

Waiting Times

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the average waiting times for cleft lip and palate surgery for children in Greater London in each year since 2000. [136067]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer issued 6 November 2003]: The information requested is shown in the table.

Notes:

Admissions

Admissions are defined as the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.

Grossing

Figures are grossed for both coverage and missing/invalid clinical data, except for 2001–02 which is not yet adjusted for shortfalls.

Main Operation

The main operation is the first recorded operation in the HES data set, and is usually the most resource intensive procedure performed during the episode. It is appropriate to use main operation when looking at admission details, e.g. Time Waited, but the figures for "all operations count of episodes" give a more complete count of episodes with operations.

Time Waited

Time waited statistics from Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) are not the same as the published waiting list statistics. HES provides counts and time waited for all patients admitted to hospital within a given period whereas the published waiting list statistics count those waiting for treatment on a specific date and how long they have been on the waiting list. Also, HES calculates the time waited as the difference between the admission and decision to admit dates. Unlike published waiting list statistics, this is not adjusted for self-deferrals or periods of medical/social suspension.

Ward Housekeepers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Oxford, West and Abingdon (Dr. Harris) of 14 October 2003, Official Report, column 43W, on ward housekeepers, if he will list the hospitals (a) which have already begun to introduce ward housekeeping services and (b) which have yet to begin to introduce this service. [138195]

Mr. Hutton: The latest available information has been placed in the Library.

Website

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of the content and design of his Department's website. [139338]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A programme of research among users of the Department's website was undertaken in Autumn 2001. The objective was to inform changes to the site design, notably to the home page and top-level section pages, which were implemented during 2002. These re-designs were supported by usability testing (observing users carrying out specified tasks). Tracking research was conducted late in 2002 to assess progress and further inform future development.

In November 2002 the Department began working with the Office of the e-Envoy to migrate the Department's website to the new Central Government Infrastructure. As part of this process and based on the findings of the user research exercises and feedback from website users, all content was reviewed. The Department is now in the process of implementing major improvements which will address the key needs of site users, namely the site structure, more targeted quality content, improved searching, consistency of design and branding, improved navigation and meeting accessibility standards for users with disabilities. The new website will go live at the end of 2003.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Post Office Card Accounts

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of Post Office card account applications were started but not completed in each of the last three years. [140098]

Mr. Timms: These are matters that fall within the day-to-day responsibility of Post Office Ltd and I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions the handbook for postmasters operating the Post Office Card Account has been changed since the start of financial year 2003–04; and if she will list, for each update, the principal changes incorporated. [139885]

Mr. Timms: These are matters that fall within the day-to-day responsibility of Post Office Ltd. and I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

CERN Project

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of UK funds directed towards the CERN project is being treated as capital against resource. [139061]

Ms Hewitt: At this point in time, the UK subscription to CERN is not formally divided into capital and resource and is currently regarded as resource expenditure. This is an area of discussion between HM Treasury, the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council and my department. It should be noted that CERN is currently in the middle of a 12 year, €3.2 billion project to construct the Large Hadron Collider (LHC), which will be the world's most powerful particle accelerator. Its expected commissioning date is April 2007.

Whilst capital spend at CERN will fall to almost zero in 2007 when the LHC machine is completed, CERN have negotiated a loan to facilitate the expenditure profile with a repayment schedule to 2011. This will mean that a proportion of the UK subscription will be used for capital repayment to 2011. In parallel, as the operations and exploitation phase begins, an increasing fraction of the UK subscription will be devoted to meeting the associated operating costs. The following table of capital expenditure is estimated by taking the UK's share of CERN's capital spending plans.

UK CERN subscription and UK share of CERN's capital expenditure plans

[1]The figures are in pounds and UK financial years, but the subscription is actually set in Swiss Francs and calendar years, and also varies according to the UK's net national income in comparison to that of other Member States. The figures for 2003–4 and onwards are latest estimates.

In addition, the UK is supporting the construction and operation of a number of experiments at CERN as part of its domestic particle physics budget. These consist of large pieces of capital equipment for CERN but the expenditure is counted as resource for HM Treasury purposes. The LHC capital element of this funding has been estimated by identifying the contributions towards the detectors and similar items and is shown in the following table:

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the resource amount is of the funds that have been directed towards the CERN project. [139062]

Ms Hewitt: CERN is the European Laboratory for Particle Physics, an international organisation established in 1954 in Geneva. The UK is a founder member. The total resource allocated to the UK subscription to CERN over the previous three years and the projected figures for 2003–4 to 2007–08 are shown below[1].

Childhood Obesity

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with other departments about implementing a strategy to tackle childhood obesity. [138733]

Ms Hewitt: None.

Civil Service

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people from science and technology backgrounds have been seconded into the Civil Service in her Department in each of the last five years for which data are available. [138627]

Ms Hewitt: I have not been able to answer this question before Prorogation. I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the number of civil servants from her Department seconded to (a) the private sector, (b) non-governmental organisations and (c) other bodies, since May, broken down by (i) organisation, (ii) grade of civil servant and (iii) start and completion dates. [139160]

In addition to the above figures, since 1 May 2003, 19 DTI senior civil servants have completed a "Week in Business". 15 completed their week in the private sector, two in non-governmental organisations and two in other bodies.

The aim of the "Week in Business" short term external attachment scheme is to help the Department to become more outward facing with a greater understanding of the issues facing our external stakeholders. It is also key in helping members of the SCS to gain experience of different ways of working so that good practice can be adopted internally.

The scheme is also a means of promoting the DTI to our external customers and making them more aware of how the Department operates and what we can offer.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what the United Kingdom's combined heat and power generation capacity was on (a) 1 May 1997 and (b) the latest date for which figures are available; and what estimate she has made of how much capacity will be in place by 2010. [139406]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply and shall write to the hon. Member shortly.

Correspondence

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will reply to the letter of 31 July from the hon. Member for Christchurch about restrictive and anti-competitive practices resulting from the Energy Efficiency Commitment programme. [131391]

Mr. Timms: The hon. Member's letter was transferred to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for answer as her Department has the lead for the Energy Efficiency Commitment programme.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when her Department will reply to the letter of 9 July from the hon. Member for Aylesbury on behalf of Ms C.Clements of Loosley Row, Bucks. [139304]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The reply was sent to the hon. Member for Aylesbury on 19 November 2003.

Credit Card Cheques

Angela Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she will introduce measures to ban the unsolicited sending of credit card cheques to existing card holders. [137020]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government believes the key to protecting consumers from the adverse effects of such practices as the unsolicited sending of credit card cheques is ensuring responsible lending—expecting the industry to carry out adequate checks before sending credit card cheques; and ensuring all information is adequate and transparent. We are not currently considering introducing measures to ban the unsolicited sending of credit card cheques. Our approach is to empower consumers to make informed decisions. To this end we will outline measures in the Consumer Credit White Paper to ensure responsible lending across the range of lending practices.

Any further action is best taken through industry codes of practice. The industry is introducing measures to ensure greater transparency in the issuing of credit card cheques, including the information provided to consumers; and I have asked my officials to work with the industry to examine what further measures are necessary to address the concerns raised by the Treasury Select Committee.

Electricity

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment her Department has made of the effect of a failure of the continental gas interconnector on electricity generation in the United Kingdom. [132437]

Mr. Timms: The DTI-Ofgem "Joint Energy Security of Supply Working Group" (JESS) monitors security of supply of gas and electricity in Great Britain. JESS's work has included discussion of NGT's "Winter Operations Report 2003/04" which assesses the outlook for electricity and gas supplies in the coming winter. The report was published on 14 October, and is available, with Ofgem's comments, on Ofgem's website (www.ofgem.gov.uk). It covered the interaction between electricity generation and gas supply.

NGT's overall assessment for electricity supply in the Great Britain (GB) for this winter was that while the generation margin has risen slightly, it was lower than in previous years, but there would be enough power to meet the forecast demand for electricity this winter under all but the most exceptional circumstances.

NGT's report noted that of the CCGT stations, all but 2.7 GW either have firm gas contracts or are able to use alternative fuels. This represents some 4 per cent. of the total generating capacity that NGT projected for this winter.

Since NGT's report was issued further generating plant has returned from mothball.

In prolonged severe winter weather, delivery of sufficient gas to meet demand (including for electricity generation) would depend on high production levels from the UKCS, and the availability of gas from storage and through the continental gas interconnector.

The interconnector has proved reliable when it is in import mode. As with any offshore infrastructure, the loss of a large supply source would reduce the resilience of the gas network and reduce the availability of gas-fired generation to the electricity network. However, there are strong financial incentives on parties to the interconnector to reduce the incidence and extent of any failures. Furthermore, in recent winters the interconnector has operated mainly in export mode.

NGT are taking a number of steps to reduce the risks to electricity supply that they have identified in the Winter Operations report. For example, they have recently undertaken a tender for additional reserve generating capacity.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the costs to (a) business and (b) consumers of the loss of electricity supply on (i) 28 August, affecting South London and parts of Kent and (ii) 5 September, affecting the East Midlands and West Midlands; and if she will make a statement. [139719]

Mr. Timms: The Department of Trade and Industry has not conducted a formal assessment of the costs of these events on electricity consumers.

The London event affected some 476,000 consumers and the Midlands event affected some 201,000 consumers. In both cases power supplies were restored to all consumers within an hour.

The Department recognises that the consequences of these power failures were serious, with disruption to surface rail, underground street lights and traffic systems, water supply and sewerage systems as well as to electricity users in homes and workplaces.

The Department submitted a memorandum to the Trade and Industry Committee on 14 November 2003 which explains the Department's role in investigating the circumstances of these events, and includes a discussion on specific lessons to be learned from these events and from other recent major power interruptions in America and Europe.

The events are also being investigated by Ofgem. The main objective of Ofgem's investigation is to examine whether there has been a breach or breaches, of the statutory or licence obligations which apply to National Grid Company and the relevant distribution network operators involved.

Energy Supplies

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she intends to publish the Sustainable Energy Policy Network reports (a) First Retrospective Security of Supply Report and (b) Initial Conclusions of Energy Services. [140158]

Mr. Timms: Ofgem expects to publish the first retrospective security of supply report by the end of the year and then to publish subsequent reports every six months. The Government expect to report the initial conclusions on its work on energy services shortly.

Both these reports are part of the work of the Sustainable Energy Policy Network which is implementing the Energy White Paper "Our energy future—creating a low carbon economy".

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many power stations have received planning permission in each year since 1997; what the capacity is of each; how many of them are in operation and what their capacity is; and how many projects which received planning permission have had their permission revoked because they did not commence construction in the stipulated time, with the planned capacity of such plants. [140159]

Mr. Timms: The following power stations in England and Wales have been approved by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and Industry since 1997:

The permissions are normally valid for five years from the date of issue and it is a commercial matter for the developer concerned on whether or not to implement his consent. The Secretary of State has not revoked any permissions. Permissions for power stations in Scotland are a matter for the devolved administration.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 21 October 2003, Official Report, column 491W, on British Energy, how much of the credit facility available to British Energy has been drawn down by the company; and what plans she has to seek to extend this credit facility. [140346]

Mr. Timms: As at 19 November 2003, British Energy had drawn down £112 million of the £200 million credit facility available.

There are no plans to extend the duration of the credit facility. As my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry said in her written statement of 14 October 2003 drawings under the credit facility can be made up to the date of the European Commission's decision on the Government's proposed restructuring aid, or 30 September 2004, whichever is earlier. Repayments under the credit facility have to be made by the earlier of the restructuring effective date or 30 September 2004.

Environmental Protection

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the DTI/Defra Joint Environmental Markets Unit is consulted when her Department carries out regulatory impact assessments of new environmental protection measures to ensure that benefits of the measures to the UK (a) environmental technology and (b) services industry are included. [140074]

Mr. Timms: Regulatory impact assessments (RIAs) of new environmental protection measures are undertaken in accordance with the Cabinet Office Guidelines—"Better Policy Making: A Guide to Regulatory Impact Assessment". Among other things, this says RIAs should take account of the potential dynamic benefits of regulations and an assessment of all the business sectors affected—both positively and negatively. As part of this process, policy-makers consult with relevant stakeholders, including where appropriate representatives of the environmental goods and services industry who will then have the opportunity to make the case for the benefits. Like other parts of Government with an interest, the Joint DTI/Defra Environmental Markets Unit will contribute as appropriate and as part of the policy-making process within Government.

Estate Agents

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 11 September 2003, Official Report, column 391W, on estate agents, how many complaints have been (a) made, (b) investigated and (c) upheld by the Office of Fair Trading since 1 August; what action was taken in relation to each complaint upheld; and if she will make a statement. [139565]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 19 November 2003]: The information is as follows:

(a) The Office of Fair Trading (OFT) received 94 complaints about estate agents between 1 August and 14 November 2003.

(b) All complaints are investigated in line with the OFT's statutory duty to superintend and enforce the Estate Agents Act 1979.

(c) 23 complaints against estate agents have been upheld between 1 August and 14 November 2003.

16 of these have resulted in the issuing of Advisory Letters to estate agents reminding them of their statutory obligations. Seven have resulted in the issuing of warning letters advising the estate agents that if any further evidence of a failure to comply with their statutory obligations was to come to the attention of the OFT, consideration would be given to the taking of formal action including the possibility of them being banned from engaging in estate agency work. A number of the more complex and serious complaints received since 1 August is the subject of on-going investigations.

I now expect the OFT to publish its report on estate agents in the New Year. I will study the recommendations carefully.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 11 September 2003, Official Report, column 380W, on estate agents, whether she has received the report of the Director General of Fair Trading; and when she expects to publish the report. [139810]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information is as follows:

(a) The Office of Fair Trading (OFT) received 94 complaints about estate agents between 1 August and 14 November 2003.

(b) All complaints are investigated in line with the OFT's statutory duty to superintend and enforce the Estate Agents Act 1979.

16 of these have resulted in the issuing of Advisory Letters to estate agents reminding them of their statutory obligations. Seven have resulted in the issuing of warning letters advising the estate agents that if any further evidence of a failure to comply with their statutory obligations was to come to the attention of the OFT, consideration would be given to the taking of formal action including the possibility of them being banned from engaging in estate agency work. A number of the more complex and serious complaints received since 1 August is the subject of on-going investigations.

I now expect the OFT to publish its report on estate agents in the New Year. I will study the recommendations carefully.

Exports

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she will list for each of the last 20 years the (a) contracts with, (b) materials involved in and (c) value of trade deals with Iraq agreed with the support of the Export Credit Guarantee Department for which payment from Iraq has not been received. [138914]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: ECGD has unrecovered claims of around £623 million arising from contracts with Iraq signed prior to the first Gulf conflict in 1991. This amount does not include interest, which, it is estimated, could bring the figure to around £1 billion.

These claims stem from more than five hundred cases supporting the export of goods ranging from consumer items to heavy industrial equipment. The details of these contracts could only be collated at disproportionate cost.

ECGD has not been on cover for business in Iraq since 1991.

Mr. Simon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions her Department has had with industry stakeholders to ensure that arrangements are in place to provide the necessary training and information to employees concerning their obligations to meet the compliance regulations inherent in export control licence procedures. [139857]

Nigel Griffiths: The Export Control Organisation of the DTI undertakes a variety of work to raise awareness and understanding of export controls, including regular seminars and company visits from Compliance Officers. Guidance on export licensing matters, including a Compliance Code of Practice is published on the Export Control Organisation website. Companies are informed of developments in export controls through Notices to Exporters, including by way of automated e-mail notification.

The new controls introduced by Orders made under the Export Control Act 2002 will come into force on 1 May 2004, after a six-month implementation period to allow adequate time for industry and Government to prepare for the new controls. Government officials have worked closely with business since the public consultation ended in April 2003, and will continue to work with industry during the implementation period.

Mr. Simon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps her Department is taking to ensure that defence-related companies are aware of the implications of the Export Control Act 2002; and what efforts her Department is making to ensure that such companies are equipped to meet the deadline for applications. [139858]

Nigel Griffiths: Industry has been made aware of the new export control legislation proposals since they were first proposed in the White Paper in 1998, and all the major companies and organisations have been in direct contact with Government. The Government has provided a full six-month implementation period for the new controls it gives industry adequate time to understand them and prepare. The DTI has published detailed user guidance on the new controls, developed with industry input and including details of a number of new open licences available. The DTI is also running a series of seminars to raise awareness and understanding of the new controls, and how to comply. Further seminars, and also workshops and regional roadshows will be organised by Trade Associations with DTI participation in the New Year. The DTI is also enclosing notices with export licences alerting exporters to the new controls and sources of information. DTI Compliance Officers are advising companies of the new obligations during routine compliance visits. DTI officials will continue to work closely with industry representatives to monitor the progress of the awareness campaign during the implementation period.

Mr. Simon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements her Department has made for (a) assessing and (b) processing applications for export control licences from May 2004. [139859]

Nigel Griffiths: As is currently the case, all export licence applications received under the new controls will be assessed under the consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria.

The Export Control Organisation and other Government Departments have started preparations to adapt its business processes, including re-deploying and training staff in order to process new applications.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she will take steps to ensure that armaments manufactured in the UK carry (a) a unique serial number, (b) the name of country of production and (c) the name of the company that manufactured the weapon. [131136]

Nigel Griffiths: Responsibility for the control of arms manufacture in the UK is shared between several Government Departments. The Ministry of Defence takes responsibility for the markings required for defence equipment procured for use by HM Forces. The Home Office requires, under the Firearms Rules 1998, that all firearms manufacturers and dealers keep detailed records to include make, calibre, identification number and maker's name of all firearms. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is responsible for coordinating the UK implementation and support for the UN programme of action on Small Arms and Light Weapons. The DTI has responsibility for the export licensing of strategic goods and considers export licence applications in consultation with other Government Departments.

Fisheries

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on recent developments on vessel eligibility for the compensation scheme for former Icelandic trawlermen. [139933]

Nigel Griffiths: The compensation scheme for former Icelandic trawlermen is being amended to include vessels that fished in areas within Icelandic waters, as defined in the scheme, but where proof of this was not available because they were traditionally recorded as Faroes vessels. This decision has been reached following representations from the Independent Adjudicator for the scheme.

Those who have reasonable grounds for believing that vessels made at least two trips to Icelandic waters including disputed areas such as Rosengarten and Working Man's Bank have been invited to put them forward in writing to my officials by 19 December 2003.

Decisions on which vessels are added to the list will be taken by my Department on the following criteria:

The vessel must have the full support of the trawlermen' s representatives;

it must have a recorded and extensive history of Faroes fishing;

the size and weight of the vessel;

the length of the voyage;

the makeup of the crew; and previous information already received about the vessel's trips to disputed areas, principally Rosengarten and Working Man's Bank.

In January the Department will publish a list of accepted vessels. There will then be a period of three weeks in which to query any vessels that have not been included on the list in writing and giving reasons. A final list will be published during February 2004.

When vessels have been added to the list, my officials will re-examine claims made under the scheme, which closed in October 2002, and pay additional compensation to those which qualify.

Gas Market

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the ability of the market to respond to the demand for gas in a 1 in 20 winter peak day in (a) winter 2003–04 and (b) each year up to and including 2009–10 should supplies from existing and new development projects fall below maximum levels. [139718]

Mr. Timms: Earlier this month my Department and Ofgem published the third report by the Joint Energy Security of Supply Working Group ("JESS"). JESS was set up to assess the risks to the UK's future gas and electricity supplies.

The JESS report highlights both the level of existing potential gas capacity, and the very significant levels of proven, probable and possible future investments over the next 10 years. It identifies a number of potential supply-side developments, including additional import connections with Norway; new LNG import terminals; more interconnection with continental Europe; upgrades to existing interconnectors; and additional gas storage capacity.

The report concludes that the market can respond to the demand for gas in the next decade (including peak gas demand or sustained high demand), by drawing on maximum supplies from existing and proposed new developments, including some of those which at present are less certain.

Meanwhile the recent agreement with the Norwegian Government will facilitate the development of projects that could meet some 20 per cent. of UK gas demand from 2007.

JESS has also been considering demand-side flexibility, including the responsiveness of the market to high prices at periods of high gas demand. Voluntary reductions in consumption by major consumers, if technically and commercially feasible, could play a significant role in balancing the market in such circumstances.

The Government continue to monitor the gas demand and supply situation.

Intellectual Property

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to increase the transfer of intellectual property (a) between businesses and (b) between business and academia. [135077]

Ms Hewitt: I have not been able to answer this question before Prorogation. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

Internet

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to ensure that deprived communities do not suffer an information deficit from lack of access to the internet. [139549]

Mr. Timms: Taking steps to ensure that deprived communities in both urban and rural areas do not suffer an information deficit from lack of access to the internet is one of the Government's key priorities. The Government recognise that internet access helps deprived communities to achieve social inclusion by benefiting from the knowledge economy. The Government's actions include:

6,000 UK Online Centres by end 2002 to provide either free or low-cost internet access with support for first-time users. Some 3,000 of the Online Centres are public libraries. 2,000 of the UK Online Centres are located in the most deprived wards. Currently, 100 per cent. of public libraries have internet access, of which some 85 per cent. have a broadband connection;

£199 million was made available from the Capital Modernisation Fund to help fund UK Online Centres in deprived communities;

a £30 million Broadband Fund administered by the Regional Development Agencies and devolved Administrations to run pilot projects to extend broadband availability to benefit SMEs among others in deprived communities;

DTI's Broadband Aggregation Project, announced in July 2003, which aims to secure value for money for public sector provision and ensure this has maximum impact on the provision of broadband for communities in deprived areas; a joint DTI and Defra Rural Broadband Team, which was set up in May 2003 to address the issue of availability of broadband in rural areas, especially in deprived areas.

Invicta Motors

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she will visit Invicta Motors in Chippenham to inspect their first production model. [136793]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 6 November 2003]: I regret that I am unlikely to be able to visit the company in the near future but hope to be able to meet them at next year's motorshow. I would, however, like to take this opportunity to wish them every success with their new sportscar.

Inward Missions Scheme

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what changes she plans to make to the Inward Missions Scheme following the review by UK Trade and Investment; when the changes will come into effect; and if she will make a statement. [140149]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Changes resulting from the review of the Inward Missions Scheme are still under consideration. Decisions are expected soon, and all organisations that have been involved in the Scheme over recent years, and all those that were consulted as part of the review, will be informed. Any changes will be phased in from 1 April 2004.

Manufacturing

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many manufacturing jobs have been (a) created and (b) lost in South Yorkshire in each of the last five years. [138738]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Jeff Ennis, dated 20 November 2003:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question about the number of manufacturing jobs that have been created and lost in the last 5 years in South Yorkshire. I am replying in his absence. (138738)

There are no figures for jobs created or lost but an indication can be obtained by comparing the annual surveys of employee jobs. The Annual Business Inquiry (ABI) gives an estimate of the number of employee jobs in December of each year; the latest year for which figures are available is 2001.

The ABI was preceded, prior to 1998, by the Annual Employment Survey. This inquiry had a different structure to the ABI and so direct comparisons cannot be made between the AES and ABI at a regional level.

Between 1998 and 2001 the ABI data show a net decrease in the number of manufacturing employee jobs in South Yorkshire of 32,500.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many manufacturing jobs have been (a) created and (b) lost in Scotland in the last 12 months. [138391]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

This matter falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who will write to the hon. Member. A copy of his letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Miners' Compensation

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many claims for (a) vibration white finger and (b) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease have been paid out in full in each area of the British coalfields; and what the latest total amount paid is. [140156]

Mr. Timms: As at the end of October 2003 the regional headline statistics breakdown is:

	Wales	Scotland	Notts, Derbys & Leics	Yorkshire	North East	Midlands	South/South East
Respiratory disease
Total claims received (£)	55,000	20,000	20,000	116,500	79,500	20,000	7,000
Full and final settlements (£)	20,000	5,000	7,000	29,000	19,000	3,000	2,000
Total Damages paid (£ million)	273	66	49	259	197	25	20
VWF
Total claims received (£)	21,000	11,000	22,000	60,000	45,500	5,000	4,000
Full and final settlements (£)	11,000	4,000	11,000	24,000	21,000	3,000	2,000
Total Damages paid (£ million)	112	62	123	340	325	26	25

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) vibration white finger and (b) chronic obstructive pulmonary disease claims have been paid out in full in the (i) East Midlands and (ii) Bolsover constituencies. [140157]

Mr. Timms: As at the end of October 2003 in the Bolsover constituency 4,162 have received an offer in full and final settlement of their claim. In relation to Vibration White Finger, 2,249 have received an offer in full and final settlement. In total we have paid out £48.5 million in interim and full and final settlements to claimants in Bolsover.

The correspondence figures for the Midlands are for respiratory disease 3,000 and for Vibration White Finger 3,000 totalling £51million.

A breakdown of both regional and constituency headline statistics is available on the Department's website—www.dti.gov.uk/coalhealth

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether ex-workers from the phurnacite coking works at Abercwmboi in the Cynon Valley are eligible to claim for bronchitis and emphysema under the Mineworkers' Compensation Scheme; and if she will make a statement. [140255]

Nigel Griffiths: Workers in phurnacite coking workers do not fall within the parameters of the British Coal Respiratory Disease Litigation High Court judgment. As such claims can not be processed under the resulting scheme, but can be pursued as personal injury claims under common law.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will release records of dust levels recorded before 1991 at the phurnacite plant at Abercwmboi in the Cynon Valley. [140256]

Nigel Griffiths: The Department has always released dust records in line with requests received through the courts, and will be happy to release such records in the case of litigated phurnacite plant claims.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many ex-miners have in Airdrie and Shotts benefited from the Government's health compensation schemes; and what the average level of compensation paid has been to ex-miners in Airdrie and Shotts. [140382]

Nigel Griffiths: As at the end of October 2003, 685 have received an offer in full and final settlement of their claim for respiratory disease. In relation to Vibration White Finger, 79 have received an offer in full and final settlement. In total we have paid out £5.4 million in interim and full and final settlements to claimants in Airdrie and Shotts.

We estimate the average payment for respiratory disease is £7,700 and for Vibration White Finger it is £7,200.

A breakdown of both regional and constituency headline statistics is available on the Department's website—www.dti.gov.uk/coalhealth.

Metrology

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reasons Recommendation R125 of the International Organisation of Legal Metrology on measuring systems for the mass of liquids in tanks has not been implemented. [134563]

Mr. Timms: I have not been able to answer this question before Prorogation. I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

National Minimum Wage

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people in Wales will have benefited from the national minimum wage since its introduction. [140374]

Mr. Sutcliffe: We estimate that around 60,000 workers in Wales stood to benefit when the minimum wage was introduced in April 1999, and that 60,000–70,000 workers in Wales stood to benefit from the rate increases that took place in October 2003.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people have benefited from the introduction of the national minimum wage in each parliamentary constituency since its introduction; and how many (a) recorded cases and (b) successful prosecutions there have been of employers who have failed to pay the minimum wage. [140389]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is not possible to estimate the total number of people who have benefited from the minimum wage since its introduction. This is because the actual beneficiaries are likely to change each year as people move into or from low paid jobs. It is also not possible to provide specific estimates of the number of people who have benefited from the minimum wage by parliamentary constituency. However we estimate that around 1.2 million people stood to benefit when the minimum wage was introduced in April 1999 and that 1–1.2 million people stood to benefit from the rate increases that took place last month.

Between April 1999 and October 2003 the Inland Revenue completed around 28,000 investigations and recovered around £14 million in minimum wage arrears on behalf of workers. The great majority of cases are successfully settled without the need for further enforcement action. To date there have been no criminal prosecutions of employers.

NM Rothschild and Sons Ltd.

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on services provided to her Department by NM Rothschild and Sons Ltd. since 1997. [139960]

Ms Hewitt: The Department's accounting records show that the DTI has spent £1,000 on the services of NM Rothschild and Sons Ltd. since 1997.

Nuclear Reprocessing

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will place in the Library copies of the inter-governmental agreements relating to the repatriation of nuclear materials to Italy consequent upon reprocessing activities in the UK. [138316]

Mr. Timms: The inter-governmental letters referred to represent confidential correspondence between HMG and the Government of Italy. As such it would not be appropriate to accede to the hon. Member's request.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment she has made of whether proper arrangements are in place in respect of nuclear material from Italy currently in the UK for (a) their repatriation to Italy in a safe and timely way and (b) their safe storage in the UK pending dispatch; and if she will make a statement; [138317]

(2) what arrangements are in place for the repatriation to Italy of (a) plutonium and (b) uranium recovered in the UK by BNFL. [138319]

Mr. Timms: The arrangements in place for reprocessing of overseas spent fuel contain options for return of wastes. The Government intend that such options should be exercised and that wastes arising from reprocessing be returned to the country of origin. It has been the practice of successive Governments to obtain, before a contract for the reprocessing of foreign spent fuel is signed, assurances from the relevant government that it will take no legislative or regulatory steps to prevent the return of wastes arising under the contract.

The adequacy of the facilities for managing those wastes is a matter for their owners and the regulatory authorities of the country concerned in accordance with the relevant legislation of that country.

We have an extremely stringent regulatory framework in place to ensure that the storage and eventual repatriation of nuclear materials conforms with all national and international regulations. Ensuring the safety of activities at nuclear installations is the highest priority for the Government and everyone involved in the UK civil nuclear industry.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions have been held by (a) Ministers and (b) officials with BNFL in the last two years relating to the future (i) location and (ii) storage of reprocessed nuclear fuel from Italy; and if she will make a statement. [138318]

Mr. Timms: There have been no discussions between Ministers and officials with BNFL in the last two years relating to these matters.

Nuclear Weapons

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what requirement she has placed on BNFL to report to her in advance on plans to seek contracts in the United States to help develop its nuclear weapons programme; [136718]

(2) what discussions she has held with BNFL in respect of the compatibility with articles (a) one and (b) six of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty of plans by BNFL to bid for a contract with the United States to build and operate a nuclear administration warhead production plant at Savannah River, South Carolina. [136719]

Mr. Timms: There have been no formal discussions between my Department and BNFL on this issue. BNFL's business interests on US DOE sites through its subsidiaries relate to the environmental clean up market and not the weapons production business. The company is precluded by US Department of Energy (DOE) Security Agreements from involvement in the US defence programme.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Gower (Mr. Caton) on 13 November 2003, Official Report, column 403W.

Outsourcing

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she will make a statement on the number of jobs being lost in the UK from companies out-sourcing work overseas. [140025]

Ms Hewitt: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Trade and Investment on 23 October 2003, Official Report, column 667W.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, how many jobs have been out-sourced abroad in the last three years; and what estimate her Department has made of the likely numbers in the next five years. [140026]

Ms Hewitt: The Government does not have statistics on the numbers of jobs outsourced abroad in the last three years. Importantly, estimates of jobs outsourced abroad take no account of the inflows of jobs created through the UK's success in international markets.

Overseas Visitors (Wales)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many international overnight visits were made to Wales in each of the past 10 years, broken down by country of origin, listed in descending order. [140423]

Ms Hewitt: This information is not kept by my Department.

Patents

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many patents were taken out by British universities in each of the last 20 years; how many patents funded from public services have resulted in the development of commercial products in each of the last 20 years; and how much public funding has been allocated to developing products from patents taken out by British universities in each of the last 20 years. [133824]

Ms Hewitt: I have not been able to answer this question before Prorogation. I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what representations she has had from the European Federation of Journalists on the European Directive on patenting computer-related inventions; and if she will make a statement. [140196]

Ms Hewitt: The patentability of computer-implemented inventions has been the subject of a wide-ranging consultation exercise, and submissions on the proposed Directive have been received from individuals, companies and representative bodies. However we have not been able to trace any representations from the European Federation of Journalists. If you are aware of such a communication I would be grateful for further information.

Performance Monitoring

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total cost was of (a) setting, (b) monitoring and (c) measuring the performance targets for her Department in 2002–03; and how many and what grades of civil servants monitor these targets. [137951]

Ms Hewitt: Performance targets for the department were agreed as part of Spending Review 2002. The monitoring and measurement of PSA targets forms part of departmental performance management. Performance management is an integral part of the day to day running of the department, and as such it is not possible to separate the specific costs out. The monitoring of progress towards, and performance against, the department's PSA targets is undertaken by a wide variety of staff at all levels of the organisation.

Post Office Closures

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will obtain from the Chief Executive of Post Office Ltd. a list of consultation exercises carried out by Post Office Counters since 1 January concerning proposed closures of urban (a) sub-post offices and (b) branch offices; how many and what percentage of such exercises resulted in the intention to close being withdrawn; and if she will place the information in the Library. [139214]

Mr. Timms: Proposals for closures of branch offices, and of sub-post offices under the urban network reinvention programme, are put out to public consultation in accordance with the code of practice agreed with Postwatch. Final decisions on closure proposals, after consideration of representations received, are an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post offices were closed in Dorset between June 2001 and June 2003; and if she will make a statement on her policy in relation to possible future closures.[R] [139827]

Mr. Timms: I understand that since March 2000 the company has recorded details of post office closures, including those under the urban reinvention programme, which commenced in late 2002, on the basis of Government region and country. It does not record details of closures on a county basis, as it has no operational need for such data. However, I understand from Post Office Ltd. that in the South West region of England there were net closures of 82 post offices between end June 2001 and end June 2003.

The Government has placed a requirement on Post Office Ltd. to maintain the rural network and to prevent avoidable closures of rural offices. The development of post office closure proposals under the urban reinvention programme is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. within the framework of the Code of Practice agreed with Postwatch and the requirement that at the end of the programme 95 per cent. of the population in urban areas will still live within one mile of a post office.

Postal Services

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with Postcomm on the exemption for UK postal service providers from VAT; and if she will make a statement. [140121]

Mr. Timms: The Department has a regular dialogue with Postcomm on a wide range of postal issues concerning the postal market. The particular issue of the VAT exemption is a matter for the Treasury.

Preferential Trade Status (Israel)

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on Israel's preferential trade status with the EU. [137176]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have not been able to answer this question before Prorogation. I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

Privatisation (Advertising Budgets)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the advertising budget was for each privatisation of a nationalised industry since 1979. [140395]

Ms Hewitt: I have not been able to answer this question before Prorogation. I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

Radiation-related Illness

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what compensation has been paid by nuclear companies to those suffering from radiation-induced illness in each of the past 20 years. [140394]

Mr. Timms: I have not been able to answer this question before Prorogation. I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

SMEs

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to increase the audit exemption levels for small and medium-size companies; and if she will make a statement. [140216]

Nigel Griffiths: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced on 19 November that the audit exemption threshold would be increased to £5.6 million turnover.

This will help relieve some administrative burdens on up to 69,000 companies.

Solar PV Programme

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Government will announce the start date for the solar PV major demonstration programme phase two. [139491]

Mr. Timms: The £20 million First Phase of the Major Photovoltaic Demonstration Programme is due to end in March 2005. It is intended that decisions on further funding for PV will be made in the first half of 2004.

State Aid

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 29 October 2003, Official Report, column 257W, on state aid, if she will list the occasions since 1997 when the Government has made representations (a) in response to notices published in the Official Journal in accordance with Article 88 (2) of the EC Treaty, (b) in cases before the European Court of Justice and (c) on behalf of UK businesses; and if she will make a statement. [137136]

Jacqui Smith: As indicated in my reply on 29 October no register of interventions is maintained. Such information could therefore be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Technology Sector

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on Government action to encourage the growth of the technological sector in the United Kingdom. [135504]

Ms Hewitt: I have not been able to answer this question before Prorogation. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how the Government intends to encourage home grown United Kingdom technological manufacturers. [135510]

Ms Hewitt: I have not been able to answer this question before Prorogation. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

Telephone Masts

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, how many telephone masts there are in (a) Somerset, (b) Devon, (c) Dorset, (d) Wiltshire and (e) Cornwall. [136901]

Mr. Timms: According to information registered on the Radiocommunications Agency's Sitefinder, which shows the location of cellular transmission sites, the number of transmitters in the counties specified isapproximately:

(a) Somerset: 270;

(b) Devon: 660;

(c) Dorset: 230;

(d) Wiltshire: 320;

(e) Cornwall: 370.

There may be more than one transmitter at any one location because of mast sharing so the numbers of masts would be lower.

Tobacco

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what support her Department offers to British cigarette manufacturers seeking to develop markets in the developing world. [138620]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: UK Trade and Investment, in principle, provides services to all UK companies selling legal products, through the provision of trade, investment and political information on overseas markets, taking into account local circumstances. Special guidelines apply however for the tobacco industry, where Diplomatic Posts must not be associated with the promotion of tobacco products for example by accepting sponsorship for activities, or advertisements in publications, or attending events designed overtly to promote them.

Trade (USA)

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will examine the use of (a) mutual and (b) multilateral legal assistance treaties by the United States of America in enforcing end-user control. [138599]

Mr. MacShane: I have been asked to reply.

Where there is a case of diversion or fraud by a private individual, we already look to co-operate with the authorities of friendly countries to bring the perpetrators to justice. Legal assistance treaties are of little use in cases of alleged misuse by governments.

Trade Missions

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether a trade mission will be sent to Kuwait in the near future; and what plans she has to establish better trading relations with Kuwait. [135515]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The United Kingdom has established and productive trading relationships with Kuwait. The Gulf region is traditionally an important market for UK goods and services and the UK commercial presence there is strong.

We have a regular programme of outward Trade missions to Kuwait, and to the Gulf region as a whole, as part of the range of activities we sponsor in support of UK companies wishing to enter and expand into overseas markets.

UK Science

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if she will make a statement on the progress of joint working with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on the promotion of UK science, engineering and technology. [137540]

Ms Hewitt: Significant progress has been made.

DTI and FCO are members of two S&T—focused inter-departmental committees—the Chief Scientific Adviser's Committee (CSAIC) chaired by the Chief Scientific Adviser, Sir David King, and the International Science Technology, Trade and Investment Committee (ISTTIC) chaired by the UKTI Chief Executive, Sir Stephen Brown.

Castaic's remit is to establish awareness of Britain as a world leader in S&T; to promote international research collaboration to the benefit of the UK science base and world science; and to promote UK science policy on issues with a science dimension. Attic's remit is to deal with the wealth potential arising from the UK's strengths in science and technology by concentrating on the trade and investment agenda.

There is regular interaction between officials arising from their work on the operational committees, which support the two main committees.

Examples of joint working include:

The jointly agreed geographical deployment of UK Science and Technology Attaches in our overseas posts;

The Klatch magazine, which is published jointly by science and technology groups (DTI,FCO AND UKTI) of Government to showcase British science and technology strengths and promotes inward investment opportunities into the UK;

Collaboration on major campaigns in North America, China, Japan; in relation to inward and outward missions with posts abroad; and in the world-wide DNA 50 celebratory events;

Working together to provide briefing to Ministers and VIPs travelling abroad;

Liasing on cross cutting issues such as CERN, European Space Organisation and the, Asia/Pacific Technology Network;

The provision on a monthly basis to our post overseas of briefing material and news stories on science and technology developments in the UK for use in increasing awareness of Britain's status as a leading player in world science;

FCO involvement in the Doffs Innovation Review.

Website

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment she has made of the content and design of her Department's website. [139368]

Ms Hewitt: The DTI has been undertaking a thorough-going review of its website this-year. This has included extensive research into what our customers require from the DTI website. Previous research has shown high levels of satisfaction with the content on the site, but problems with presentation and structure. We have therefore commissioned a comprehensive redesign of the site, to increase its focus on our customers' needs. This has included testing the usability and accessibility of the site with customers.

Wind Turbines

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what help she gives individual factories which wish to develop alternative sustainable power supplies, with particular reference to wind turbines. [139422]

Mr. Timms: The Renewables Obligation, which requires licensed electricity suppliers to supply a specified proportion of electricity from renewable sources reaching 10.4 per cent by 2010, is our main vehicle for encouraging renewables. Under the Obligation companies generating electricity from eligible renewable sources for their own use, for example, in a factory they own, can benefit from the Obligation. They can do this by making an arrangement to sell that renewable electricity to a licensed supplier and to buy the same electricity back for their own use. The electricity sold and bought back will be eligible for Renewables Obligation Certificates.

In addition, electricity derived from renewable sources may be eligible for exemption from the Climate Change Levy.

Work-related Stress

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many cases of work related stress have been reported in her Department in each of the last three years; how much compensation has been paid to employees; how many work days have been lost due to work related stress, and at what cost, what procedures have been put in place to reduce work related stress, and at what cost; and if she will make a statement. [136855]

Ms Hewitt: Data on work-related stress are not collected separately in my Department.

We are committed to maintaining a safe working environment for staff and to reducing absences caused by any sickness or injury. The Department provides advice and counselling services that help both managers and staff tackle work-related stress.

TRANSPORT

Ballast

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which British ports have facilities for treating ballast from ships. [140421]

Mr. Jamieson: All ports are required to provide waste reception facilities which are adequate to receive waste from ships normally using the port. However, the discharge of clean ballast water is not yet controlled by legislation and as such no ports in the UK have facilities for treating ballast water to reduce the threat of non-indigenous species invasion through ballast water exchange at sea.

If ballast water is contaminated by oil onboard an oil tanker then the discharge and treatment of this water is strictly controlled by oil pollution regulations. Some oil terminals, such as Flotta in Scapa Flow in Orkney, have local requirements that all ballast water from tankers is discharged ashore and their reception facilities may include treatment to remove oil cargo residue.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents involving ships clearing out their ballast tanks there have been in (a) British waters and (b) Liverpool Bay in each year over the past 20 years; how many prosecutions have resulted; and what actions he is taking to prevent ships from clearing out their ballast tanks in British waters [140422]

Mr. Jamieson: The discharge of clean ballast water is not yet controlled by legislation and the UK do not keep records of this operation either in British Waters or in Liverpool Bay, or require that vessels do so.

However, existing legislation does impose strict controls on the discharge of oily ballast water. This is enforced by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) through means such as aerial surveillance and inspections on vessels. As of 1 August 1999, all discharges of oil are strictly controlled in North West European waters as designated under International Convention. In the prosecutions that the MCA have secured it is very difficult to apportion the discharge to contaminated ballast water.

Heathrow Airport

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment has been made of whether Terminal 5 will handle passengers using the third runway at Heathrow Airport if constructed. [139860]

Mr. McNulty: In our appraisal of the option for a third runway at Heathrow, we are considering a number of options for the handling of the additional passengers associated with a new runway. However, the contribution of Terminal 5 in handling these passengers was not included in any of these options other than for, possibly, transferring passengers.

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has drawn up for expansion of capacity on the M25 if a third runway is constructed at Heathrow Airport. [139861]

Mr. McNulty: We are considering the potential impacts on the strategic road and rail networks of all the options for new airport capacity.

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment his Department has made of the likely impact on public transport of additional staff commuting to Heathrow Airport after a third runway was constructed; [140133]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the likely impact on road traffic congestion in West London of additional staff commuting to Heathrow Airport after a third runway was constructed; [140135]

(3) what measures the Government will put in place to meet the change in demand for housing in West London to accommodate additional staff at Heathrow Airport should a third runway be constructed; [140130]

(4) what assessment his Department has made of the likely impact on the availability of affordable housing in West London of a third runway being constructed at Heathrow Airport; [140131]

(5) what assessment he has made of the compatibility of plans for construction of a third runway at Heathrow Airport with the Government's commitment to sustainable development, with particular reference to housing needs in West London; [140132]

(6) what input his Department has had into the White Paper on the Future Development of Air Transport in the UK, with particular reference to the proposal to construct a third runway at Heathrow Airport. [140134]

Mr. McNulty: In the appraisal of all of the options for new airport capacity, including a third runway at Heathrow, we considered a wide range of impacts. This included the potential impact of development on surface transport networks, employment, and housing and urbanisation.

These issues, together with responses to the consultation, will help inform Government decisions for the air transport White Paper which we aim to publish by the end of the year.

London Underground

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans his Department has to reinstate independent electricity supplies to the London Underground; and at what cost. [139818]

Mr. McNulty: Following the power failure on 28 August, London Underground Ltd. (LUL) initiated an investigation of the incident and the effectiveness of their response. LUL will be publishing their report in the near future. Responsibility for London Underground transferred from Government to Transport for London (TfL) in July. Any future decisions on the power supply are for TfL and the London Mayor.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the adequacy of security measures on the London Underground to counter the threat of terrorism. [140202]

Dr. Howells: In July this year my Department issued legally binding Instructions to London Underground Ltd. to formalise protective security measures already place. A supporting London Underground Security Programme was issued in August. This regime builds on the sound measures developed by LU and BTP over the past 30 years. The regime is designed to be responsive to the level of threat and to be proportionate. The security procedures are subject to inspection by inspectors from my Department.

Air Accidents

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many air accidents involving United Kingdom-registered airlines were reported for the last decade for which figures are available; and what the comparable accident level was for airlines registered in (a) the Republic of Ireland and (b) Germany.[R] [140093]

Mr. McNulty: The following table sets out the number of total loss accidents for the United Kingdom, German and Irish airlines contained in the Airclaims CASE database for the period 1 January 1993 to 1 December 2002. The CASE database has been used as neither the Department nor the Civil Aviation Authority hold details of accidents involving German and Irish Airlines. A total loss accident is one in which the aircraft is damaged beyond economic repair.

Total Loss Accidents for the Period 1 January 1993 to 1 January 2003

	Passenger Operations		Cargo Operation
	Aircraft < 5700kg mtwa	Aircraft > 5700kg mtwa	Aircraft < 5700kg mtwa	Aircraft > 5700kg mtwa
UK airlines	1	5	1	7
German airlines	1	5	1	1

mtwa = maximum total weight authorised

These figures are not directly comparable because of differences in other factors such as the number of hours flown.

Air Travel

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of people from the bottom 10 per cent. of income earners travelled by air in each year from 2000 to 2002. [137579]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not available.

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from individuals and organisations opposed to an expansion in air travel in the last 12 months. [139355]

Mr. McNulty: Many thousands of letters, questionnaires, cards and petitions have been received as responses to the consultation on the future development of air transport in the UK, which closed on 30 June 2003. On publication of the White Paper we expect to make all responses available for public inspection, unless consultees have explicitly requested confidentiality.

Aircraft Pollution

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will press the International Civil Aviation Organisation to examine the issue of night flights and aircraft noise at their next meeting. [140079]

Mr. McNulty: The reduction of aircraft noise is a major strand of work within the environmental programme of the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO).

ICAO Resolution A33-7, adopted in 2001, emphasises the need for states to adopt a balanced approach to aircraft noise management, on an airport-by-airport basis. Key elements were incorporated into EU Directive 2002/30/EC and are now enshrined in UK law by The Aerodromes (Noise Restrictions) (Rules and Procedures) Regulations 2003(S.I.No. 1742).

The agenda for the next meeting of ICAO's Committee on Aviation Environmental Protection (CAEP) in February 2004 will allow for substantial discussion of noise issues.

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will press the International Civil Aviation Organisation to examine the issue of air pollution caused by aircraft at their next meeting. [140086]

Mr. McNulty: Air pollution caused by air transport is a major strand of work within the environmental programme of the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO).

The Government regards this as important work and will continue to press ICAO for stringent action at the next meeting of its Committee on Aviation Environmental Protection (CAEP) in February 2004.

Arson (Railways)

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents of arson on the railways there have been since March 2002, broken down by (a) train operating company and (b) line. [139800]

Mr. McNulty: The Health and Safety Executive's Railway Inspectorate (HMRI), advise that for the period 1 April 2002 to 31 March 2003 there were 162 train fires in Great Britain caused by arson. A table recording the 162 incidents broken down by train operating company and by route is being deposited in the Libraries of the House.

During the same period there were also 84 fires at passenger stations, signal boxes and on the railway infrastructure reported to HMRI, although information is not currently available on how many of these were due to arson.

In addition, the British Transport Police have recorded 388 crimes of arson on the railways during the period 1 April 2002 to 31 March 2003.

Buses

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with (a) local authorities and (b) major bus operators on bus re-regulation. [139434]

Mr. McNulty: The current statutory framework for buses is set out in the Transport Act 2000. As with all other legislation, we keep the situation under review. Ministers therefore continue to discuss these matters with a number of groups and individuals representing both local authorities and bus operators.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many consultancies were commissioned by his Department in the last two years for which figures are available; and what the cost of those contracts was. [130891]

Mr. McNulty: The Department was formed on 29 May 2002. 1,036 orders for consultancy valued at £122.2 million were raised in 2002-03. 717 orders for consultancy valued at £19.6 million were raised in the first six months of 2003-04.

Consultants

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the total value was of (a) technical and financial contracts, (b) technical consultants used on a call-off basis and (c) financial consultants used on a call-off basis by (i) the Rail Delivery Directorate, (ii) the Railways Restructuring Directorate and (iii) other directorates within his Department carrying out work relating to the railways, in (A) 2002–03 and (B) 2003–04 to date. [139729]

Mr. McNulty: The total value of consultancies used by DfT relating to the railways was £24.6 million in 2002–03 and in 2003–04 it has been £13.6 million to 31 October. Only a very small proportion of this expenditure relates to call-off contracts.

The figures include expenditure on contracts for legal and other advice.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent by predecessor departments on external consultants in matters relating to transport in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) consultants used, (b) the nature and (c) the cost of the work in each case. [139730]

Mr. McNulty: The information is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member, placing a copy of my letter in the Libraries of the House.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the (a) technical and financial contracts, (b) technical consultants used on a call-off basis and (c) financial consultants used on a call-off basis by (i) the Rail Delivery Directorate, (ii) the Railways Restructuring Directorate and (iii) other directorates within his Department carrying out work relating to the railways, since 6 February; what the nature of the assignment for each consultant was; and what the value of work done by each consultant was. [139734]

Mr. McNulty: Since 6 February the Department has been using the following consultants to give the advice listed:

Consultant	Advice
On a call-off basis
Eversheds	Advice on rail pension issues
Odgers Ray and Berndtson	Advice on senior recruitment
Saxton Bampfylde Hever plc	Advice on senior recruitment

The value of work done by individual consultants and advisers is commercially confidential, but, for all of them together, expenditure from 6 February to 31 October amounts to £16.5 million.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent by his Department and its predecessors on external research and consultants in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04 to date, broken down by (i) aviation, (ii) local transport, (iii) mobility and inclusion, (iv) roads, vehicles and road safety, (v) shipping, (vi) integrated transport, (vii) railways, (viii) science and research, (ix) transport statistics, (x) freight logistics and (xi) other subjects. [139736]

Mr. McNulty: The information is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member, placing a copy of my letter in the Libraries of the House.

Decommissioning (American Ships)

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 13 November 2003, Official Report, column 436W, on decommissioning (American ships), what steps he is taking to ensure further US ships follow the advice of the Maritime and Coastguard Agency. [139949]

Mr. Jamieson: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency has approved passage plans for the ships in question and will do so in future transits of this kind, as well as monitor ship movements against the approved plans. Flexibility must be provided for legitimate and safe alterations to the precise routes followed when circumstances justify such amendments. The Secretary of State can intervene only if the ships are in UK waters. At that point, he may give a direction only if it is necessary for securing the safety of the ship, other ships, persons or property or for preventing or reducing significant pollution.

Departmental Expenditure (Official Residences)

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much the Department spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [134701]

Mr. McNulty: The Department for Transport was formed on 29 May 2002. It does not have any residential properties used by Ministers. A small number of residential properties are used by officials—for example coastguards—as an essential part of their operational duties. Details could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Driving Licences

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 30 June 2003, Official Report, column 2W, on driving licences, if he will make a statement on the nature of the detailed research to ensure ease of completion of the driving licence application form; what process was used to undertake the research; what the results were; and what measures he has taken to implement its findings. [140355]

Mr. Jamieson: To improve customer service a new driving licence application form, fulfilling the functions of two previously separate forms, was introduced in May 2003. As part of its development research was conducted to assess the effectiveness and ease of use of the form and its accompanying information leaflet. Testing was supported by a specialist research organisation and the Plain English Campaign. DVLA 'road tested' the literature using a wide variety of suitable organisations in both the public and private sector, a cross section of members of the general public and, a selection of school children approaching driving age. Over 90 per cent. of participants found the form easy to complete. A number of suggestions from test subjects were also adopted helping to improve layout and content.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the dates of meetings of the EU Committee for senior labour inspectors during the Danish and Greek presidencies, what items were on each agenda; what representative of the Scottish Executive was present on each occasion; what preparatory meetings were held for each meeting; which officials were present at each preparatory meeting; and if he will make a statement. [132727]

Mr. Pond: I have been asked to reply.

The Senior Labour Inspectors Committee (SLIC) met in Denmark from 5–7 November 2002

The meeting considered the following matters: progress with the SLIC Work Programme including progress with several working groups dealing with specific topics, the assessment of health and safety systems in EU and Applicant Countries, future co-operation with Applicant Countries and the role of SLIC in the future health and safety at work European strategy.

The Senior Labour Inspectors Committee met in Greece from 21–23 May 2003

The meeting approved the 2002 SLIC Annual Report and considered the following matters: all of the items listed for the Danish meeting, cross border enforcement of labour inspection matters and European Commission health and safety activities.

No preparatory meetings were held and no representative of the Scottish Executive attended either meeting.

M6 Toll

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the operators of the M6 toll will be required to contribute towards the policing costs of the road. [139996]

Mr. Jamieson: Midland Expressway Limited will not be required to contribute towards the policing costs of the M6 Toll.

Maritime and Coastguard Agency

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 13 November, Official Report, column 436W, on Decommissioning (American Ships), (a) for what reasons and (b) in what circumstances advice is given by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency to vessels navigating United Kingdom waters; and in what circumstances the Agency can enforce its guidance. [139916]

Mr. Jamieson: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency has approved passage plans for the ships in question and will do so in future transits of this kind, as well as monitor ship movements against the approved plans. Flexibility must be provided for legitimate and safe alterations to the precise routes followed when circumstances justify such amendments. The Secretary of State can intervene only if the ships are in UK waters. At that point, he may give a direction only if it is necessary for securing the safety of the ship, other ships, persons or property or for preventing or reducing significant pollution.

Market Research

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department spent on (a) opinion polling and (b) market research in the last financial year; and if he will make a statement. [139984]

Mr. McNulty: I shall write to the hon. Member placing a copy of my letter in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidelines and advice he has issued to business employers on the ban on the use of mobile telephones while driving; and which business and employers' organisations received such information. [140148]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department has not issued guidelines and advice specifically for business employers. The Department has however e-mailed 1,000 large employers drawing their attention to the new regulations and to the Department's general advice and publicity materials, which are relevant to all road users.

That general advice is in the form of Frequently Asked Questions which is available on-line at http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_rdsafety/documents/page/dft_rdsafety_025216.hcsp.

That includes a specific question and answer that is relevant to employers.

National Travel Survey

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Bath of 3 June 2003, Official Report, column 72W, on the National Travel Survey, if he will break down the information provided by household income quintile. [139791]

Mr. McNulty: A summary of the information will be placed in the Libraries of the House. The sample sizes of the National Travel Survey are too small to provide a full breakdown at the requested level of detail.

Off-road Cycleways

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of off-road cycleways there are in each county in England; and what the projected increase in off-road cycleways is over the next (a) five, (b) 10 and (c) 15 years for each county in England. [140361]

Mr. Jamieson: Information about the lengths of off-road cycle tracks away from the road is not held centrally.

We are encouraging all local highway authorities to increase the provision of cycle facilities both on and off the road through their Local Transport Plans and monitoring their progress through the English Regional Cycling Development Team.

Overflight Restrictions (Germany)

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations have been made by his Department to (a) the German Government, (b) the European Commission and (c) the Council of Ministers in relation to the recent decision by the German Government to impose overflight restrictions into Zurich airport; and what assessment he has made of its effect on (i) British interests and (ii) bilateral British-Swiss trade and investment. [140103]

Mr. McNulty: The Department has made no such representations. The German decision is the subject of a complaint by the Swiss Government to the European Commission, which may be followed by an application to the European Court of Justice. We are currently assessing possible effects of the overflight restrictions on UK interests.

Pilotage

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he is informed when pilot services are offered to vessels about to navigate United Kingdom waters. [139917]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department is not informed when pilot services are offered to vessels about to navigate United Kingdom waters.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what rules govern pilotage in United Kingdom waters. [139918]

Mr. Jamieson: Pilotage in United Kingdom waters is governed by the Pilotage Act 1987. The Act places a duty on Competent Harbour Authorities to keep under consideration whether any, and if so what, pilotage services need to be provided to secure the safety of ships navigating in or in the approaches to its harbour. Ships navigating in UK waters outside the jurisdiction of a competent harbour authority are not subject to pilotage.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what liaison took place between the Maritime and Coastguard Agency and their French counterparts concerning the route taken by the US ships (a) Canister and (b) Caloosahatchee through the English Channel. [139998]

Mr. Jamieson: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency agreed the passage plan for these ships in consultation with the French maritime authorities, who were kept up to date throughout the ships' transit.

Public Subsidy

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the level of public subsidy is (a) per passenger mile travelled, (b) per passenger and (c) per head of population for (i) rail, (ii) light rail and (iii) bus passenger transport in (A) England and (B) each English region for the latest year for which figures are available. [135088]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 3 November 2003]: The form subsidy takes differs from one transport mode to another. Information on each mode is not available in the form requested, but the available data shows:

(i) Rail

In 2001–02 we provided public subsidy of just over £1 billion for railways in Great Britain. It is not possible to give rail figures for England only, nor is it possible to give any regional breakdown for rail subsidy. In Great Britain, the rail subsidy per passenger mile was 4 pence. The subsidy per passenger journey was £1.08. If calculated per head of population it was £18.16.

(ii) Light rail

There is no subsidy payment from central government to light rail operators, although the promoters of the schemes pay a form of subsidy through additional Revenue Support Grant payments resulting from the previous issue of Private Finance Initiative Credits. The Tyne and Wear Metro differs from other light rail in that it is treated as part of the national rail system for the purpose of revenue support. In addition, all light rail operators receive reimbursement for concessionary fares for older people, disabled people and children, on the same basis as local bus services.

(iii) Bus

In 2001–02 we provided public subsidy of £1.2 billion for buses in England. It is not possible to give a regional breakdown, other than for London, as an element of subsidy, Bus Service Operators Grant, is paid directly to the operators. For England, bus subsidy per passenger mile is not available. Subsidy per passenger journey was 31 pence. If calculated per head of population in England it was £24. For London, bus subsidy per passenger mile was 12 pence, or 27 pence per passenger journey. When calculated per head of resident London population, it was £53.60. This appears high as population data exclude non-residents and tourists who use buses in London.

Rail Safety

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) fatalities and (b) serious injuries were incurred as a result of railway incidents in each year since 1973. [140005]

Mr. McNulty: Information on the number of fatalities and serious injuries since 1973 provided by the Health and Safety Executive's Railway Inspectorate is set out in the following table:

	Passengers	Rail staff	Others	Trespass plus suicide	Fatalities	Serious injuries
1973	42	42	13	213	310	652

[1] 15 months from 1 January 1991 to 31 March 1992.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with Network Rail on the implications for rail safety of the recent reduction in the number of managers with safety responsibilities in the organisation. [140123]

Mr. McNulty: Employee management at Network Rail is an operational matter for the company. Safety is the top priority in the network's operation and maintenance and all decisions taken by Network Rail are subject to meeting the company's Safety Case.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the recommendations on rail safety made by Lord Cullen and Professor Uff being worked on by the industry which (a) have not been completed to the original timetable specified, indicating the expected date of implementation and (b) are within their specified deadline, listing by when they should be completed, and whether they are expected to meet this deadline in each case. [139740]

Mr. McNulty: The Southall, Ladbroke Grove and Train Protection public inquiries made a total of 295 recommendations. The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) advise that 216 recommendations have been completed; 42 are either still within their specified deadline or a deadline was not specified; and 37 have not been completed to the original timetable specified.

The HSE advise that there is a range of reasons for action continuing on 37 of the recommendations beyond the dates put forward in the public inquiry reports, including the complexity of interrelated issues, the need for legislative change, or because industry is taking a broader look than the recommendations strictly require. HSE and industry have discussed and agreed alternative timescales.

Details of each of the recommendations still to be completed, including action taken and to be taken, are given in the Health and Safety Commission's progress report—'HSC report on overall progress as of April 2003 on the remaining recommendations from the Rail Public Inquiries'—published in August 2003, which is available in the House Libraries. A summary of progress is given in the following table:

Public inquiry	Total number of recommendations	Completed	Continuing
Southall	93	92	1
Train Protection	59	18	[1]21
Ladbroke Grove 1	89	68	21
Ladbroke Grove 2	74	38	[1]36
Total	295	216	79

[1] There are 11 recommendations where action holder reports completion, but where HSE is not yet able to endorse this view.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the final reports into the rail crashes at (a) Hatfield and (b) Potters Bar to be published. [139741]

Mr. McNulty: The Health and Safety Executive have published comprehensive reports on both the Hatfield and Potters Bar crashes, which have included technical findings, safety critical information and recommendations. The final reports on both these crashes, which will concentrate on action taken by the industry to implement the recommendations from earlier reports, can only be published following the completion of any legal action arising from the investigations.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the British Transport Police to conclude their investigations into the rail crash at Potters Bar. [139742]

Mr. McNulty: The British Transport Police have advised me that they submitted a substantial report on the Potters Bar accident to the Crime Prosecution Service (CPS) in August 2003 and that they now await CPS advice on the matter.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many derailments there were in each month of the last year. [138827]

Mr. McNulty: The Health and Safety Executive's Railway Inspectorate reports that there were 67 derailments on all railways during the period 1 April 2002 to 31 March 2003, which is reduction of 24 per cent. compared to the 2001–02 figure of 88. Of the 67, 42 occurred on Network Rail, four on London Underground, and 21 on tramways, metros or heritage railways. Two derailments resulted in fatalities and four resulted in minor injuries. A breakdown of the 67 derailments by month appears in the following table:

Month	Network Rail	LUL	Other	Total
April 2002	4	—	1	5
May	4	—	2	6
June	4	—	2	6
July	2	—	5	7

Rail Ticket Prices

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the percentage price increase for (a) peak and (b) off peak journeys for each of the privatised rail company areas in each year since privatisation. [140434]

Mr. McNulty: Information is not readily available in the form requested. However, the latest edition of the Strategic Rail Authority's statistics bulletin "National Rail Trends (April-June 2003) " copies of which are available in the House Libraries, shows in Table 3.1 on page 23, statistics on the average change in the price of rail fares. Based on the overall figures in this table, for each year since 1995 and for all ticket types (both regulated and unregulated) the year on year average change in the price of rail fares expressed as a percentages are as follows;

	Percentage
1995–96	2.6
1996–97	2.5
1997–98	3.8
1998–99	3.9
1999–2000	3.3
2000–01	2.5
20001–02	2.0
2002–03	3.1

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average cost per mile of rail travel in each EU country was in the last year for which figures are available, based on standard return fares. [140441]

Mr. McNulty: This information could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Railways

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of railway line there are in (a) the UK and (b) Scotland which are defined as (i) primary route, (ii) London and South East commuter route, for the UK, (iii) main secondary route, (iv) other secondary route, (v) rural route and (vi) freight route. [137489]

Mr. McNulty: The Strategic Rail Authority's Strategy 'Specification of Network Outputs' classifies heavy rail routes in Great Britain into six broad categories. The route lengths under each category for (a) Great Britain and (b) Scotland are as follows: (i) primary routes (a) 8,859 km (b) 527 km; (ii) London and South East commuter routes (a) 3,722 km (b) not applicable; (iii) main secondary routes (a) 4,487 km (b) 1,367; (iv) other secondary routes (a) 7,214 km (b) 1,205 km; (v) rural routes (a) 3,533 km (b) 715 km; (vi) other freight only routes (a) 2,565 km (b) 247 km. The SRA Strategy provides for the acceleration of maintenance and renewal activity on the busiest parts of the network. These carry 80 per cent. of all passenger traffic and 70 per cent. of freight traffic. Maintenance and renewal costs on other routes will be at an appropriate level to reflect their actual usage. It will not compromise safety. This approach makes common sense.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trains departed from London King's Cross Station without advertised (a) first class accommodation and (b) refreshment facilities, in the first week of each month in 2003; and what percentage of trains leaving London King's Cross this represented. [137317]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not collected by the Government or the Strategic Rail Authority.

Railways and Transport Safety Act

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the provisions of the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 relating to blood alcohol levels in pilots, flight crew and other personnel to be implemented; and what the reasons are for the delay. [140127]

Mr. McNulty: Part V of the Railways and Transport Safety Act will be commenced once the equipment to be used by the police to test suspected offenders has received formal approval for use at the new low aviation limit. This process is now approaching completion. On receipt of the necessary type approval certificates, a period of approximately one month will be required to modify existing police equipment and to train officers for its use in the aviation environment.

Road Accidents (Deer)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road traffic accidents were caused by deer running onto the carriageway in each of the last five years; in how many incidents (a) injury and (b) death occurred; what steps he is taking to ensure that adequate fences are erected to contain the deer in areas where deer pose a significant danger to road users; and if he will make a statement. [140342]

Mr. Jamieson: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Libraries of the House.

Security (Ports)

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many breaches of security have taken place at UK ports in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) region, (b) port and (c) type of breach. [139801]

Mr. Jamieson: While inspectors do actively respond to notifications of security breaches or incidents the type of information is not available in the form requested and in any event it is not the practice to disclose such security details.

Speed Cameras

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which roads are fitted with SPECS speed cameras. [139756]

Mr. Jamieson: Inner City Road, Nottingham and Lumbertubs Way, Northamptonshire are fitted with SPECS digital speed cameras systems.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which department will receive the money generated by fines from the SPECS speed cameras. [139757]

Mr. Jamieson: Fine revenue from any type approved camera system operating in safety camera partnerships is used to cover the cost of operating the cameras. All surplus goes to the Treasury.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce SPECS speed cameras in the South West. [139758]

Mr. Jamieson: None. It is a matter for local highway authorities and the police force in the relevant safety camera partnership to decide on what type approved camera equipment is deployed.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from motoring organisations about SPECS speed cameras. [139759]

Mr. Jamieson: None.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the M4 section between Theale and Membury services is wired for SPECS speed cameras. [139760]

Mr. Jamieson: There is no equipment located on the M4 between Theale and Membury services forming part of a SPECS enforcement camera system.

Strategic Rail Authority

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the (a) technical consultants and (b) financial consultants used by the Strategic Rail Authority since 7 January on a call-off basis; the total amount paid to each consultant; and the nature of the projects; [139723]

(2) if he will list the (a) technical and financial contracts, (b) technical consultants used on a call-off basis and (c) financial consultants used on a call-off basis by (i) the Health and Safety Commission and (ii) the Health and Safety Executive relating to railway matters since 6 February; what the nature of the assignment for each consultant was; and what the value of work done by each consultant was; [139731]

(3) if he will list the (a) technical and financial contracts, (b) technical consultants used on a call-off basis and (c) financial consultants used on a call-off basis by the Office of the Rail Regulator, since 6 February, the nature of the assignment for each consultant, and the value of work done by each consultants; [139732]

(4) if he will list the (a) technical and financial contracts, (b) technical consultants used on a call-off basis and (c) financial consultants used on a call-off basis by Her Majesty's Railway Inspectorate, since 6 February, the nature of the assignment for each consultant, and the value of work done by each consultant; [139733]

(5) if he will list the technical and financial consultants employed by the Strategic Rail Authority since 7 January; what the nature of the assignment for each consultant was; and what the value of each contract was; [139735]

(6) what the total value was of (a) technical and financial contracts, (b) technical consultants used on a call-off basis and (c) financial consultants used on a call-off basis, by Her Majesty's Railway Inspectorate in (i) 2002–03 and (ii) 2003–04 to date; [139737]

(7) what the total value was of (a) technical and financial contracts, (b) technical consultants used on a call-off basis and (c) financial consultants used on a call-off basis, by the Office of the Rail Regulator in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 2002–03 and (iii) 2003 to date; [139738]

(8) what the total value was of (a) technical and financial contracts, (b) technical consultants used on a call-off basis and (c) financial consultants used on a call-off basis, by the (i) Health and Safety Commission and (ii) Health and Safety Executive relating to railway matters in (A) 2002–03 and (B) 2003–04 to date. [139739]

Mr. McNulty: The information is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member, placing a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Terrorism (Railways)

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents of (a) terrorist activity and (b) suspected terrorist activity were recorded by (i) the British Transport Police and (ii) other organisations relating to the railways in (A) 2002 and (B) 2003 to date. [139802]

Mr. McNulty: The British Transport Police have advised me that 205 threats were made against railway locations in 2002. In the period up to 31 October 2003 194 threats were made against railway locations. None of these resulted in an incident.

Trams (Edinburgh)

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions his Department has had with Transport Initiatives Edinburgh regarding the proposed tram lines connecting Edinburgh city centre with Edinburgh airport; and if he will make a statement. [139924]

Mr. McNulty: My officials have met Transport Initiatives Edinburgh on at least three occasions to discuss the proposed tram and heavy rail links to Edinburgh.

Transport for London

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what powers Transport for London has (a) to undertake prudential borrowing, (b) to raise finance on the financial markets and (c) to issue bonds. [139995]

Mr. McNulty: The new prudential borrowing system starts on 1 April 2004. Transport for London is among the local authorities that will then have power to borrow without Government consent, provided that the debt is affordable. Authorities will, as now, be free to raise finance by a variety of means, including borrowing on the financial markets and issuing instruments such as bonds, as well as borrowing from the Government through the Public Works Loan Board.

Transport Staff

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff (a) were employed in 2002 and (b) are employed in each key area of the railway industry; what the total requirement for staff in each key area is; what assessment he has made of staff shortage numbers in each key area; and how many individuals are (i) in training and (ii) trained for each key area. [139724]

Mr. McNulty: Figures are not kept in the form requested. The latest information on rail industry staff numbers comes from a survey carried out by the Rail Industry Training Council between November 2002 and April 2003. It showed that, in 2002, approximately 177,000 people were employed in rail related work covering 110 different occupations. There were also 702 vacancies classified as "hard to fill". The number of trainees working toward a national qualification was estimated at 11,685.

The Centre for Rail Skills was launched on 27 October 2003 to help the rail industry equip itself, in a cost effective way, with the right number of people with the right skills in place at the right time.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff were employed in his and predecessor departments on functions relating to transport (a) full-time and (b) part-time, broken down by (i) units and (ii) divisions in each year since 1997. [139725]

Mr. McNulty: The information is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member, placing a copy my letter in the Libraries of the House.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff were employed by agencies with functions relating to transport (a) full-time and (b) part-time, broken down by (i) units and (ii) divisions in each year since 1997. [139726]

Mr. McNulty: Details of staff employed are published in each agency's annual report, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

US Warships (Disposal)

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he will take to control the route of US ships bound for dismantling in Hartlepool. [139999]

Mr. Jamieson: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency has approved passage plans for the ships in question and will do so in future transits of this kind, as well as monitor ship movements against the approved plans.

Only if the ships are in UK waters can the Secretary of State intervene. He may give a direction but only if it is necessary to secure the safety of the ship, other ships, persons or property or to prevent or reduce significant pollution.

Vehicles (Tinted Windows)

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 17 November 2003, ref.138737, if he will place a copy of the guidelines in the Library. [139993]

Mr. Jamieson: I have placed a copy of the guidelines in the Libraries of both Houses.

Wind Speeds (Severn Bridge)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the wind speeds at the M48 Severn Bridge were at (a) 05:00, (b) 07:00, (c) 09:00, (d) 11:00, (e) 13:00 and (f) 15:00 hours on 3 November. [139938]

Mr. Jamieson: I have asked the acting Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Stephen Hickey, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Stephen Hickey to Mr. Huw Edwards, dated 20 November 2003:

I have been asked by David Jamieson to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about wind speeds at the M48 Severn Bridge on Monday 3 November 2003.

The maximum recorded wind speed gusts at the times requested were:

05.00–38.44 knots

07.00–29.26 knots

09.00–22.01 knots

11.00–26.52 knots

13.00–31.06 knots

15.00–21.54 knots

As you know the Severn Bridge was closed from 05.10 on Sunday 2 November until 16.00 on Monday 3 November. Throughout this period forecasts were consistently in excess of 30 knots. The protocol then in place required that closures should remain in place until the gust wind speed had fallen and remained below 30 knots for 30 minutes and the forecast did not predict wind speeds increasing to over 30 knots within the next 4 hours.

As part of the process for continual improvement of our service, our protocol was subsequently reviewed at a meeting on Friday 14 November. The protocol was amended with immediate effect so that in future the closure shall remain in place until the gust wind speed has fallen and remains below 30 knots for 30 minutes and the forecast does not predict wind speeds increasing to over 40 knots within the next 4 hours.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Child Protection

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the timetable is for the introduction of computer systems to (a) monitor the activities of child protection agencies and (b) cross-reference knowledge held by other agencies through social services departments. [138485]

Margaret Hodge: In the Government's Green Paper "Every Child Matters" we set out our aim to share information across services and ensure professionals know of each others concerns at an early stage. To achieve this, we are proposing a local information hub in every local authority to enable professionals in all the local services which impact on children's lives to cross-reference knowledge, where appropriate, with other local children's services.

In light of responses to the Green Paper "Every Child Matters" the Government will examine the potential benefits and risks of introducing ICT-based information sharing systems and whether it is feasible to overcome the considerable technical barriers. We will be evaluating the work of the Trailblazers in due course and will use their experiences to inform future developments.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the social services departments that have introduced a computer system (a) to monitor the activities of child-protection agencies and (b) to cross-reference knowledge held by other agencies as recommended by the Laming Report. [138487]

Margaret Hodge: Social Services Departments currently use a variety of methods for collecting and sharing information on children. The answer to ensuring child protection is not in the use of computer systems alone. We need practitioners to share information at an early stage about children who may be at risk of falling through the net. We propose in the Green Paper "Every Child Matters" to introduce local information sharing hubs in every local authority to help identify early indications that a child is in need of specialised support through the bringing together of the knowledge and expertise held by all local children's services.

We are examining whether and how it is feasible to overcome the technical challenges in this area.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the implications of the transfer of responsibility for the Child Benefit Office to the Inland Revenue, with particular reference to whether the office's ability to assist local councils with information in connection with child protection inquiries. [137769]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 10 November 2003]: I understand that some difficulties have arisen in this context in a particular case, and that the organisations concerned are prevented from following established practices with regard to information-sharing. My officials are looking into the case urgently, with the aim of finding a rapid solution that will enable the organisations to continue to share information in the same way that they have previously done.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make it his policy to insert into the Green Paper on Children at Risk a requirement for risk assessment in contact cases involving domestic violence or child abuse; and if he will make a statement. [136396]

Margaret Hodge: The Green Paper, "Every Child Matters", was published on 8 September and the consultation period extends until 1 December. I am happy to consider this proposal as part my broader consideration of the consultation responses. It would be premature to make a statement at the present time.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment was made of the risk to children and young people in domestic violence situations in drawing up the Green Paper on Children at Risk; and if he will make a statement. [136397]

Margaret Hodge: The Green Paper "Every Child Matters" sets out the Government's response to Lord Laming's Inquiry into the tragic death of Victoria Climbie and is intended to help all children including those at risk from domestic violence. It was published on 8 September and the consultation period will last until 1 December. It would be premature for me to make a statement at this time while the consultation process is still on-going.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what further consultation will take place with young people about the services and facilities they need following the publication of the Green Paper, "Every Child Matters". [138377]

Margaret Hodge: Consultation events on the Green Paper, Every Child Matters specifically aimed at children and young people, have been running since October.

The aim of the consultation events is to gather ideas from children and young people about what the Government can do to improve services which directly affect them such as health, education, social services, youth offending teams and youth and leisure services.

So far around 40 consultation events have taken place across the country and these have proved to be highly informative.

There are a further 12 events scheduled between now and the end of November.

Computer Science Graduates

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what percentage of computer science graduates remain unemployed for 12 months or more following graduation. [140344]

Alan Johnson: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Foster Care

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the most recent weekly contributions made by each local authority for children in foster care up to the age of 17 were; what these contributions were in 1997 prices; what the allowances were in 1997; and what assessment he has made of the differences in payments made by local authorities. [139058]

Margaret Hodge: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Day Care

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many applications were made to Ofsted for registration of day care facilities in the last three years in (a) Leeds and (b) England; and what the average time taken to process such applications was in (i) Leeds and (ii) England in the last year for which figures are available. [131519]

Margaret Hodge: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

A-levels

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils in each local education authority obtained an A-level in (a) physics, (b) chemistry, (c) German, (d) a modern foreign language other than French or German and (e) a classical language in the last year for which information is available; and what proportion each represented of (i) the 18-year-old cohort and (ii) the 18-year-old cohort in full-time education. [138888]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 17 November 2003]: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Abusive Parents (Visitation Rights)

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what measures are being taken to change the system whereby abusive parents can gain visitation rights to their children; [138170]

(2) how many children were injured during contact visits with an abusive parent in (a) 2001, (b) 2002 and (c) 2003. [138171]

Margaret Hodge: In considering applications for contact (visitation rights) the courts apply the principle, enshrined in the Children Act 1989, that any decision must be based on what is in the child's best interest. We have amended the Children Act 1989 to extend the definition of harm to include harm to a child caused by witnessing domestic violence. We will commence this new provision as soon as resources allow. In 2001 the Government endorsed guidelines on contact and domestic violence produced by the Children Act Sub-Committee of the Lord Chancellor's Advisory Board on Family Law. The guidelines have been promulgated and are being monitored and evaluated by research. I will shortly be announcing successful applicants for new supervised child contact centres, funded through joint Children's Fund/Sure Start funding. These new centres will provide safe venues where supervised contact in cases where safety is an issue can take place.

Data about the factors underpinning contact applications, such as allegations about injuries caused to children during previous contact with an allegedly violent parent, are not collected, either by the courts or centrally.

Adult and Community Education

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on recent trends in (a) enrolment to and (b) funding of courses in adult and community education. [133420]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have set out separately the figures for expenditure and numbers of learners in (i) adult and community learning and adult education courses run through local education authorities; (ii) learndirect; and (iii) Skills for Life. Together these equate most closely to adult and community education.

We have used the closest match between the figures for the number of learners and those for expenditure. Where there are differences these are explained in the footnotes.

Adult education classes

	Funding (£ million)[1]	All enrolments (million)[2]	Former non schedule two (thousand)[3]
Nov 2000	145	1.041	666
Nov 2001	153	1.052	679
Nov 2002	183	1.042	662

[1] Annual expenditure, by financial year, on adult and community learning run through local education authorities. The figures for 2002–03 include the budgets for Neighbourhood Learning (£10 million) and family learning (£7.5 million).
[2] Number of enrolments as at 1 November each year in adult education courses run by local education authorities. These include both courses leading to qualifications which were, prior to 2001–02, funded by the Further Education Funding Council, and local education authority secured adult and community learning. These courses largely do not lead to formal qualifications. Enrolments are not the same as learners. Individuals on a number of courses are counted more than once.
[3] These are courses offered by local education authorities which do not lead to formal qualifications. These figures equate most closely—but not exactly—to the budgets for adult and community learning.

Agriculture Courses

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many admissions there were to agriculture courses at universities and agricultural colleges in each of the last 10 years. [134546]

Alan Johnson: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

"Building Schools for the Future"

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will approve the bid made by the London Borough of Wandsworth under the "Building Schools for the Future" initiative. [140080]

Mr. Miliband: The London Borough of Wandsworth has submitted a proposal to be part of the first wave of "Building Schools for the Future" (BSF), starting in 2005–06. We are assessing all proposals from local education authorities (LEAs) against the criteria set out in our guidance. We aim to announce early in the New Year which proposals will be proceeding in 2005–06 and, in March, we will announce a further, larger group of LEAs for the following years. The Government have committed itself in BSF to a long-term programme of rebuilding and renewal to ensure that secondary education in every part of England has facilities of 21st century standard.

CAFCASS

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the Project Board to integrate finance, communication, human resources and case recording systems has been established by CAFCASS. [138759]

Margaret Hodge: A project was started in 2001 to develop an integrated case management system, including finance and human resources. This project was stopped as it was judged to be too high a risk. Government best practice is to reduce risk by breaking down large IT projects into smaller, more manageable, parts. Separate finance and payroll systems have now been procured by CAFCASS.

A case recording project is now under way, to implement the key information elements for case management. A Project Board, chaired by the Chief Executive is managing this work. The case recording system is being designed to be compatible with the systems in place and those to be developed.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) when CAFCASS practitioners will have the facility to amend the computerised records of the children with whom they work; [138760]

(2) what additional resources CAFCASS has identified for the implementation of a case management system; [138761]

(3) what the planned expenditure by CAFCASS is on the small scale computerised case record index for implementation during 2004. [138762]

Margaret Hodge: In its first year, CAFCASS implemented an IT infrastructure giving all staff access to email, word processing, spreadsheet, internet and intranet facilities. By building on this infrastructure CAFCASS will be able to implement, from May 2004, a case recording system for £125,000.

This will provide a national networked case database. Maintenance of the system, including amending children's records, will be an administrative rather than a practitioner function.

The case recording system is the first stage of wider case management systems. Once the case recording system is successfully implemented, further work will be done on the options and costs for further development and implementation of the remaining aspects of case management systems support.

Childhood Obesity

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what discussions he has had with other Departments about implementing a strategy to tackle childhood obesity. [138744]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Children's Centres

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children's centres there are in the United Kingdom; what plans he has to increase the number; and how many children each centre will be able to cater for. [133125]

Margaret Hodge: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Children's Commissioner for England

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what duties the post of Children's Commissioner for England will entail; and when the work force planning unit will be created; [133126]

(2) what resources will be made available to the Children's Commissioner for England. [133133]

Margaret Hodge: The Government set out in the Green Paper "Every Child Matters" our intention to legislate for the appointment of a Children's Commissioner as a new voice for all children and young people. The Green Paper indicates that the Commissioner should advise Government and engage with others, such as business and the media, whose decisions and actions affect children's lives. The Commissioner would ensure that the views of children and young people are heard, and report to Parliament through the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on progress against the outcomes for children set out in the Green Paper. Further details on the responsibilities and resources of the Commissioner will be made available in the light of the consultation, which runs until 1 December.

Work is also progressing rapidly on establishing the new structures to be adopted within the Department for Education and Skills, including the children's work force unit, to ensure delivery of the Green Paper, and full details will be announced soon.

Children's Homes

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many inspectors of homes that care for children were carried out in Somerset in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [136550]

Margaret Hodge: 145 inspections of children's homes were carried out in Somerset during the year ended 31 March 2002. The number of homes due to be inspected in that year was 77, each home would expect to have both an announced (i.e. with prior notice) and an unannounced (i.e. without prior notice) inspection each year.

In 2002–03, NCSC Inspectors carried out 60 announced inspections and 30 unannounced inspections of children's homes in Somerset.

It is expected that the NCSC will perform two inspections per year (one announced and one unannounced). However, as 2002–03 was the first year in which the NCSC was operational it should be taken into account that a large proportion of homes would not have been registered until the latter part of that year. Therefore the second inspection although within the time frame might not fall until the following year 2003–04.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills where homes in Somerset which are used to have children in care are located. [136551]

Margaret Hodge: The information requested is not collected centrally. Information about de-registered children's homes prior to April 2002 is most likely to be kept by the local authority in which the home was registered.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the private companies which look after children in care in Somerset. [136553]

Margaret Hodge: As of 3 November 2003 the private companies, not voluntary organisations, charities or local authority providers, that have registered with the National Care Standards Commission to look after children in care in Somerset are:

Families Care Ltd.
Safe Haven Residential and Respite Care
On Track (South West) Care Ltd.
Sedgemoor
New Horizon Centre Ltd.
Crossways
Sedgemoor College Ltd.
Plus One Residential and Foster Care Ltd.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children are in care in Somerset; and which counties they come from. [136554]

Margaret Hodge: Number of children looked after by Somerset CC, Bath and North East Somerset.

UA and North Somerset UA at 31 March 2002[1,2]

Local Authority	Total number of looked after children	Number of children placed inside local authority boundary	Number of children placed outside local authority boundary
Somerset CC	335	325	5
Bath and North East Somerset UA	145	105	40
North Somerset UA	150	140	10

[1] All figures are rounded to the nearest 5. Numbers may not add up to totals due to rounding.
[2] Figures in this table exclude children looked after under a series of short term placements.

Commonwealth Education Conference

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) budget and (b) actual cost was of the 15th Conference of Commonwealth Education Ministers held in Scotland last month. [139414]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 18 November 2003]: The administration, including the financial administration, of the 15th Conference of Commonwealth Education Ministers is a matter for the Scottish Executive. My Department will contribute a proportion of the conference costs, but I invite the hon. Gentleman to write to the Minister for Education and Young People at the Scottish Executive to seek the information he requires.

Connexions

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what his definition of a universal service is in relation to Connexions. [138540]

Margaret Hodge: Connexions is available to all young people between 13 and 19 in England. The service comprises initial information and advice on the full range of learning options to 19 and beyond; in-depth guidance and support, or access to specialist help, on anything that might prove a barrier to learning; and access to personal development opportunities to help a young person grow into a rounded independent citizen. Information and advice on post-16 learning options, including details of Education Maintenance Allowances and the Connexions Card, is available from Connexions.

The service is offered face-to-face in secondary schools, colleges and High Street centres, or electronically through Connexions Direct, the telephone- and web-based service. Connexions is accessible 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what minimum number of hours of careers and education advice each young person aged 13 to 19 can expect to receive from the Connexions Service. [138541]

Margaret Hodge: We do not specify a minimum number of hours of careers and education advice that young people should receive from the Connexions service. Connexions provides a service differentiated according to need. This includes advice on learning and career choices, as well as support on a wide range of other issues that represent a barrier to young people's participation and achievement in learning.

Schools share responsibility for meeting the needs of young people in relation to making learning and career choices, including responsibility for delivering a curriculum-based careers education programme to all students in Years 9–11 (to be extended to Years 7and 8 from September 2004) and for managing the Key Stage 4 options exercise.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many personal advisers were employed by each Connexions Partnership in (a) 2001, (b) 2002 and (c) 2003. [138542]

Margaret Hodge: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average caseload of Connexions personal advisers working with people aged 13 to 19 who are (a) in school, (b) in college and (c) not engaged in employment, education or training was in the last year for which figures are available. [138543]

Margaret Hodge: Information on the caseloads of Connexions personal advisers is not collected centrally by the Connexions Service National Unit. Individual Connexions Partnerships set allocations for each institution in their area and for working with those not engaged in employment, education or training. These allocations determine the caseloads of personal advisers and are based on an assessment of need in each institution and area.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of people aged 13 to 19 who were in (a) school, (b) further education college and (c) neither school nor further education college, received advice from Connexions in (i) 2001–02, (ii) 2002–03 and (iii) 2003–04. [138545]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people aged 13 to 19 in (a) school and (b) further education college were identified as needing intensive support by Connexions in (i) 2001–02, (ii) 2002–03 and (iii) 2003–04. [138546]

Margaret Hodge: The table below shows the number of young people in (a) compulsory education, and (b) post-compulsory education (both school and further education colleges) identified as needing intensive support and in depth guidance from Connexions in August of each of the last three years. The information relates only to Connexions Partnerships that were operational at that time.

	2001–02	2002–03 (August 2002)	2003–04 (August 2003)
Compulsory education	[1]	226,498	358,056
Post-compulsory education	[1]	91,769	173,639

[1] Information not collected in this format in 2001–02

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of the total number of Connexions personal advisers possess an NVQ Level 4, or equivalent, in (a) careers, (b) youth work, (c) social work and (d) other relevant disciplines. [138547]

Margaret Hodge: Information on the qualifications of personal advisers is not available in the form requested.

The information in the table shows the number and proportion of personal advisers working for the Connexions Service who are qualified to NVQ Level 4 or above as at April 2003. Details of the type of qualification are not collected by the Connexions Service National Unit.

All fully qualified personal advisers are required to hold an NVQ Level 4 or equivalent in a relevant professional discipline. Personal advisers who are not qualified to NVQ Level 4 should be actively working towards achieving this level.

The number and proportion of Personal Advisers working for Connexions qualified to NVQ Level 4 or above as at April 2003

Total number of Personal Advisers	5,780
Number of Personal Advisers with NVQ Level 4 or above	4,645
Percentage NVQ Level 4 or above	80

Contact Centres

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many contact centres there are in Wales; who is responsible for the funding of these centres; and what plans he has to increase the number of contact centres in Wales. [134841]

Margaret Hodge: There are six child contact centres in Wales that are members of the National Association of Child Contact Centres (NACCC). These child contact centres are run on a voluntary basis and raise funds from a variety of sources. Two benefit from partnership funding from the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service. All NACCC member child contact centres will benefit from funding by the Children's Fund of NACCC's Change Programme. NACCC is using this funding to develop clear accreditation standards for all its member contact centres. Child contact centres may also seek support from funds (such as Cymorth) provided by the Welsh Assembly Government, where centres provide or seek to provide services in line with the Assembly Government's devolved responsibilities. The Welsh Assembly Government is currently giving careful consideration to the way forward for supervised contact services in Wales.

Bechtel

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list contracts for consultancy or work carried out by Bechtel in each year since 1997 stating in each case (a) the nature of the work, (b) the value of the contract and (c) the duration of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [134680]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 19 November.

Correspondence

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to his answer of 17 November 2003, reference 138562, for what reason he describes his letter of 11 April to the hon. Member for Newcastle-under-Lyne as a party political document. [140258]

Alan Johnson: The reference in my previous reply to the hon. Member to a "party political document" related to the document "The Government's Higher Education Proposals Explained", of 5 November, and not to my letter to him of 11 April.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, if he will set out the basis for his statement in his letter of 11 April to the hon. Member for Newcastle-under-Lyme that he could not run a graduate tax arrangement alongside the existing loan repayment scheme. [140259]

Alan Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the letter I sent him on the 12 of November, a copy of which can be found in the House of Commons Library.

Director of Children's Services

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list those local authorities that have a Director of Children's Services; and on what date the post was created in each case. [129657]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 15 September 2003]: The Green Paper, "Every Child Matters", was published on 8 September and the consultation period extends until 1 December. It proposes the creation of Directors of Children's Services, accountable for local authority education and children's social services. This builds on practice in a number of local authorities. We are currently working with local authorities to identify how many authorities have integrated education and children's social services and have Directors of Children's Services.

Education Maintenance Allowance

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to his answer of 4 November 2003, Official Report, column 579W, if he will estimate how much it would cost to provide an education maintenance allowance of £40 a week rather than £30 a week, to all the young people who will be eligible for an EMA in (a) 2004–05, (b) 2005–06 and (c) 2006–07. [138320]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Education Revenue Accounts

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the percentage share of budget devoted to education revenue accounts by each English education authority for each of the last five years, in descending order. [140282]

Mr. Raynsford: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Education Spending

Joyce Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of GDP the United Kingdom spent on (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) higher education in the last year for which figures are available; and what information he collates on expenditure in other OECD countries. [139144]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my right hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Examination Results (Appeals)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research he has commissioned into the reasons for the changes on appeal of (a) AS and (b) A2 examinations; and if he will make a statement. [138703]

Mr. Miliband: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Foundation Degrees

Mr. Boswell To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to encourage conversion of (a) existing courses and (b) qualifications at Higher National Diploma level to foundation degrees. [133427]

Alan Johnson: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many people are studying for foundation degrees at (a) universities, (b) higher education colleges and (c) further education colleges in (i) Tyne and Wear, (ii) the North East and (iii) the UK; [137460]

(2) how many different foundation degrees are offered at (a) universities, (b) higher education colleges and (c) further education colleges in (i) Tyne and Wear, (ii) the North East and (iii) the UK. [137459]

Alan Johnson: The latest available information from the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE), is given in the table.

Numbers of students[1] studying for foundation degrees in English Institutions 2002–03

FEC	162	197	1162
HEI			3170
Grand total	556	706	12,417

[1] Covers students on full-time or part-time courses.

The latest figures published by the Universities and Colleges Admissions (UCAS) show that students on Foundation Degrees in 2003–04 will rise substantially: by early October, the number of students accepted for entry to full-time Foundation Degrees had increased by nearly 80 per cent. compared to the same point last year.

The latest course information on the UCAS website (www.ucas.ac.uk) shows that, for the 2004–05 academic year, there are 2,446 Foundation Degree courses offered in England, of which 191 are offered in the North East. The website lists institutions individually and does not list courses by type of institution, and nor does it show figures for Tyne and Wear separately. Foundation Degrees were introduced to respond to sector needs and cover a wide range of courses.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if he will list by (a) course and (b) institution the number of students who obtained foundation degrees in 2003; [139081]

(2) how many students who obtained foundation degrees in 2003 undertook the majority of their studies at (a) further education colleges, (b) institutes of higher education and (c) universities; [139082]

(3) how many students who obtained a foundation degree in 2003 studied (a) locally, (b) at an institution that required residential accommodation and (c) in the workplace; [139083]

(4) how many students who completed their foundation degree in 2003 enrolled for an honours degree course. [139080]

Alan Johnson: The information requested is not yet available. Information on the number of students who completed foundation degree (FD) courses in 2002/03 will not be available from the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) until January 2004.

The latest available figures from the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE), showing the distribution of all FD students by the type of institution in which they are studying, is given in the following table; the HEFCE figures do not identify whether the course has been studied locally, or in the workplace.

Information on the destinations of students who obtained FDs in 2002/03, including those who proceeded to further study, will not be available from HESA until July 2004.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students enrolled for foundation degrees in 2003, broken down by (a) course and (b) institution. [139084]

Alan Johnson: The latest available information for 2003/04 was published by the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) on 7 October. It showed that the total number of students accepted for entry to full-time foundation degree (FD) courses had risen to 5,448, an increase of nearly 80 per cent. compared to the same point last year. The figures were not disaggregated by institution. UCAS however does not cover students applying to part-time courses, and in 2002/03 around half of all FD students were on part-time courses.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average annual cost of a foundation degree course was in the last year for which figures are available; and what the cost was of a traditional three year honours degree course. [139086]

Alan Johnson: Information on the cost of foundation degrees and honours degrees is not identified separately. The Higher Education Funding Council for England funds honours degree and foundation degree courses on the basis of the same formula which varies according to subject, institutional and student factors. This funding for teaching is allocated to institutions as a block grant and how they allocate this is for them to determine. Institutions also receive funding from other sources both public and private and may use it to subsidise some courses or faculties. The actual cost may therefore vary between institutions and subjects.

The Higher Education Funding Council for England are currently consulting on possible changes to their funding method for teaching and one proposal is that a 10 per cent. premium is introduced for foundation degrees for the short term. This would recognise the higher costs associated with partnerships between higher education institutions, further education colleges and employers. The consultation closed for comments on 14 November.

Funding

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what amount of central government grant per head was paid to each local education authority in England in the last financial year for which figures are available. [140012]

Mr. Miliband: The information is not readily available. I will write to the right hon. Member with a full reply.

Graduate Tax

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 12 November 2003, Official Report, columns 347–48W, on graduate tax, if he will provide the references in his letters of 11 April and 3 June for answers to questions tabled on 5 November, refs (a) 137685, (b) 137686, (c) 137687, (d) 137744, (e) 137753, (f) 137754, (g) 137755, (h) 137756, (i) 137757 and (j) 137758. [139454]

Alan Johnson: All the hon. Member's questions relate to modelling the Government's proposals for a Graduate Contribution scheme or variants of it. An assessment of other models relative to the Graduate Contribution scheme was contained in the letters of 11 April, 3 June, and our response to the Select Committee on our Higher Education proposals on 28 July. Further material is also set out in my letter of 12 November. I can also confirm that we plan to publish a Regulatory Impact Assessment before the end of the year that will set out the financial implications of the policies announced in the Higher Education White Paper.

Grammar Schools

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list for each of the last five years in each of the local education authorities retaining grammar schools the percentage of children (a) with a special educational needs statement, (b) on free school meals and (c) from ethnic minorities in (i) grammar schools and (ii) non-selective schools. [136819]

Mr. Miliband: Information on school intake type (selective or non-selective entry) as reported by schools was collected for the first time in 2003. For earlier years it is possible to identify grammar schools, but not other school types with selective entry.

Therefore, information on grammar, other selective schools and non-selective schools is provided for 2003 only. For 1999 through to 2002 information is provided for grammar schools and all other schools, which might include some selective-entry schools.

Tables have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Higher/Further Education

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what resources have been allocated to (a) higher education and (b) further education for each of the last five years in (i) the West Midlands region and (ii) Stoke-on-Trent. [140129]

Alan Johnson: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students he estimates enrolled on courses of study for (a) Higher National Diploma and (b) foundation degrees in each of the last three academic years. [133601]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 21 October 2003]: The latest figures collected by the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) and Learning and Skills Council (LSC) are given in the table; comparable figures for 2002/03 will be available from HESA in January 2004, and from the LSC in spring 2004.

Early data for 2002/03, collected by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) covering both HE and FE sector institutions, show that there were 57,700 students on HNDs and 12,400 on Foundation Degrees.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of (a) GCSE year and (b) sixth form students have continued to higher education in (i) the North West and (ii) England in each year since 1992. [134891]

Alan Johnson: The available information on participation rates by region shows the proportion of 18-year-olds entering full-time undergraduate courses in the UK via the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS), and is given in the table. Comparable figures for the years prior to 1994 are not available centrally.

It should be noted that the proportions in the table are based only on the number of 18-year-olds entering full-time HE. This is a different definition to the Department's main measures of HE participation: the Age Participation Index (API), which measures the proportion of UK domiciled students who enter full-time HE by the age of 20, and the Initial Entry Rate (IER) which measures the proportion of 17–30 year old English domiciled first time entrants to full or part-time HE. Neither the API nor the IER are calculated for each LEA, because of the lack of detailed data at local authority level.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of (a) GCSE and (b) sixth form students have continued to higher education in (i) Somerset, (ii) the South West of England and (iii) England in each year since 1990. [135421]

Alan Johnson: The available information on participation rates by local authority and region shows the proportion of 18-year-olds entering full-time undergraduate courses in the UK via the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCASJ, and is given in the table. Comparable figures for the years prior to 1994 are not available centrally.

It should be noted that the proportions in the table are based only on the number of 18-year-olds entering full-time HE. This is a different definition to the Department's main measures of HE participation: the Age Participation Index (API), which measures the proportion of UK domiciled students who enter full-time HE by the age of 20, and the Initial Entry Rate (IER) which measures the proportion of 17 to 30-year-old English domiciled first time entrants to full or part-time HE. Neither the API nor the IER are calculated for each LEA, because of the lack of detailed data at local authority level.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what percentage of young people from (a) the North West Region, (b) Merseyside, (c) St Helens and (d) England took up places in higher education in each year since 1997; [137998]

(2) what proportion of young people from (a) the North West region, (b) Merseyside and (c) St Helens have studied or are studying at higher education establishments in each of the last five years. [138013]

Alan Johnson: The available information on participation rates of young people by local authority and region shows the proportion of 18–20 year olds entering full-time undergraduate courses in the UK via the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS), and is given in the table.

It should be noted that this is a different measure of participation to the Department's Initial Entry Rate (IER). The IER measures the proportion of 17–30 year old English domiciled first time entrants to full or part-time HE, and has been developed to measure progress towards the Government's aim of 50 per cent. participation in HE by 2010. The IER is not calculated for each local authority because of the lack of detailed data at this level.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to increase the number of students in higher education establishments in (a) the North West region, (b) Merseyside and (c) St Helens. [138011]

Alan Johnson: The annual grant letter to the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) of 22 January 2003 set out the planned increases in full-time equivalent student numbers up to 2005–06. The spending plans assume a national increase of 56,000 places between 2003–04 and 2005–06 compared to the plans for 2002–03.

In HEFCE's last round of bids for additional student places, the North West region was allocated an additional 4,687 full time equivalent places from 2003–04 to 2005–06. Of these 1,263 will be in higher education establishments in Merseyside. There are no higher education institutions in St Helens. No further education colleges in St Helens have been allocated additional places for higher education courses in this bidding round.

In addition, HEFCE has initiated a bidding exercise for institutions that wish to expand their Foundation Degree places in 2004–05. The closing date for institutions to submit their bids is 3 December 2003. Within this exercise 10,000 additional full time equivalent Foundation Degree places are being allocated nationally up to 2005–06. Nearly 1,400 of these are expected to be in North West institutions. Figures for Merseyside are not yet available.

At present it is unlikely that there will be any further bidding exercises for additional student places in the next two years.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what additional funding he plans to transfer to the National Assembly for Wales pursuant to his plans to devolve responsibility for higher education. [139106]

Alan Johnson: No decisions have been reached yet. The funding to be transferred will depend on the passage of legisiation in the UK Parliament and the outcome of Spending Review 2004.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, if he will publish the latest research he has received on (a) participation rates and (b) drop-out rates in higher education by (i) parliamentary constituency and (ii) local education authority in (A) England and Wales, (B) Scotland and (C) Northern Ireland. [139635]

Alan Johnson: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department has taken to promote better financial understanding in schools and colleges of the changes contained in the White Paper on Higher Education. [139640]

Alan Johnson: Following the publication of the White Paper "The Future of Higher Education", my department published a booklet "The Future of Higher Education—what it means to students and parents" to ensure that prospective students and their parents are made fully aware of the planned changes arising from the White Paper and how these changes could affect them. Some of these proposals will require Parliamentary Approval before coming into force, so legislation will be introduced to bring this about.

A letter with a copy of the booklet and information on how to order copies was sent to all secondary school head teachers and FE college principals.

In addition, information on the changes to student finance is included in the Aimhigher teachers and tutors pack, all of the booklets for 13–16 year olds, 16–19 year olds, Parents and Mature students in the Aimhigher series, which are sent to schools and colleges on request. The Student Finance Guide "How to get help financial help as a student" outlines the changes proposed in 2006, and is distributed to school pupils through UCAS conventions, LEAs and on request through the nationally advertised helpline.

The school and college Aimhigher road show facilitators are briefed on 2006 changes and will be able to outline these too if asked.

Connexions partnerships have been informed and the HE portal contains the proposed changes.

Imams

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many institutions in the United Kingdom provide training for those wishing to qualify as imams; how many places each offered in 2002–03; and if he will make a statement. [136103]

Alan Johnson: The latest figures from the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) show that 12 universities currently offer courses in Islamic studies, although completion of these courses would not necessarily entitle the successful student to qualify as an Imam. The number of places on each course is not held centrally.

The Home Office and Learning and Skills Council have recently invited representatives of the Islamic community to join a new working group to advise on training and qualifications for Imams, including pilot programmes to test different models. The group's interim advice (due in spring 2004) will inform the development of generic competence-based qualifications for community leadership which may be supported by the Learning and Skills Council.

Maintenance Grants

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions he has had with colleagues from other Departments regarding increasing annual maintenance grants above those proposed in the White Paper on Higher Education. [139166]

Alan Johnson: I refer my hon. Friend to my previous reply to him of 17 November 2003 (references 139627 and 139629).

"Making Contact Work"

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action his Department is taking to implement the recommendations of the report, "Making Contact Work". [138685]

Margaret Hodge: The Government published an interim response to "Making Contact Work" on 6 August 2002. Stakeholder Groups were established to look in detail at the recommendations and their work has helped to inform the development of our response to the report. I am currently considering the recommendations further in the light of the advice of the Groups and a final response will be published shortly.

Market Research

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list each item of market and opinion research commissioned since May 1997 by (a) his Department and (b) agencies and non-departmental public bodies for which his Department is responsible; what the purpose of each item was; and whether the results were published. [137011]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much his Department spent on (a) opinion polling and (b) market research in the last financial year; and if he will make a statement. [139979]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Medical Students

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many medical students there were in each year since 1992; and how many medical students are attending Hull York Medical School in its initial year. [136055]

Alan Johnson: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Modern Apprenticeships

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what evaluation he has made of employer response to the introduction of modern apprenticeships. [133251]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Neighbourhood Support Fund (Leeds)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many young people in (a) Leeds and (b) Leeds, West have been reached by the neighbourhood support fund. [132733]

Margaret Hodge: The number of young people engaged in learning and self developmental activities through NSF projects based in Leeds local education authority since the start of the pilot is 3,017, through 37 projects. Young people supported by NSF projects based in Leeds, West number 542, through a total of eight projects. This information has been collected via the Department's managing agents on a central database. However, it is difficult to give totally accurate figures for young people from Leeds, West because young people can, and do, attend NSF projects outside of their immediate area. The database only holds information by project and does not link to the addresses of the young people attending them. These statistics cover the period from April 2000 to September 2003.

NM Rothschild and Sons Ltd

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on services provided to his Department by NM Rothschild and Sons Ltd. since 1977. [139970]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: NM Rothschild and Sons Ltd. provided my Department with financial advice on the sale of student loan debt from 1996 onwards and at the end of 2000 they also conducted research on the future of the National Grid for Learning (NGfL).

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many people have been employed by each of the non-departmental bodies directly funded by his Department on a (a) part-time, (b) full-time and (c) contractual basis in each year since 1997. [137207]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Ofsted

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what studies have been carried out on the impact of school closure on educational attainment of former pupils relocated to a different school following a failed Ofsted inspection. [140057]

Mr. Miliband: No formal studies have been commissioned, but there are several recent instances of the successful transfer of pupils from a failing school to another school, and where the pupils have subsequently improved their attainment rate. This is also the experience of most pupil groups in new schools created under the Government's Fresh Start programme.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools were closed following an Ofsted inspection in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [140058]

Mr. Miliband: In the last 12 months, 16 maintained schools have closed after receiving an Ofsted inspection report indicating that special measures were required. Four of these schools were given a Fresh Start. One independent school served with a Notice of Complaint following an Ofsted inspection also closed in that period.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to his Answer of 27 October, Official Report, column 76W, how many Ofsted inspectors in the Teacher Education Division were recruited from posts as (a) headteachers and (b) local education authority advisers. [140239]

Mr. Miliband: This is a matter for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, David Bell, will write to the hon. member and place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Performance Monitoring

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total cost was of (a) setting, (b) monitoring and (c) measuring the performance targets for his Department in 2002–03; and how many and what grades of civil servants monitor these targets. [137945]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the performance targets that (a) his Department and (b) its agencies and non-departmental public bodies are required to meet; and if he will specify for each target (i) who sets it and (ii) who monitors achievement against it. [137961]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Physical Education

Angela Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are being taken to ensure that girls are receiving the minimum two hours physical education in school a week. [139566]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 19 November 2003]: The Government are investing more than £1 billion to transform Physical Education (PE), school sport and club links in England. This funding will help deliver an ambitious Public Service Agreement target, shared by DCMS and DfES, to increase the percentage of school children, including girls, who spend a minimum of two hours each week on high-quality PE and school sport within and beyond the curriculum to 75 per cent. by 2006.

Spearheading action is the creation of a network of 400 Specialist Sports Colleges and School Sport Partnerships (families of schools that come together to provide additional sports opportunities for all children). A third of schools in England are already benefiting from being within a school sport partnership. All partnerships set specific targets to increase participation of groups (including girls) that traditionally can be marginalised by PE and sport. Additionally there are five girls' only sports colleges.

Pre-school Provision

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent discussions he has had on pre-schooling; what plans he has to expand high-quality pre-school care; and if he will make a statement. [139445]

Margaret Hodge: Ministers have discussed pre school issues with a wide range of organisations and individuals in recent months.

All four-year-olds now have access to a free, part time early education place and by April 2004 all three-year-olds will have access to a free part time place. Presently 88 per cent. of three-year-olds enjoy free early education.

We have also funded a major expansion of child care through our National Childcare Strategy. Since 1997, 745,000 new places have been created, benefiting more than 1.3 million children. Following the substantial increase in child care expenditure agreed as part of the 2002 Spending Review, new places will be provided for over 2 million children by 2006.

Our National Standards set a benchmark of quality below which no registered child care should fall and Ofsted inspects against these Standards.

Specific initiatives, such as Sure Start local programmes, Neighbourhood Nurseries and our new children's centres, are expanding high quality, safe child care in disadvantaged communities, increasingly provided alongside early education and family and health support.

Primary Schools (Essex)

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many special needs teachers were employed in primary schools by Essex county council on 1 September. [139519]

Mr. Miliband: The information is not available in the form requested. In January 2003, there were 5,100 full-time equivalent regular teachers in maintained nursery and primary schools and a further 280 full-time equivalent regular teachers in maintained special schools, pupil referral units and education other than at school in Essex. All teachers must be able to differentiate their teaching to meet the needs of pupils with special educational needs in order to gain Qualified Teacher Status. In addition, special educational needs feature in the induction standards for new teachers.

School Buildings

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was paid in VAT on school buildings in the last three years. [139812]

Mr. Miliband: Schools that receive their funding for premises-related work through their local education authority may be required to pay VAT on certain types of work, but can then reclaim those costs. We do not have records of the amounts involved. Voluntary Aided schools cannot normally reclaim any VAT payable on work which is funded by capital grant paid by this Department, although that grant is increased to reflect the VAT costs.

Our records indicate that the amounts of VAT paid on this type of work are as follows:

	£ million
2001–02	23.01
2002–03	38.00
2003–04 (to date)	29.36

Notes:
1. The figures do not include VAT for Academies, City Technology Colleges, or former Grant Maintained schools.
2. VAT information for earlier years is not available.

School Funding

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what Surrey's change in funding was following the new funding arrangements for schools introduced in December 2002; what the national average was; and if he will make a statement. [139822]

Mr. Miliband: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether, in relation to the Government's education grant to Surrey in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04, allowance was made for (i) the increase in national insurance rates, (ii) the re-grading of teaching assistants, (iii) the non-government-funded parts of the increases in teachers' pensions and (iv) administration and insurance charges. [139826]

Mr. Miliband: The national grant settlement, which included the proportionate allocation for Surrey was sufficient in each of the years in question to fund all of the pressures listed above.

School Meals

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether (a) providers and (b) procurers of school meals are required to complete an assessment exercise which addresses the issues contained in the Why Diet is Important module of Unit 9B Science at Key Stage 3. [138996]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues.I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Secondment

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people from science and technology backgrounds have been seconded into the Civil Service in his Department in each of the last five years for which data are available. [138626]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Selective Education (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of pupils of each local authority which retains selective education in (a) grammar schools, (b) secondary modern schools or equivalent and (c) non-selective schools are from each ethnic minority. [137762]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 11 November 2003]: Information on the proportion of pupils by ethnic group is provided for schools that have indicated that they operate selective (grammar) entry, selective (other) entry and non-selective entry.

The information is based upon school intake type as reported by schools in the 2003 Annual Schools' Census.

Tables have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Silent Aeroplanes

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will provide funds to Cambridge University for research into silent aeroplanes. [140077]

Alan Johnson: The joint Cambridge University-Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) (CMI) which receives Government funding to promote collaborative research with industry, has recently announced a project to develop the design for a silent aircraft. The Engineering and Physical Science Research Council (EPSRC) has also recently awarded a grant to the Cambridge University engineering department for research into jet engine noise at take off.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in each local authority receive additional support through the code of practice on special educational needs; and what assessment his Department has made of differences in the pattern of support identified among local authorities. [139603]

Margaret Hodge: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what changes have taken place in the number of children in (a) nursery, (b) primary and (c) secondary education with statements of special educational need since 1997, broken down by local authority. [139604]

Margaret Hodge: The number of pupils with statements of SEN has increased in all sectors since 1997. However, since 2000 the rate of increase has levelled out and the proportion of pupils with statements in England has remained at 3 per cent. for the last two years. A table containing the number of pupils for each authority will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to develop common definitions of need for children with special educational needs. [139605]

Margaret Hodge: From January 2004 we shall be collecting information about the type of special need for children with statements of SEN and those at the School Action Plus phase in the SEN Code of Practice. In preparation for this exercise we have provided all schools with guidance, which includes definitions of 11 special educational needs. A copy of the publication, Data Collection by Type of Special Educational Need, is available at: www.dfes.gov.uk/sen

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total amount spent by Somerset county council on special needs teaching was in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [139044]

Margaret Hodge: The Department does not collect expenditure data within mainstream schools for teaching on special needs. The following table therefore only contains data for teaching expenditure within special schools in Somerset local education authority.

Total expenditure on teaching staff within special schools for Somerset LEA

	Special schools (£)
2001–02	3,528,393
2002–03	3,595,259

Notes:
1. The 2001–02 figures are taken from Table 3 of the LEA's 2001–02 section 52 Outturn Statement.
2. The 2002–03 figures are taken from Table A of the LEA's 2002–03 section 52 Outturn Statement. The figures are still subject to validation by the Department and could change.
3. The figures reported are in cash terms.
4. The figures are as reported by the LEA.

Specialist Schools

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of (a) technology, (b) sports, (c) arts, (d) languages, (e) engineering, (f) science, (g) mathematics and computing and (h) business and enterprise specialist schools select 10 per cent. of their pupil intake on the basis of aptitude. [140194]

Mr. Miliband: On the basis of the latest collated figures, 6.3 per cent. of technology, 5 per cent. of sports, 8.8 per cent. of arts and 3.2 per cent. of language colleges select up to 10 or more per cent. of their pupil intake on the basis of aptitude.

The Department does not yet have figures on aptitude selection in relation to schools designated in the new engineering, mathematics and computing or business and enterprise specialisms. Aptitude selection in science is not permitted according to the regulations made under the School Standards and Framework Act 1998.

Student Courses

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students were on courses leading to (a) ordinary national diplomas, (b) higher national diplomas and (c) foundation degrees in each of the last three years. [133426]

Alan Johnson: The latest figures collected by the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) and Learning and Skills Council (LSC) are given in the table; comparable figures for 2002/03 will be available from HESA in January 2004, and from the LSC in spring 2004.

Early data for 2002/03, collected by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) covering both HE and FE sector institutions, show that there were 57,700 students on HNDs and 12,400 on Foundation Degrees. The HEFCE data does not separately identify OND or equivalent courses.

Student Finance

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost was to his Department per pound loaned of subsidising loans from the Student Loans Company in the last year for which figures are available. [137167]

Alan Johnson: After taking into account the effect of inflation, the total cost to DfES of providing for loan subsidies can vary from year to year, resulting in a different cost per pound loaned. In 2001–02 the cost per pound was 41 p.

The factors affecting the total costs are the Treasury discount rate, which is used to calculate the costs in the DfES Accounts rather than the actual cost of borrowing; the retail price index; and the forecast repayment of loans, which affects the amount set aside in the provision for future subsidy costs. The 2001–02 costs were based on the 6 per cent. Treasury cost of capital rate. From 2003–04 the cost will be calculated using the revised 3.5 per cent. rate.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what recent reports he has received into student attitudes towards debt if they are from family backgrounds with (a) lower incomes, (b) middle incomes and (c) upper incomes. [139637]

Alan Johnson: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, (1) what information he has collated on the percentage of students from (a) lower income, (b) middle income and (c) upper income backgrounds that (i) hold a part-time job during term-time, (ii) live with their parents during term-time and (iii) attend a university close to their home; and what changes have taken place in these statistics since 1997; [139479]

(2) what information he has collated on the percentage of students from (a) lower income, (b) middle income and (c) upper income households who leave university (i) debt free and (ii) with debts of over £11,715; [139480]

(3) what estimate he has made of the percentages of the income of students from (a) lower income, (b) middle income and (c) upper income backgrounds that are derived from (i) student loans, (ii) bank loans and overdrafts, (iii) credit cards, (iv) grants, (v) parental contributions and (vi) work during university; [139630]

(4) what reports he has received on how much students from (a) lower income, (b) middle income and (c) upper income backgrounds borrow by the time they leave university from (i) the Student Loans Company, (ii) parents, (iii) bank loans and overdrafts and (iv) credit cards; [139631]

(5) what recent reports he has received regarding the relationship between students' family incomes and their level of debt after leaving university; [139632]

(6) what is the average level of debt held after leaving university by a student from (a) a lower, (b) a middle and (c) an upper income background was in 2002–03. [139633]

Alan Johnson: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the waiver for part-time students on income support will be available for those reading post-graduate courses who have not previously taken a first degree. [139929]

Alan Johnson: The fee grant that is being introduced in 2004/05 will be available for part-time students on undergraduate courses. Although part-time postgraduate students will not qualify for the fee grant, they may be able to apply for a career development loan or a research council bursary to support their study. If they are disabled, they may also qualify for a disabled students' allowance.

Sure Start

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in Bath and North East Somerset are benefiting from the Sure Start programme. [136338]

Margaret Hodge: Bath and North East Somerset has one Sure Start local programme. This is based in the wards of Twerton, Southdown, Westmoreland, Odd Down and Oldfield and serves 842 children under the age of four.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to his answer of 6 October 2003, Official Report, column 1146W, on Sure Start, (1) what constitutes contact in the context of Sure Start programmes contacting children living in these areas; [133209]

(2) how many children in each of the Birkenhead Sure Start areas have been contacted by Sure Start in addition to the visit every mother of a newborn baby receives from (a) a midwife and (b) a health visitor. [133210]

Margaret Hodge: Contact by Sure Start local programmes is defined to mean that a child aged 0–3 and their parent or carer has taken up services. This might be a home visit, or participation in a centre based activity such as child care or a playgroup, parenting or smoking cessation class, or a child health check. Visits to families of new born babies include visits by programme staff, and routine visits by midwives and health visitors provided they inform the family about Sure Start services. Information is not collected separately on whether the visit to a family of a new born baby was by a member of the programme's staff, a midwife or a health visitor.

Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding his Department has allocated to the Sure Start programme in Battersea constituency since its establishment; and how it has been spent. [133881]

Margaret Hodge: Sure Start Battersea has been operational since October 2000. The revenue and capital allocations and the current spend to date for the programme are shown as follows:

Revenue

	Grant allocation	Actual spend
2000/01	290,000	125,252
2001/02	800,000	506,847
2002/03	855,000	855,099
2003/04	800,000	n/a

Revenue funding has been used to support the development of a range of services for 0–3's and their families within the catchment area, such as outreach and home visiting, child care, support for families and primary and community health care.

Capital

Total allocation (to be spent by October 2004)	1,075,000
Total approved	852,897
Total spend to date	326,685

Capital funding of £1,075,000 has been allocated to Sure Start Battersea of which £852,897 has been approved for a Sure Start centre at the Katherine Low Settlement, to contribute towards the re-development of an early years outdoor area at Falconbrook School and to develop local play areas.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of children at day nurseries sponsored by Sure Start are (a) paying full fees for care and (b) receiving financial help, broken down by education authority. [136205]

Margaret Hodge: The Government do not collect data in this form as there are numerous sources of financial help to pay for child care costs, which can be accessed by parents.

The Government recognise that making child care affordable is a key challenge for the National Childcare Strategy and have made a substantial investment to achieve this. Working parents, subject to the level of their income, may receive support through the child care element of the Working Tax Credit. There is regional information on the numbers of families benefiting from the child care element of the Working Tax Credit but this does not include a breakdown of types of child care used.

Families are further supported through early education places, which can be used to off-set the cost of child care. As a result of our policies, all four-year-olds are able to access a free, good quality, part-time early education place. From April 2004, six months ahead of the original target, this will be extended to all three-year-olds. Currently 88 per cent. of three-year-olds are able to benefit from some level of free provision.

In addition, support is also available through various grants and access funds for parents undertaking further and higher education, for participants on the New Deals and those receiving Jobseeker's Allowance. Lone Parents participating in the New Deal for Lone Parents programme, can receive assistance with the costs of registered child care while attending job interviews, approved training and meetings with their personal advisers. The Care To Learn Scheme launched in August this year enables young parents (16–18) who are in education or training to access help with registered child care costs.

The Government are providing start-up funding to support the development of child care for children under five in disadvantaged areas. Revenue funding to support the running costs of neighbourhood nurseries over the first three years of operation is made available to eligible local authorities at a rate of £5,400 per place. This is the equivalent of £270,000 for a 50-place nursery. It is for each local authority to determine the actual rate of support to individual providers based on local circumstances and its overall funding allocation.

Where good quality child care providers are facing financial difficulties, they may apply to the local authority for sustainability funding. For 2004–06 a specific sustainability fund of some £30 million will be available to help sustain child care provision. Any provider applying for such funding must be able to show that they will be viable in the future, as sustainability funding is aimed at short term support only.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children are attending Sure Start day nurseries. [136206]

Margaret Hodge: The information is not available in the form requested.

Ofsted do not record the number of children who are attending child care settings but record instead the maximum number of places that can be offered by providers at any one time. Each one of these places may be taken by more than one child. Ofsted publish quarterly statistics about the number of child care providers and places on their internet site, under the categories of full day care, sessional day care, child minders, out of school clubs, and crèches. The table shows the latest information on the number of places available by each of these categories.

Registered child care places in England—position as at 30 June 2003

	Number of places[1]
Full day care	398,900
Child minders	307,300
Sessional day care	287,000
Out of school day care	310,100
Crèche day care	45,100

[1] Figures are rounded to the nearest 100 places.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers in Surrey were eligible for the higher salaries scale payable only to experienced teachers in each of the last four years. [139821]

Mr. Miliband: The number of teachers assessed as passing the threshold in Surrey is:

September 2000 = 2940;

September 2001 = 542; and

September 2002 = 743.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many newly qualified teachers employed in (a) Surrey, (b) Kent, (c) Sussex and (d) Hampshire in the last 12 months have started on Scale 4 level salaries. [139825]

Mr. Miliband: The information is not available centrally.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of the costs of higher salaries for experienced teachers has been met by central Government in Surrey, in each of the last four years for which figures are available. [139820]

Mr. Miliband: Experienced eligible teachers have been able to apply for "threshold" payments since September 2000 and these are fully funded by central Government. Such teachers may also make further progress along the "upper pay scale" and there are substantial grants to assist this, totalling some £175 million in 2003–04.

Teaching Vacancies

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many vacant deputy head teacher posts existed in (a) primary schools, (b) secondary schools and (c) special schools in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority; and if he will express the figures as a percentage of the total number of head teachers. [133680]

Mr. Miliband: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Teenage Unemployment

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many 16 to 18 year olds not in education, employment or training there were in each year since 1992. [133975]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Top-up Fees

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, who will pay the planned maximum top-up fee of £3,000 for (a) a Welsh, (b) a Scottish and (c) a Northern Ireland student attending an English university. [139934]

Alan Johnson: It will be for universities themselves to set their fee levels, provided that they have an access agreement approved by the Office for Fair Access. All UK-domiciled students attending an English university will have to pay the fee.

All English-domiciled students will have the option to defer the payment of their fees. It will be for the devolved administrations themselves to decide whether to offer their students the option to defer payment of the fee, by providing them with a loan for fees.

Truancy

Andy King: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will advise local education authorities that they should seek a conditional discharge from magistrates when taking lone parents to court for the truancy of their children rather than seeking a fine. [139973]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: It is for magistrates to decide how to dispose of a case where a parent is prosecuted for truancy and, if imposing a fine, they must take into account the parent's means to pay.

It would not be appropriate to advise local education authorities to seek a conditional discharge in all cases involving lone parents as each case should be considered on its own facts.

The Department has issued guidance to all local education authorities on prosecuting parents including advice on the range of ways in which the court may dispose of a case and mitigating factors.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much a secondary teacher on national average earnings will pay towards the proposed graduate contribution scheme each year until the contribution has been paid off; and if he can give the same figure as a proportion of (a) before income tax and national insurance contribution income and (b) after income tax and national insurance contribution income. [137472]

Alan Johnson: Under our proposals, graduates begin repayments on their student loan once they are earning above the £15,000 repayment threshold. They pay 9 per cent. of their salary above the threshold per year. Loan repayments will continue until the loan has been paid off:

> where a student has received the tuition fee remission grant, or the HE Grant, their loan will be lower, and therefore the time taken to repay the loan will be less.

In addition, students on Postgraduate Certificate in Education courses receive a £6,000 training bursary as well as having their tuition fees paid by the Government. Those who qualify in priority subjects (approximately one third of students) also receive a £4,000 Golden Hello after induction and this may be used to pay off student loan commitments.

The level of loan repayment is directly linked to individual earnings and the repayment system is progressive—the amount that goes in repayments rises as the graduate's income does. To this extent, the career progression of a secondary school teacher will have an influence on their loan repayments.

The average salary for newly-qualified full-time regular teachers in maintained secondary schools in England and Wales at 31 March 2002 was £18,2601. Therefore, that teacher would pay around 300 per year in loan repayments: that is approximately 1.6 per cent. of income before income tax and national insurance contribution; and 2.1 per cent. of income after income tax and national insurance contribution.

The average salary for full-time regular teachers with five years' experience in maintained secondary schools in England and Wales at 31 March 2002 was £26,0702. Therefore, that teacher would pay around £1,000 per year in loan repayments: that is approximately 3.8 per cent. of income before income tax and national insurance contribution; and 5.2 per cent. of income after income tax and national insurance contribution.

[1] DfES Database of Teacher Records

[2] Database of Teacher Records

[3] DfES Database of Teacher Records

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the income of (a) cohabiting partners and (b) new partners as a result of remarriage is taken into account in the assessment of residual household income for the exemption or remission of tuition fees; what changes he proposes; and what assessment he has made of the number of students likely to lose the entitlement to full or partial remission of tuition fees as a result. [139023]

Alan Johnson: The income of cohabiting partners and new partners is not currently taken into account in the assessment of residual income for the exemption or remission of tuition fees unless the student has been formally adopted.

We are proposing that the income of spouses and cohabiting partners of the student's natural parents is taken into account for new students whose courses start from September 2004. Where the household income is £20,970, a minimum contribution of £45 will be assessed. This will rise by £1 for every £9.50 of income above that threshold.

Since the change is to be implemented only for new students entering higher education in 2004/05, no student will lose their current entitlement to fee remission because of this change to the means test.

Estimates of the effects of the inclusion of cohabiting partners' income have been derived using income data from a number of sources and are indicative. Our best indication is that, once it reaches steady state, this change could account for a fall of approximately three points in the percentage of dependent students receiving full fee remission. The percentage of dependent students entitled to partial fee remission is expected to remain more or less unchanged.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what estimate he has made of the proportion of home students at each higher education institution who are (a) fully and (b) partly exempt from tuition fees. [139098]

Alan Johnson: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to my hon. Friend with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to ensure that any increase in the level of tuition fees will not have an adverse impact on the (a) supply, (b) retention, (c) diversity and (d) quality of students on (i) teaching, (ii) science, (iii) engineering, (iv) architecture, (v) veterinary and (vi) legal courses. [139908]

Alan Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to my previous reply to him of 12 November 2003, Official Report, column 354, in which I set out the measures for safeguarding access to higher education. With regard in particular to students on teaching courses, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State already monitors demand for, and take-up of, places on teacher training courses and has introduced a number of incentives aimed at encouraging teacher supply and retention. Students on Postgraduate Certificate in Education courses, for example, receive a £6,000 training bursary as well as having their tuition fees paid by the Government. Those who qualify in priority subjects (approximately one third of students) also receive a £4,000 Golden Hello after induction.

The Government will continue to take such measures as it believes appropriate to ensure that teacher supply meets demand. I would expect employers in other sectors of the labour market to take the action they believe is necessary to attract adequate numbers of graduates. The Office for Fair Access will, however, also play a role in ensuring that policies are in place to safeguard access to higher education across all subjects.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of variable tuition fees on social access to higher education in the United States contained in the reports (a) "Empty promises: The myth of college access in America" and (b) "Access denied: Restoring the Nation's commitment to equal educational opportunity", issued by the Advisory Committee on Student Financial Assistance in 2002 and 2001, respectively; and if he will place copies in the Library; [140088]

(2) what assessment he has made of the findings of the 2003 report, "HECS and Opportunities in Higher Education", into the effects of the rises in variable tuition fees since 1996 in Australia on demand among (a) school leavers, (b) mature students and (c) students from lower socio-economic backgrounds doing highest rate, band three courses; and if he will place a copy in the Library; [140089]

(3) what conclusions his Department has drawn from its assessment of statistics as to the percentage of students (a) from lower income backgrounds and (b) in receipt of basic federal assistance in the form of Pell grants admitted as part of the annual intake by Ivy League universities; [140090]

(4) what assessment his Department has made of Canadian research on variable tuition fees and social access to medical courses at the University of Toronto in the paper, Effects of rising tuition fees on medical school class composition and financial outlook, issued by the Canadian Medical Association in 2002; and if he will place a copy in the Library; [140091]

(5) what further international research he examined on the impact of (a) variable tuition fees, (b) debt aversion and (c) unmet student financial need before the White Paper on Higher Education was published in January, in addition to the two papers issued before that date which he has placed in the Library. [140092]

Alan Johnson: During the development of the White Paper the Department reviewed a range of existing and on-going national and international research evidence into the impact of different student support policies on levels and patterns of student demand.

The Department continues to keep relevant research reports under review as they are published. I also refer my hon. Friend to the reports placed in the Library of the House in answer to his question on 17 November 2003, Official Report, column 562W.

Undergraduate Degrees

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people applied to study undergraduate degrees in (a) law, (b) medicine, (c) engineering, (d) nursing, (e) education and (f) dentistry at higher education institutions in London in each year since 1992; and if he will make a statement. [136791]

Alan Johnson: Information for the years 1992 and 1993 are not available centrally. The available information for the years 1994 to 2002 covers all applicant numbers to full time and sandwich first degrees through the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) to institutions in Greater London and is shown in the table.

For students entering teacher training courses, there has been a progressive shift over many years from BEd to PGCE courses; only the BEd courses are covered by UCAS. Following the Roberts Review, which looked into the supply of people with science, technology, engineering and mathematics skills, we have introduced a number of initiatives designed to improve staffing and the teaching environment of these subjects, including additional funding for pay and for the development of university science infrastructure.

[3] Not all of the subjects within this group are teacher training courses. During the years shown in the table the courses included under in this group have varied: in 1995, Sports science, Leisure studies and Recreation Management were added some of these were re-allocated to other subject group in 1996, and the remainder re-allocated in 1997.

Universities

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, how many (a) applications and (b) applications per place were received to read (i) biology, (ii) English, (iii) geography, (iv) history, (v) law and (vi) mathematics at (A) Birmingham, (B) Bristol, (C) Durham, (D) Leeds, (E) Liverpool, (F) Manchester, (G) Newcastle, (H) Nottingham, (I) Sheffield and (J) York universities in academic year 2002–03. [139387]

Alan Johnson: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment he has made of the content and design of his Department's website. [139336]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I am unable to provide the information requested before the House prorogues. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Youth Unemployment

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) representations and (b) discussions he has had in the last 12 months with (i) Connexions and (ii) other agencies on young people aged between 16 and 24 who are not in work, education, training or a new deal programme; what estimate he has made of the number of young people who fell into that category in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [139446]

Margaret Hodge: We have had no representations from Connexions or other agencies on this matter. We have set the Connexions service a target to reduce the number of 16 to 18-year-olds who are not in education, employment or training by 10 per cent. by November 2004. The baseline date from which this will be measured is November 2002.

The New Deal for Young People is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions. Entry is mandatory for all 18 to 24-year-olds who have been claiming Jobseeker's Allowance continuously for six months. The scheme has helped nearly 450,000 young people move into work.

According to estimates from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) around 700,000 or 12.25 per cent. of 16 to 25-year-olds in England were not in Employment, Education or Training in winter 2002–03. Around a third of these were women with dependent children.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 413

SESSION 2002–2003

10th November 2003—20th November 2003

Printed indexes to Hansard

The fortnightly index is one of three printed indexes to Commons Hansard produced from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS). It contains references to material in the daily parts and weekly edition of Hansard. The other indexes produced are:

- The volume index to Hansard. This covers the same date range as the fortnightly index but references may be different as a result of changes to the text and column numbering in the bound volume.
- The sessional index to Hansard. This contains references to material in the bound volumes for a whole session.

Indexes on the Parliamentary website

Fortnightly, volume and sessional indexes covering material from the beginning of the 1999/2000 session will also appear on the Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk with links to the full text of Hansard.

SCOPE

The indexes include entries covering:

- The content of all material recorded in Hansard, including debates, procedural motions and questions.
- The names of all Members contributing to the Parliamentary business recorded in Hansard.
- The names of some types of Parliamentary business whenever they occur in Hansard. These are 'Ministerial statements', 'Business statements', 'Opposition days' and 'Estimates days'.

ARRANGEMENT

- All headings are in one word-by-word alphabetical sequence, with Members' contribution entries distinguished from other entries by italics.
- Where a Member contributes to Parliamentary business and is the subject of Parliamentary business there are separate contribution and subject entries, the subject entry coming first.
- Entries beginning 'Mac' and 'Mc' are sorted in one sequence as 'Mac'.
- 'St', when abbreviated for Saint, is filed as 'Saint'.
- Numbers are filed as if spelt out, e.g. '10 Downing Street' as if 'Ten Downing Street'.

HEADINGS

Choice of headings

- Specificity—Entries summarise the overall content of a debate or question as specifically as the various POLIS thesauruses allow. For example, Education, Higher education, Universities or the name of a particular university is used depending on the breadth of the item.
- Name headings—Specific entries are included for the names of people, places, institutions, organisations, committees, programmes, initiatives, publications and legislation when these constitute the overall subject of an item.
- Organisations and subjects—Organisation entries are preferred for material about the general performance, administration and staffing of an organisation (for example, United Kingdom Passports Agency, Standards). Subject entries are preferred for what organisations do as part of their duties (for example, Passports, Fees and charges).

Geographical coverage

- Subject headings—Subject headings are assumed to refer to the whole of England, Great Britain or the United Kingdom unless otherwise stated.
- Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales—Material relating to the whole of Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales is indexed under these headings.
- Places within the UK—Material about specific towns, areas and institutions is entered under the name of the specific town, area or institution.
- Foreign countries—Most material relating to foreign countries is collected under the name of that country. Some additional material may be found under the names of—groups of countries, areas within countries, geographical features, place names associated with particular issues, politicians and heads of state, international bodies, and institutions and companies operating in those countries.
- EC/EU material—General material about the European Communities and European institutions as bodies is entered under 'European Communities' and 'EC institutions'. Organisational material about specific communities and institutions is entered under the name of the body, for example 'European Coal and Steel Community' or 'European Parliament'. Material about what the Communities and institutions are doing or propose to do is entered under various subject headings beginning 'EC' such as 'EC environmental policy'.

Parliamentary material and business

- Material about Parliament—This is indexed under 'Parliament', the names of the two Houses, the 'Palace of Westminster' and parts of the Parliamentary estate (such as 'Portcullis House').
- Committees—Material about committees is indexed under 'Committees', types of committee (such as 'Select committees') and the names of individual committees (such as 'Home Affairs Select Committee').
- Parliamentary proceedings/procedures—Material discussing these is indexed under the specific type of proceeding (such as 'Parliamentary questions' or 'Oral questions'), procedure (such as 'Calling of Members') or issue (such as 'Unparliamentary expressions').
- Legislation—Entries for Parliamentary proceedings on bills and statutory instruments are entered under their titles. Where the lead word of the bill or statutory instrument does not provide a full or clear indication of the subject there are additional subject entries when the bill or instrument is debated. For example, debates on the 'Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill' have entries under 'Pensions' and 'Social security benefits' as well as under the title of the Bill.
- Members' names—These are given in the form by which the Member prefers to be known.
- Speaker and Chair—Contributions by the Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Contributions from the chair during Committees of the Whole House are brought together under 'Chairman of Committee of the Whole House'. Significant rulings and statements (as opposed to routine comments) are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements' in both cases.

Guidance on headings

- Cross references—'See' references indicate all the material has been entered under another heading. 'See also' references indicate that additional information may be found under another heading.
- Concept thesaurus—A copy of the subject thesaurus to POLIS, listing the concept entries used in the index, is available on the Parliamentary website. A hard copy is available from the Head of the POLIS Unit, House of Commons Library, 1 Derby Gate, London, SW1A 2DG (020 7219 6456).

REFERENCES

- References in the indexes are to columns rather than pages.
- References to debates, but not questions, are accompanied by the date of the item.
- There are separate sequences in Hansard for the material taken on the floor of the House, Westminster Hall sittings, written statements and written questions:
  - References consisting of a number by itself indicate material taken on the floor of the House.
  - References ending in 'wh' indicate Westminster Hall sittings.
  - References ending in 'ws' indicate written statements.
  - References ending in 'w' indicate written questions.
- References under all headings except the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in one numerical sequence irrespective of whether the material is taken on the floor of the House, is discussed at a Westminster Hall sitting, is a written statement or is a written question.
- References under the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in numerical sequence under the following headings:
  - Chamber Debates (which includes interventions and points of order as well as significant contributions to debates);
